Held, that the authority given by s. 32 of the Railways Clauses Act, 1845, to take temporary possession of land for the purpose of forming roads does not include taking for the purpose of forming a railroad, and can only be so taken when the taking is necessary for making the line authorized by the co.'s special Act, and mere saving of expense in construction does not con-

An order was made under s. 4 of the Railway Companies Act, 1867, upon the application of a judgment creditor, appointing a receiver and manager of the undertaking of a ry. co., and directing the usual inquiries as to the debts of the co. and the rights and priorities of the creditors. At the date of this order there was pending an action by the contractor of the line against the co. for his remuneration. Subsequently an order was obtained by the contractor giving him liberty, notwithstanding the receivership order, to proceed with the action, and giving the co. liberty (according to the construction placed by the Court upon the order) to defend the action on behalf of all persons interested in the assets of the co. The action resulted in a substantial reduction of the contractor's claim, and each party was ordered to pay his own costs:—

Held, (1) that the costs of defending the action were not "proper outgoings in respect of the undertaking" within s. 4 of the Railway Companies Act, 1867; (2) that, notwithstanding the absence of any mention of costs in the Act, the Court had jurisdiction to order payment of the costs of proceedings thereunder; (3) that the costs of defending the action incurred since the date of the receivership order ought to be treated as incurred in prosecuting the inquiries directed by that order, and were incurred for the benefit of the debenture-holders and other creditors of the co., and ought to be paid out of the moneys in the hands of the receiver and manager in priority to their claims.

The M.-W. Ry. Co. and the M. Ry. Co. were each of them authorized to make a separate line in a certain district to a point of junction with an existing ry. belonging to the L. Co. In order to save expense the three cos. in 1861 entered into an agreement whereby the L. Co. was to make a joint line to be used by the other two, and a joint station to be used by the three cos. This arrangement was embodied and carried into effect by an Act of Parliament passed in 1862, which contained provisions for the payment of certain sums to the L. Co. by the two other cos., and for the recovery of those sums by action in case of default. The works were duly executed by the L. Co. The M. Co. from time to time made default in their payments; and the L. Co. in 1883 and at subsequent dates obtained various judgments against them, which were unsatisfied.

Held, by Collins J., that the effect of the Act was not necessarily in all cases to declare the increased rates void, but that all future increases of rates must be tried by the standard of reasonableness, depending on circumstances existing or apprehended before the increase was made, and therefore, in the case then before the Court, before the Act came into operation. RICKETT, SMITH & CO. v. By s. 4 of the Railway and Canal Traffic Act, 1894, whenever merchandise is received or delivered by a ry. co. at a siding not belonging to the co., and a dispute arises as to any allowance or rebate to be made from the rates charged in respect that the ry. co. does not provide station accommodation or perform terminal services, the Railway Commrs. shall have jurisdiction to hear and determine such dispute, and to determine what, if any, is a reasonable and just allowance or rebate.

At the hearing of an application for an allowance or rebate under this section on the ground that the rates charged by the ry. co., in respect of goods sent from the applicants' siding, included a charge for station accommodation at the siding:—

Held, by A. L. Smith and Rigby L.JJ., V. Williams L.J. not assenting, that the applicants, by merely proving that they were charged the rates, and that the siding did not belong to the ry. co., had not made out a prima facie case that the rates included a charge for station accommodation at the siding so as to throw upon the ry. co. the onus of proving that the rates did not include a charge for station accommodation. SALT UNION, LD. v. The master refused the application, and the co. appealed to a judge who made the order. In the meantime, and before the judge made the order, the co. issued their warrant to the sheriff. The Act of the plt. ry. provided that the deft. ry. should afford them reasonable facilities, at rates per mile not greater than the lowest rate charged by the deft. ry. for similar traffic, and also that if on application to the Railway Commrs. as arbitrators, they should decide that the deft. ry. had failed to give any of such facilities, the plt. ry. should be entitled to certain relief:—

Held, that even if the latter provision applied to a complaint that the deft. ry. had been charging the plt. ry. rates higher than they were entitled to charge, it did not confer on the commrs. an exclusive jurisdiction, nor oust the ordinary jurisdiction of the Court:—

Held, also, that s. 9 of the Railway and Canal Traffic Act, 1888, and s. 6 of the Act of 1854, did not in such a case confer exclusive jurisdiction on the commrs. BARRY RY. CO. v. TAFF VALE RY. CO. — — — C. A. [1895] 1 Ch. 128

Per Lord Watson: The power conferred by the Railway and Canal Traffic Act, 1888, s. 29, to fix group rates, "notwithstanding any provision in any general or special Act," cannot affect the rate chargeable, under express statutory provisions, for the conveyance of traffic to any terminus which is not included in the group.

Semble, that the effect of s. 27 of the Railways, &c., Act, 1888, is not to limit the Court in dealing with questions of alleged undue preference to the consideration whether the lower charge is necessary for the interests of the public. An association of traders in grain and flour at L. complained against the deft. co. for undue preference by charging lower rates from C. to B. in comparison with those charged from L. to B., a shorter distance. The lower rates had been fixed with reference to competition with other lines for traffic from C. to B.:—

The costs carried by the judgment stand on the same footing as the damages in this respect.

The priority given by the section is confined to working expenses and other proper outgoings without which it would be impossible to carry on the ry. It does not extend to claims for compensation or other claims, the non-payment of which, though probably leading to a decline in traffic, would not absolutely paralyze the undertaking.

60. — Charge for use of sidings—Arbitration—Jurisdiction—Railway and Canal Traffic Act, 1888 (51 & 52 Vict. c. 25)—Provisional Order.

By a Provisional Order, made by the Board of Trade under the Railway and Canal Traffic Act, 1888, and confirmed by statute, a ry. co. were empowered to charge, in addition to the tonnage rate, a reasonable sum for the service, if rendered to a trader at his request or for his convenience, of allowing him “the use or occupation of any accommodation before or after conveyance, beyond such period as shall be reasonably necessary for enabling the co. to deal with the merchandise as carriers thereof, or the consignor or consignee to give or take delivery thereof, and services rendered in connection with such use and occupation,” and “any difference arising under this section shall be determined by an arbitrator to be appointed by the Board of Trade at the instance of either party.”

The co. gave notice to the deft., a trader, that they would allow him four days, free of charge, within which to unload goods consigned to him arriving at their station, and that after the expiration of the four days they would charge him 6d. per day siding rent for each wagon allowed to remain unloaded. In an action by the co. to recover from the deft. siding rent at the rate of 6d. per day in respect of wagons which, after receiving that notice, he had allowed to remain unloaded after the four days, the deft. disputed his liability to pay the amount charged:—

Held, that the jurisdiction of the Court was ousted, because under s. 5 of the statute an arbitrator appointed by the Board of Trade is the only tribunal for the settlement of any differences arising under that section.

61. — Charge for use of sidings—Arbitration —Jurisdiction—Condition precedent—Difference before action brought.

A Railway Act confirming a Provisional Order, after empowering the ry. co. to charge a reasonable sum for certain services rendered to a trader, by way of addition to the tonnage rate, enacted that "any difference arising under this section shall be determined by an arbitrator to be appointed by the Board of Trade at the instance of either party." The co. having sued the respondents for services under this section, the respondents objected to the jurisdiction of the Court on the ground that the matter was one for the arbitrator to determine:—

Held, that as there had been no difference existing between the parties before action brought the arbitrator had not and the Court had jurisdiction.

Decision of C. A., [1898] 2 Q. B. 7, reversed and the decision of Div. Ct. restored upon the above ground.

62. — Charge for use of sidings—Reasonableness of charges—Time allowed for taking delivery —Jurisdiction of arbitrator—Provisional Order.

A Railway Act confirming a Provisional Order, after empowering the ry. co. to charge for certain services rendered to a trader a reasonable sum by way of addition to the tonnage rate, enacted that "any difference arising under this section shall be determined by an arbitrator to be appointed by the Board of Trade at the instance of either party." The services included
"The detention of trucks, or the use or occupation of any accommodation, before or after conveyance, beyond such period as shall be reasonably necessary for enabling the co. to deal with the merchandise as carriers thereof, or the consignor or consignee to give or take delivery thereof . . . And services rendered in connection with such use and occupation":—

Held, that the arbitrator had jurisdiction to determine not only the reasonableness of the sums charged for the accommodation, but all questions necessarily incidental thereto, and among them the reasonableness of the time allowed to the consignee for taking delivery of the merchandise.

Held, by the Railway and Canal Commn., that where a ry. co. close a station for passenger traffic, at which there is a substantial amount of such traffic, without providing an equivalent, they commit a breach of their obligation "to 1854, and the Commn. ordered the co. "to afford reasonable facilities for receiving and forwarding from the said ry."

Reversed by C. A., on the ground that the Commn. had no jurisdiction to make the order:
by Esher M.R. and Smith L.J., on the ground that the Act does not compel a ry. co. to maintain or desirous of using the ry.; and may impose upon the rest of the public any terms they think proper as the condition of admittance. And it follows that a ry. co. who have an hotel of their own within the limits of the station may qualify their permission to other hotel proprietors and their servants to have free access to the platform with the condition that on those occasions no hotel servant shall wear a distinctive badge or livery.

The co. then enlarged the opening and greatly increased the quantity of smoke, steam, and foul air coming to H.'s house:—

Held, that whether the alteration was made by the co. in the exercise of their rights as owners of the land, or under the powers given by s. 16 of the Railways Clauses Act, 1845, H. had no right to compensation, since, as the alteration would cause no damage to him if the line were not used, the damage arose from the working of the line and not from the construction.

68. — Accommodation works—Injunction to restrain building of bridge—Railways Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845 (8 & 9 Vict. c. 20), s. 21.

A landowner conveyed land to a ry. co. by a deed containing a recital to the effect that the rent-charge for which the property was sold should include compensation for severance and damage of all kinds to other lands of the landowner, and should also be "in full satisfaction for all accommodation and other works and things which might otherwise be required to be made or done under the said Acts, or any of them, or any other Act, for the benefit or accommodation of the adjoining property" of the landowner, "except as hereinafter mentioned." The exception consisted of the reservation to the landowner of liberty to make certain specified crossings at his own expense. About twelve years afterwards the landowner proposed to build at his own expense a bridge standing upon his own ground carrying two lines of rails, and crossing the ry. by a single span. The co. refusing to assent, the landowner applied to justices for their sanction under s. 71 of the Railways Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845. The co. brought an action for an injunction to restrain the building of the bridge and the application to the justices. Kekewich J. having refused an injunction, the justices sanctioned the proposed work:—

Held, on appeal, that according to the better construction the recital amounted to a bargain that no accommodation works should be made by either party, except those specifically mentioned in the conveyance, and that the landowner had contracted himself out of s. 71:

Held, further, that if the narrower construction were adopted, that "required to be done" meant "required to be done by the co.," and that the landowner was left at liberty to proceed under s. 71, he could only proceed under it if accommodation works made by the co. or directed by justices to be made by the co. were found afterwards to be insufficient according to the state of things at the time of the construction of the works, and that he could not under that section execute accommodation works which, though convenient in consequence of the altered state of the property, would not have been considered necessary or convenient in the state of things which existed when the works were executed:

Held, therefore, that the ry. co. were entitled to an injunction.

No appeal was brought against the totals. Some of the values were reduced, but the totals were not altered by the quarter sessions:—

Held, that the reduction did not alter the total gross and rateable values for each parish appearing in the valuation lists, and that the lists remained conclusive on each parish notwithstanding alteration in the individual assessments. REG. v. WOOLWICH UNION

8. — London county—Appeal against totals—Effect as to individual assessments—Time—Valuation (Metropolis) Act, 1869 (32 & 33 Vict. c. 67), s. 32.

Under s. 32 of the Metropolis Valuation and Assessment Act, 1869, there is no right of appeal against totals on the ground that individual assessments are too low.

Quære, whether the London County Council is a party aggrieved with the section so as to be entitled to appeal against totals.

The London County Council appealed to the London Quarter Sessions, exercising the former jurisdiction of the assessment sessions, from the valuation of the parish of A. as approved by the assessment committee of A., on the ground that the totals were too low, alleging that some 3000 hereditaments in A. were under-valued. The appeal was entered in due course, but owing to the glut of business could not be heard before Mar. 31. The assessment committee of A. then applied for prohibition to the justices against hearing the appeal:—

Held, by C. A. (reversing Div. Ct.), (1.) that the justices had authority to hear appeals entered in due time, after the time prescribed by the section has expired; (2.) but (affirm. Div. Ct.) that prohibition should go; (3.) the C. A. holding that this was an appeal from the valuation of hereditaments and not against totals, and lay to special sessions and not to quarter sessions direct.

Quære, whether the county council had any right of appeal. Affirm. by H. L. (E.), on the ground that it was not intended that any ratepayer, or even the county council, should maintain such an appeal. REG. v. LONDON COUNTY JUSTICES (No. 2)

Held, that the provisions of the local Act were not affected by the Agricultural Rates Act, 1896, so that the bd. must still divide the estimated amount between the county and the county boroughs in proportion to their respective rateable values, and not according to their respective assessable values as ascertained under the Agricultural Rates Act, 1896, and the regulations of the Loc. In assessing the value of a licensed public-house for the poor-rate the existence of the licence and the amount of the trade which can be and has actually been carried on there are elements to be considered in order to arrive at the rent at which the house may reasonably be expected to let. Evidence of these facts is always admissible, and may be necessary where the ordinary evidence of market value by comparison with other public-houses is not to be had. Evidence of profits made is also admissible, but an inquiry into profits should be avoided where possible, because it is regarded as inquisitorial and oppressive. These are matters not of law but of fact, practice and common sense, and it is very undesirable to multiply decisions about them.

By the London County Council (Tower Bridge Southern Approach) Act, 1895, provision was made for a charge to be made on lands which would be increased in value by the proposed improvement, and for an initial valuation of such lands. By s. 36, "In making such valuation the valuer shall separately distinguish and assess in each case the value of the land apart from that of any existing buildings thereon, and shall also value the land and buildings as a whole, and shall not take into consideration any increased value accruing or supposed to accrue to such land or buildings from or in consequence of the improvement, but shall only take into consideration the value independently of the improvement, and as if the improvement had not been contemplated. The valuer shall also separately value the interest of the owner of any such lands, and the interest of every lessee of any such lands, for a term having not less than twenty-one years unexpired at the date of the valuation (excluding from each such valuation any trade interest)."

In making an initial valuation of a "tied" public-house:—

Held, (1.) That, in valuing the land apart from the buildings thereon, the valuer might not take into consideration either the takings and payments of the public-house, nor the fact that it was "tied."

(2.) That, in valuing the land and buildings as a whole, evidence of the takings and payments should not be admitted even for the purpose of testing the evidence of witnesses, and that on this head the fact that the house was "tied" was immaterial.

(3.) That, in valuing the interests of the owners and lessees, the "tying" covenant must be taken into consideration. In re LONDON COUNTY COUNCIL AND CITY OF LONDON BREWERY CO.

Held, that as the ordinary test of the rental of similar properties could not be applied, and as the structural value alone would not embrace the profit-earning capacity of the premises, the evidence of receipts and expenditure was admissible and might be considered in conjunction with the structural value, and other circumstances of the case, in the determination of the gross estimated rental at which the premises should be assessed. MERSEY DOCKS AND HARBOUR BOARD v. The Royal College of Music was a society created and incorporated by royal charter, for the advancement of the art of music by means of a teaching and examining body, charged with the duty of providing musical instruction of the highest class, and of rewarding with academical degrees and certificates of proficiency, and otherwise, persons, whether educated or not at the college, who on examination might prove themselves worthy of such distinctions, for the promotion and supervision of musical instruction in schools and elsewhere conducive to the cultivation and dissemination of the art of music, and for the encouragement and promotion of the cultivation of music as an art. The college erected a building on land demised to them by a lease containing a stipulation that the building should be used for the purposes of their charter only, and it was so occupied and used by them. The charter prohibited any "dividend, gift, division, or bonus in money," to the members. The college paid out of its funds remuneration to certain members of its teaching staff who were also members of the society:—

Held (affirming Div. Ct., [1897] W. N. 175 (8); [1898] 1 Q. B. 304), that the college was a society instituted for purposes of the fine arts exclusively, within the meaning of the Scientific Societies Act, 1843, s. 1, and did not, in making the above-mentioned payments to members of the teaching staff, "make any dividend, gift, division, or bonus in money" to its members within the meaning of the section; and therefore that the society was entitled to exemption from parochial rates in respect of the building occupied by them as aforesaid. ROYAL COLLEGE OF MUSIC v. The necessary expenses of maintaining the park exceeded any sums which the council could derive from licences for the supply of refreshments therein or for grazing rights or otherwise:—

Held, that the county council were not rateable to the poor-rate in respect of the park, both because the park thus dedicated by statute to the use of the public had no rateable value, and also because the county council were not occupiers of the park for rating purposes.

To justify an alteration of the quinquennial valuation of a hereditament by a supplemental or provisional valuation list under the Valuation (Metropolis) Act, 1869, ss. 46, 47, those who seek to alter the assessment must not only prove that there has been an alteration in the annual value of the hereditament, but must also prove the nature and cause of that alteration and that the cause is one which directly affects the assessable value of that particular hereditament. It is not enough, for instance, to shew merely that since the quinquennial valuation there has been throughout the metropolis a general rise in the annual value of the class of property to which the hereditament in question belongs, and that the annual value of that hereditament has increased accordingly.

A ry. co. occupied land in Liverpool for a goods station. The premises consisted of a large covered shed, open on one side; and, on the other, with openings in the walls to admit trucks. Inside the shed were a number of ry. lines, comprising sidings, and running alongside platforms, for the purpose of loading and unloading ry. trucks with goods. All these lines were used for the conveyance of any goods sent by the public to or from the premises. The premises were some distance from the co.'s main line, and were connected therewith by a dock line belonging to the Mersey Docks and Harbour Bd., who under statutory powers permitted the company to use such line, and by a tramway laid across a street by the co. under a licence granted by the corporation under statutory powers. The co.'s premises were acquired and laid out under powers conferred upon them by a private Act:—

Held, that the land used for the lines, sidings, and platforms inside the co.'s premises was not land "used as a ry. made under the powers of an Act of Parliament for public conveyance" within the meaning of s. 36 of the Liverpool Corporation Act, 1893, and that the co. were not entitled, with regard to those premises, to the partial exemption in respect of rating contained in that section.

navigable river, the ry. co. provided a pontoon, which was used as a landing stage, and floated at high water, and settled on the mud at low water in front of a pier, which projected into the river, and was built upon piles driven into the foreshore or bed of the river, and was the property of the corporation of the borough. The pontoon was fastened by chains or moorings to the pier, and to protect the piles of the pier the ry. co. had driven a pile into the bed of the river. This pile was bolted to the pier, but was the property of the ry. co. The chain from the pontoon passed round this pile to reach the pile of the pier. On a case stated on appeal from the rate:—

Held, that the ry. co. was not in occupation of the property charged, and therefore was not liable to be rated. MANCHESTER, SHEFFIELD AND LINCOLNSHIRE RY. CO. v. KINGSTON-UPON-HULL GUARDIANS — Div. Ct. [1896] W. N. 71 (9)

Sewage works, including a pumping-station and works and outfall sewers, were erected by a county council, were owned and occupied as a necessary part of a sewage system, and while so used were incapable of returning a profit; but the council would have been willing to pay a rent for them as part of the sewage system equal to that at which they were rated:—

Held, (1) that the council were possible hypothetical tenants; (2) that the true test of beneficial ownership was not whether a profit could or could not be made, but whether the occupation was of value; (3) that the pumping-station and works and outfall sewers were assessed on the true principle.

The test of rateability is not whether the rights granted are corporeal or incorporeal, but whether there is occupation—which is a question of fact. The defts., a rural district council, in 1895 incurred a debt to an urban district council in respect of water supply for a contributory place within their district. The defts. refused to pay the debt, setting up a cross-claim against the urban district council for damages for breach of agreement to a greater amount. In respect of these conflicting claims a prolonged correspondence and negotiation took place between the two councils; but, ultimately, the urban district council brought an action for their debt in Mar., 1897, and on May 15, 1897, the amount actually payable to them was ascertained by judgment being recovered by them for a balance of their debt above the sum recovered by the defts. on their counter-claim. On Oct. 25 in the same year the urban district council applied for a mandamus commanding the defts. to issue their precept to the overseers of the contributory place for payment of the amount recovered:—

Held, that the delay in the commencement of the action being under the circumstances excusable, the mandamus ought to issue and that the rate which would thereupon have to be made would not be illegal as being retrospective.

2. — Discretion—Legal estate—Judicature Act, 1873 (36 & 37 Vict. c. 66), s. 25, sub-s. 8.

The Court has now a discretionary power to appoint a receiver whenever it appears to the Court to be just and convenient, and this power may be exercised where the plt. is seeking to recover land by a legal title. The discretion must be exercised with a view to all the circumstances of the case. Among other things, it is important to bear in mind the position of the tenants, who, if the deft. is not a person of undoubted solvency and remains in receipt of the rents, may be called upon to pay twice over if the plt. succeeds. The Court has also to consider the probability of the plt.'s succeeding, and the length of the deft.'s possession, and whether he has any prima facie title; and the Legislature must be taken to have contemplated the result that an application for a receiver may practically compel the deft. in an action of ejectment to disclose his title.

Where therefore the plt. sought to recover land by a legal title, and the title of the deft., who was a person of small means, appeared to be shadowy, and the plt.'s title appeared to be satisfactorily made out, subject to a point on the construction of a will which the Court considered very unlikely to be decided against him:—

Held, by North J. and the C. A., that a receiver ought to be appointed.

3. — Earnings—Future earnings of judgment debtor—Judicature Act, 1873 (36 & 37 Vict. c. 66), s. 25, sub-s. 8.

(A) The Court has no jurisdiction to enforce satisfaction of a judgment debt by appointing a receiver of the future earnings of the judgment debtor. HOLMES v. MILLAGE — C. A. revers.

4. — Earnings of business—Receipts of theatre—Elegit—Judicature Act, 1873 (36 & 37 Vict. c. 66), s. 25, sub-s. 8.

C. was a judgment creditor of a co. who were theatrical proprietors and held a lease of a theatre and had mortgaged the lease. A judgment for deft. was recovered against a theatre co. The theatre was subject to mortgage and the co. had no land except the theatre of which they were lessees, and they were using the theatre for their business:—

Held, (1) that a receiver by way of equitable execution could not be appointed of the earnings of a business, and that the receipts at the door of a theatre did not differ from the earnings of any other business, but (2), that as, if the co.'s interest in the theatre had been legal instead of equitable the judgment creditor could have taken it under an elegit, he was entitled to a receiver by way of equitable execution of the co.'s equitable interest; (3) the receiver would be entitled to possession of the theatre and to levy an occupation rent on the co., and thus obtain satisfaction of the judgment. CADOGAN v. LYRIC THEATRE, LD. — C. A. [1894] 3 Ch. 338

5. — Effect of order.

An order for the appointment of a receiver by way of equitable execution does not operate as a charge, but as an injunction to restrain the judgment debtor from himself receiving the interest subject to the order. Per Lindley L.J. TYRRELL v. PAINTON (No. 2) — C. A. [1895] 1 Q. B. 202

6. — Effect of order—Appointment of receiver for judgment creditor—Cesser of life interest.

The appointment of a receiver of rents of land under a judgment for debt is "execution by process of law" within the meaning of a cesser clause in a will. Per Kekewich J. BLACKMAN v. Fysh — C. A. [1892] 3 Ch. 209

See DISTRESS. 13.

7. — Effect of order—Foreign liquidation—Date from which receivership order takes effect.

Judgment creditors of a foreign firm obtained ex parte an order for a receiver of property belonging to the firm which they could not take in execution, because third parties had a lien on it. Before the lien was paid off and the receiver obtained the balance, the firm was declared in liquidation by a foreign tribunal:—

Held, that the judgment creditors, and not the liquidators, were entitled to the balance in the receiver's hands. LEVASSEUR v. MASON & BARRY, LD. — C. A. [1891] 2 Q. B. 73

8. — Effect of order—Property subject to lien.

Where an order for a receiver was obtained by judgment creditors on property of the debtor in the hands and subject to a lien in favour of third parties:—

Held, that the creditor's right to the property or its proceeds became complete at the date of the order, subject to the legal impediment of the lien, and that they were entitled in equity as against the liquidator of the judgment debtor to the proceeds of the sale of the property after satisfying the lien.

Judgment creditors failing to realize their judgment obtained ex parte an order for a receiver to receive a share of a residuary estate which had come to the debtor under a will after the judgment and gave notice of it to the executors of the will. The debtor became bankrupt, and the executors retained the money:—

Held, that the order did not make the creditors secured creditors, being merely a process not yet completed for obtaining money, and not having the nature or effect of a charging order. In re POTTS. Ex parte TAYLOR

10. — Ejectment action—Disputed title—Defendant in possession—Jurisdiction—Judicature Act, 1873 (36 & 37 Vict. c. 66), s. 25, sub-s. 8.

In a pending action to recover possession of land the Court has jurisdiction, under s. 25, sub-s. 8, of the Judicature Act, 1873, to appoint a receiver, although the title is legal and the deft. is in possession:—

Held, that a case must be made to justify such appointment, and an order for a receiver made by Kekewich J., [1896] W. N. 158 (6), was discharged as made on insufficient grounds. FOXWELL v. VAN GRUTTEN

14. — Jurisdiction—Appointment of receiver—Equitable execution.

Sect. 25 (8) of the Judicature Act, 1873, and Order LV, r. 15a, do not give jurisdiction to appoint a receiver by way of equitable execution where prior to the Act no Court had such jurisdiction. A receiver can only be appointed at the instance of a judgment creditor under circumstances in which prior to the Act the Court of Chancery could have made such an order. The Court therefore has no jurisdiction to appoint a receiver, because it would be more convenient than the usual modes of execution.

18. — Married woman—Jurisdiction—Judgment for costs "to be payable out of her separate property and not otherwise"—Judicature Act, 1873 (36 & 37 Vict. c. 66), s. 25.

An action by a married woman "suing in respect of her separate estate" was at the trial dismissed with costs, to be taxed and "payable out of her separate property, but not otherwise." The only separate property of the plt. consisted of a share coming to her under a will. Before the taxation of the defts.' costs had been completed by certificate, the trustees of the will being about to distribute their estate and pay the plt. her share, the defts. applied for the appointment of a receiver to receive the share and hold it as security for the costs when taxed:—

Held, by C. A., that on the principle of Kearns v. Leaf, (1864) 1 H. & M. 681, independently of s. 25 of the Judicature Act, 1873, there was jurisdiction to protect by injunction or the appointment of a receiver the fund out of which the costs were payable, and that a receiver ought to be appointed.

Held, that, although the Act allowed a

The right of a mortgagee to a receiver when his security is valid and his interest is in arrear is not affected by the fact that the mortgagor is a co. and is being wound up. A petition for winding-up a co. was pending when a receiver was appointed in an action by debenture-holders to enforce their security extending over all the

There is no inflexible rule that a trustee can only be appointed receiver of the trust estate on the terms of his having no remuneration, though the insertion of such a term is usual. Where a receiver appointed in an administration action of the rents and profits of real estate had received (i.) fire insurance moneys and misapplied them; (ii.) interest on Consols in court derived from the sale of real estate by A., and had not accounted for it; (iii.) balance of money paid to be expended on repairs, and not so expended it:—

In 1898 B.’s successors in title were evicted from part of the land by title paramount, and thereupon claimed an apportionment of the rent-charge; but A.’s successor in title contended that the rent-charge was payable in full out of the remainder of the land:—

Held, that the deed operated as a reservation of the rent-charge in the first instance to A. in fee; that the subsequent grant by B. to A. in fee of the same rent-charge was inoperative; and that the rent-charge must be apportioned according to the value of the land. *HARTLEY v. An augmentation had been granted under 29 Car. 2, c. 8, “An Act for confirming and perpetuating Augmentations made by Ecclesiastical Persons to small Vicarages and Curacies,” and charged upon land, and a portion of such land was held by the deft. as tenant for life in possession, having been acquired by the deft.’s predecessors under a contract, whereby they released the residue of the land from the burden of the charge, and indemnified the owners against it.

In an action to recover from the deft. the whole amount of the arrears of the charge:—

Held, that the deft. was liable for the whole amount, notwithstanding that the annual profits of his land fell short of the amount of the charge. PERTWEE v. TOWNSEND

4. — "Rent-charge"—Perpetual rent for easement—Charge on rates—Lands Clauses Act, 1845 (8 & 9 Vict. c. 18), ss. 10, 11.

A perpetual rent reserved as the consideration upon the sale of land, even though no power of distress is contained in the conveyance, is not improperly described as a rent-charge, as a power of distress is conferred by 4 Geo. 2, c. 28, s. 5. The Liverpool Corporation Waterworks Act, 1855, which incorporated the Lands Clauses Act, 1845, provided that the persons empowered by the latter Act to convey lands should have full power to convey at an annual rent any easement over certain lands:—

Held, that such a rent was properly described as a yearly "rent-charge payable in perpetuity by the corporation of L. in respect of a water-pipe rent created under the authority of the" Act of 1855, and secured by covenants of the corporation and by a statutory charge on the rates leviable by the corporation, and was charged on the rates by the operation of s. 11 of the Lands Clauses Act, 1845. In re LORD GERARD AND BEECHAM'S CONTRACT - C. A. [1894] 3 Ch. 295

5. — Sale—Rent-charge—Charge on corpus—Application to raise by sale—Effect of creating term.

A rent-charge, under a marriage settlement payable to the widow having fallen into arrear, and the rents being insufficient and not likely to be sufficient to pay the rent-charge, an action was brought by the assignee of the rent-charge against the surviving trustee of the term, and all persons who under the will had any interest in the property, for payment of the arrears, and an order for sale of the lands charged or a competent part thereof to raise the arrears.

Held, that the question was whether the charge on the inheritance was one which was intended to be enforced by sale. There were cases in which when a rent-charge was created, although there was no express power of sale, the Court gave its assistance by ordering a sale, e.g., Cupit v. Jackson, (1824) 13 Price, 721; 28 R. R. 735. The result of the cases was that, subject to the discretion of the Court, the owner of the rent-charge was entitled to an order for sale of the inheritance; but the Court would refuse to order a sale in certain cases—for instance, where it was advisable to wait for a time: Graves v. Hicks, (1841) 11 Sim. 551; or in the case instanced by North J. in In re Tucker, [1893] 2 Ch. 323, of the amount of arrears being small. That shewed the sort of discretion which the Court exercised where there was no term. But what was the effect of vesting a term as in the present case? In Hall v. Hurt, (1861) 2 J. & H. 76, where a term was vested in trustees, Wood V.-C. said: "Looking at the whole contents and scope of the will, my impression is that the freehold was not intended to be sold to raise the charge of 5000*l.*, but that the term was created for that purpose with the view of avoiding a sale of the fee." Although that was a decision on the construction of a will, it was a guide in the present case, and shewed that the Court ought to see whether the existence of the term was consistent with the right to have a sale ordered by a court of equity. Having regard to the term and to Hall v. Hurt, an order for sale must be refused. BLACKBURN v. HOPE-EDWARDES

2. — Agreement not to "carry on or be in anywise interested in" business—Business carried on by vendor's wife trading separately.

To constitute a breach of an agreement not "to carry on or be in anywise interested in" a business, the vendor must have an interest in such business, not necessarily in the profits, but such as touches him directly, and gives him some right to interfere in, or some means of gaining an advantage from, the business.

4. — General or partial restraint—Time or space, Limitation as to—Public policy.

Where the covenant is general, i.e. without qualification, it is bad, as being unreasonable and contrary to public policy. Where the covenant is partial—that is, qualified either as to time or space—then the question arises whether it is reasonable or not. Whether the covenant is unreasonable depends on whether the restraint is or is not greater than can possibly be required for the protection of the covenantee. Where the covenant is limited as to time, the burden lies on the covenantor of shewing that the restraint is unreasonable. BADISCHE ANILIN UND SODA FABRIK v. SCHOTT, SEGNER & Co.

5. — General restraint—Covenant not to exercise any business without consent of employer.

An employer cannot make his consent a condition precedent to liberty to enter upon other employment of any sort. Therefore, a covenant not to exercise any business without the consent of the employer, even if coupled with a proviso that it is not to be withheld except on engaging in a rival business, though reasonable in respect of distance and time, is void. PERLS v. SAALFELD

6. — Measurement of distance—Agreement in restraint of business—Solicitors—Within ten miles—Points of measurement.

By articles of clerkship of Aug., 1895, the deft. agreed not to practise as a solicitor at I. or "any place within ten miles thereof," for a period of five years from the termination of the articles, without the consent in writing of the plts. The deft. had recently opened an office at N. where he practised as a solicitor. N. being, as the plts. alleged, within the prescribed radius of ten miles, the plts. now moved for an injunction to restrain the deft. from practising as a solicitor contrary to the terms of his agreement. The evidence as to the exact distance of N. from I. was conflicting, but the case was argued on the assumption that if the measurements were taken from the deft.'s office to the plts.' office or to the centre of the town of I., the deft. was outside the prescribed radius, if from the deft.'s office to the edge of the borough of I., within the radius:—

Held, that within ten miles from I. meant within ten miles from the borough boundary of I., and that the deft. was therefore within the prescribed radius, and the plts. were entitled to an interim injunction. CATTLE v. THORPE

7. — Partial restraint—Coffee-house, Covenant not to keep—Sale of refreshments by grocer—Ancillary business.

Held, that by selling tea, coffee, and other light refreshments to his customers, he committed a breach of the covenant. FITZ v. ILES

Commented on by Kekewich J. Ashby v. Wilson, [1900] 1 Ch. 66.

8. — Partial restraint—Foreign carrier and express agent—Covenant severable—Covenant not to carry on similar business.

The deft., on entering the plt.'s service, who were foreign carriers and express agents at L., covenanted not to carry on any similar business within fifty miles of the plts.' places of business for twelve months after leaving their service:—

Held, (1) that the covenant was divisible; (2) that the covenant was reasonable so far as it related to the business actually carried on by the plts. during the employment of the deft., but unreasonable so far as it related to business carried on after the service ended.

The principles on which the Court decides whether a covenant in restraint of trade be reasonable, considered. In this case the Court granted an injunction to restrain the deft. from infringing so much of the covenant as the plts. might reasonably require for the protection of their business. DAVIES v. LOWEN Kekewich J. [1891] W. N. 86

9. — Partial restraint—Guns and ammunition—Covenant not restricted in space—Transfer of business—Public policy.

On the transfer of patents and business of the manufacture of guns and ammunition it was covenanted that the vendor should not for twenty-five years act directly or indirectly in the business of making guns and ammunition:—

Held, that the covenant, though restricted as to space, was valid, not being wider than was necessary for the purchasers, having regard to the nature of the business, nor injurious to public interests.

Decision of C. A., [1893] 1 Ch. 630, affirmed.

10. — Partial restraint—Hotel—Restaurant—Covenant not to carry on "similar business."

The plts. granted a lease to the A. Co., who covenanted not to carry on a business similar to that carried on by R., another tenant of the plts. R. was a hotel-keeper who carried on a restaurant on his licensed premises. The A. Co. had a restaurant where they sold tea, coffee, cold meat, &c., but no hot meat except meat pies, and this was not objected to. The A. Co. assigned their lease to G., who proceeded to sell hot meat and other things not sold by the A. Co. G. had no licence for sale of intoxicants, nor a victualler's licence; his establishment was of an inferior class to R.'s, and his prices much lower:—

Held, that the test of similarity was whether G.'s business was sufficiently like R.'s to compete with it, and that, although the business differed considerably, G.'s business was similar to R.'s, and that the plt. was entitled to an injunction with a proviso that it was not to prevent G. selling any articles sold by the A. Co. DREW v. GUY - - - C. A. [1894] 3 Ch. 25

12. — Partial restraint—Malt liquors or aerated waters—Covenant not to be concerned in selling, within a certain district—Covenant severable.

The deft., a traveller, employed by the plt., a brewer, agreed not to be concerned in selling malt liquors or aerated waters within a certain district for two years after the determination of his employment. The plt. never dealt in aerated waters, or required the deft. to obtain orders for them:—

Held, (1) that the stipulation as to aerated waters was severable; (2) that the deft. must be restrained from selling malt liquors wholesale or retail, but not from selling aerated waters. ROGERS v. MADDOCKS - C. A. [1892] 3 Ch. 346

Covenant not to carry on offensive business—Quia timet action.

The deft. was under covenant not to carry on certain specified businesses (which did not include a slaughter-house) "or any other noxious, noisome, or offensive trade or business." On an application to restrain him from using the premises as a slaughter-house:—

Held, (1) that the trade in question was not per se an offensive one; (2) the action was purely a quia timet one, and it could not be inferred that deft.'s business would necessarily be so carried on as to be offensive. RAPLEY v. SMART

Chitty J. [1894] W. N. 2

15. — Partial restraint—Soliciting customers—Agreement not to deal with old customers—Reasonableness—Intention of parties.

An agreement for the employment of a traveller provided that in the event of its termination he was not to "call upon or directly or indirectly solicit orders from, or in any way deal or transact business" with anyone who was a customer of the plt. while the agreement was in force:—

Held, that the agreement intended a restriction on transacting business with such customers of a kind similar to that carried on by the plt.; that this was not a greater restraint than was necessary for the protection of the employers, and therefore that the agreement was valid. MILLS v. DUNHAM - Chitty J. [1891] 1 Ch. 576

16. — Partial restraint—Soliciting customers—Covenant not to solicit customers—Assignment.

The plt. covenanted with the deft., an assistant, that the assistant should not solicit the deft.'s customers. The plt. subsequently sold his business and handed the deed to the purchaser, but did not specifically assign the benefit of the covenant:—

Held, that the benefit of the covenant was assigned with the business. BATHO v. TUNKS

Plts., hay and straw merchants, at Brentford, who carried on an extensive wholesale and retail trade, in the United Kingdom, France, Belgium, and Canada, and had permanent places of business in the United Kingdom and France, in October, 1897, agreed to employ the deft. as their clerk and foreman, in Calais or elsewhere, at a weekly wage of 35s. Deft. entered into a covenant that he would not, for the space of twelve months next after his leaving or being dismissed, carry on the business of a hay and straw merchant, or enter into the service of, or act as agent for, any person or persons carrying on the business of a hay and straw merchant, in the United Kingdom, or in France, or in the kingdom of Belgium, or Holland, or in the Dominion of Canada. The defendant continued in the plts.' employment until Nov., 1898, when he voluntarily left them, and entered into the employment of a rival hay and straw merchant in London:—

Held by C. A. (V. Williams L.J. dissenting), that the restraint imposed on the deft. was not unreasonable, at any rate so far as the United Kingdom was concerned; that the covenant was not void on any ground of public policy; and that the deft. must be restrained from violating his covenant:

Held, by V. Williams L.J., that the covenant was unreasonable and invalid, and ought not to be enforced by injunction.

Decision of Kekewich J. affirmed.

Per Lindley M.R. and Rigby L.J.: A covenant in restraint of trade, which is not wider than is reasonably required for the protection of the covenantee, will not be held void on any ground of public policy, unless some specific ground for so holding it void can be clearly established. But such cases are exceptional.

Per V. Williams L.J.: The old rule of law that all covenants in restraint of trade are prima facie contrary to public policy, and therefore void, has not been rescinded by recent decisions. UNDERWOOD & SON, LD. v. BARKER

18. — Severable—Agreement whether—Validity—Reasonableness.

By an agreement for the employment of the deft. by the plts. in their business of dairymen, the deft. agreed that he would not, during the continuance of his service, or at any time thereafter, serve or solicit, or in any way interfere with, any of the customers who should at any time be served by or then belonging to the plts. in the said business:—

Held, that the deft.'s agreement must be construed as referring only to the business of dairymen as then carried on by the plts. in a particular locality, and not to any other such business started by them elsewhere; and, by Lord Esher M.R. and Lopes L.J., that the agreement was severable and was good with regard to customers of the plts. who were such while the deft. was in their service:

By Rigby L.J., and semble, by Lord Esher M.R., the agreement was good, both with regard to the above-mentioned customers and with regard to customers who became such after the termination of the deft.'s service with the plts. DUBOWSKI & SONS v. GOLDSTEIN

19. — Severable covenant—Contract of hiring and service—Injunction.

By an agreement in writing H. agreed to serve the William Robinson Co. as confidential clerk for five years from Jan. 1, 1895, the co.

having the option to renew the engagement for five years more. The co. could dismiss H. at any time by three months' notice. H. agreed that during the term he would devote his whole time and attention to the business of the co., and that he would not during the engagement, without the consent of the co., engage as principal or servant in any business relating to goods of any description made or sold by the co., or in any other business whatever, upon pain of instant dismissal. H. covenanted that if he should be so dismissed he would not at any time within three years from his dismissal be engaged directly or indirectly as principal, agent, or servant in the business of dealer in wares of the description made by the co., within 150 miles of W. In 1898 H. left the service of the co. without leave and became traveller to another firm carrying on the same business. The co. applied for an injunction to restrain H. during the term of service from carrying on as principal, agent, servant, or otherwise, any business relating to goods of the description made by the co., and from soliciting orders for other firms.

North J. refused an injunction on the authority of Ehrman v. Bartholomew, [1898] 1 Ch. 671:—

Held, on appeal, that, during the continuance of the engagement, the agreement made by H. with the co. that he would not engage in any business relating to goods sold by the co. was valid though not restricted in point of space, and that it was severable from the agreement not to engage in any other business, and ought to be enforced by injunction. An injunction was therefore granted as asked, but limited to the first term of five years, the co. waiving their option to retain H. in their service for another five years, and the Court doubting whether the agreement ought to be enforced for that further term. *WILLIAM ROBINSON & CO. v. A mortgagee, B. his son, and C. the mortgagors, made the following arrangement. B. paid C. a sum down and covenanted to pay A. an annuity, and A. and C. conveyed the mortgaged hereditaments to B. freed from the mortgage:—

Held, that under s. 38 (2) (a) of the Act of 1881, as extended by s. 11 (1) of the Act of 1889, account stamp duty was, on the death of A., payable by B. on the amount of the mortgage debt. ATT.-GEN. v. WORRALL

5. — Voluntary settlement—Conversion of realty into personalty—Customs and Inland Revenue Act, 1881 (44 & 45 Vict. c. 12), s. 38, sub-s. 2 (c).

In 1885, by a voluntary settlement, A. gave real estate to trustees upon trust, at the request of A. or his wife or the survivor of them, or after the death of the survivor, at their own discretion, to sell the same, and hold the proceeds on certain trusts. A. died in 1887:—

Held, that the realty must be treated as converted into personalty by the settlement of 1885, and must therefore be included in an account and charged with duty under s. 38 of the Customs and Inland Revenue Act, 1881. ATT.-GEN. v. DODD Div. Ct. [1894] 2 Q. B. 150

By a marriage settlement H. transferred personal property to trustees upon trusts, the ultimate trust being for such persons as she might appoint. The earlier trusts having failed, she by deed appointed the property to her niece:—

Held, that the property so appointed was property “passing under” the marriage settlement, that the settlement and deed of appointment constituted a voluntary settlement whereby a life interest was reserved to the vendor within s. 38 of the Customs and Inland Revenue Act, 1881, as amended by s. 11 of the Act of 1889, and that duty was therefore payable. *ATT.-GEN. v. By a deed between G. and his partners, G. was empowered to dispose of his share in the business to any one of a limited class, such person to be certified by the senior partners as qualified. G. left his shares to his son who was duly certified:—

Held, that the deed was a voluntary settlement whereby a life interest was reserved in G., within s. 38 of the Customs and Inland Revenue Act, 1881, and s. 11 of the Act of 1889, and that duty was payable. ATT.-GEN. v. GOSLING

A. and B. bought stock, paying for it in equal shares, and agreed that the survivor should take the whole. B. died:—

Held, that the purchase of the stock was a voluntary transfer of the stock by each to himself and his co-purchaser, and that account stamp duty was payable under s. 38, sub-s. 1, of the Customs and Inland Revenue Act, 1881, on so much of the stock as was purchased with B.'s money. *ATT.-GEN. v. A widow, who was intending to sell a business to a co. for shares, married again, and by her marriage settlement it was agreed that of these shares a certain number should be allotted to her children by her former marriage, and the remainder to trustees to pay the income to her for life, and after her death to such of the children of her former marriage as she should appoint. The co. was duly registered and the shares allotted in accordance with the settlement. She died five months after the execution of the settlement:—

Held, that account duty was payable, since the children of the first marriage were without the consideration of the marriage, that the allotment to the children was a “voluntary disposition,” and since as to the other shares the children took under a trust “in favour of a volunteer.”

The respondent, the owner of a dog, having applied to the Commrs. of Inland Revenue for a certificate of exemption and been refused, declined to take out a licence, and was summoned before justices. The justices held that the commrs. ought to have granted a certificate of exemption, and that if the respondent had committed an offence it was in their opinion of so trifling a nature that they would exercise the powers given to them by s. 16 of the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879, and dismiss the information:—

Held, that the justices had no jurisdiction to review the decision of the commrs. as to granting or withholding a certificate of exemption, and that the offence of refusing to take out a dog licence was not an offence of a trifling nature to which s. 16 of the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879, would apply. *PHILLIPS v. The deft. was the owner of freehold estates in the county of L., and he was also the tenant for life of freehold estates in the county of D. The L. estates were charged with the payment of an annual jointure rent-charge. The person entitled to this rent-charge, by agreement with the deft. in 1883, released the L. estates, and the deft. in consideration granted to her an annuity charged on his life interest in the D. estates, and secured by policies of assurance on his life. On the death of the annuitant the Crown claimed estate duty from the deft. under s. 2 of the Finance Act, 1894:—

Held, that the Crown was entitled to the duty, since the transaction in 1883 was not the grant of an annuity for full consideration in money or money's worth paid to the grantor for his own use or benefit within the meaning of s. 3 of the Finance Act, 1894, but merely a transfer of the security for the jointure rent-charge from the L. estates to the D. estates. ATT.-GEN. v. A testatrix by her will bequeathed an annuity to A., and directed that a portion of her estate should be set apart to provide for the payment of the annuity, and subject thereto she bequeathed the said portion of her estate to B.:—

Held, that the property so set apart to provide for the payment of the annuity was property “standing limited to or in trust for persons by way of succession” within the meaning of s. 2, sub-s. 1, of the Settled Land Act, 1882, and that settlement estate duty was consequently payable in respect of it.

A testator bequeathed his residuary estate to trustees on trust to pay the income to his wife for life, and after her death to pay an annuity to each of his four daughters for life, and after the death of each of his daughters to raise certain named sums in trust for the children of such daughter who should attain the age of twenty-one years, or being females, should marry under that age:—

Held, that the direction to raise the portions amounted to a limitation in favour of the testator's grandchildren to take effect upon the death of his daughters, that there was therefore a succession in respect of such portions, and that settlement estate duty was payable upon them. ATT.-GEN. v. A father upon the marriage of his son covenanted with the trustees of the son's settlement that his executors or administrators should, within six months after his death, pay to the trustees the sum of 25,000*l.*, to be held by them upon the trusts of the settlement. The father by his will devised and bequeathed to his trustees (who were also his executors) the residue of his real and personal estate, in trust for sale and conversion, and out of the proceeds to pay his funeral and testamentary expenses, debts and legacies, and to hold the residue upon certain trusts. After the father's death his executors paid the estate duty upon the value of his estate after deducting his funeral and testamentary expenses and his debts, other than the debt of 25,000*l.*:—

Held, that the estate duty in respect of the 25,000*l.* must, as between the executors and the trustees of the settlement, be borne by the former. In re GRAY. GRAY v. GRAY

A donee of a power over settled property appointed 35,000*l.* to one and the residue otherwise:—

Held, that the 35,000*l.* was charged on the property within the meaning of s. 14, sub-s. 1, of the Finance Act, 1894, and that estate duty was to be borne pari passu by the specific and residuary appointees. In re COUNTESS OF ORFORD. CARTWRIGHT v. DUC DEL BALZO

The testatrix gave real and personal property to trustees upon trust to pay the income therefrom to her sister during her life, and subject thereto upon such trusts and for such persons as she (the sister) should by will appoint; and she gave the residue of her real and personal estate to trustees upon trust, subject to payment of an annuity, for her sister.

All the death duties had been paid out of the general residue, and the question was now raised by originating summons whether the property included in the first gift ought not to contribute a rateable proportion of these duties:—

Held, that the language of s. 9, sub-s. 1, of the Finance Act, 1894, must be construed with reference to the law as it stood at that time, and not in accordance with the provisions of the Land Transfer Act, 1897. Therefore, the real estate did not "pass to the executor," and it was charged with a rateable part of the estate duty. The personal property did pass to the executor, and the estate duty on it must, in accordance with the decision in In re Webber, Gribble v. Webber, [1896] 1 Ch. 914, be paid out of the general residue. That case was still an authority in respect of estate duty, although the law as to settlement estate duty had been altered by the Finance Act, 1896, s. 19, sub-s. 1, which provided that settlement estate duty must be paid out of the settled property. In this case the property included in the first gift was settled property within s. 5, sub-s. 1, of the Act of 1894. No doubt the sister was not a "person not competent to dispose of the property"; but those words did not apply to property "settled by the will of the deceased." This was property settled by the will of the deceased, and it must bear the settlement estate duty. In re PALMER. PALMER v. ROSE INNES — — Buckley J. [1900] W. N. 9

By a post-nuptial settlement personal property was settled in the events that happened upon trust for the settlor for life, and after his death upon trust that the trustees should appropriate funds of a specified value to be held upon the trusts thereafter declared for the benefit of two of the settlor's daughters and their issue, and should stand possessed of the residue of the trust premises in trust for the settlor, his executors, administrators, and assigns:—

Held, that the appropriated funds were not voluntary incumbrances within s. 7, sub-s. 1, of the Finance Act, 1894, upon property passing to the executor as such of the deceased (in which case the estate duty on the entire funds would have had to be borne exclusively by the settlor's residuary legatee), but that the provisions contained in the settlement with regard to those funds amounted to substantive settlements thereof, and that the estate duty was payable rateably out of the appropriated funds and the residue according to their respective values. *In re MEYRICK. The testator by his will gave certain legacies and annuities, some of which were contingent upon the legatees and annuitants attaining the age of twenty-one. He directed that every legacy and annuity should be primarily payable out of his personality, and charged his real estate in aid, but not in exoneration, of his personality with the same, if the personality should be insufficient. He devised his real estate to the use of his eldest son for life with remainders over. He declared that if his residuary personality should be insufficient for payment of his funeral and testamentary expenses, debts, legacies, and annuities, the trustees might raise the deficiency by mortgage of the real estate, but so that the annuities should be paid out of rents and profits, and not by raising a capital sum to provide for the same; and he charged the residuary personalty with the payment of the legacies and annuities, and directed that the ultimate residue of the personalty should be invested and should follow the limitations of the real estate. After the testator's death the executors had paid settlement estate duty in respect of the contingent legacies and annuities. There was a probability that the personal estate would be insufficient to pay the funeral and testamentary expenses, legacies, and annuities. The question having arisen as to how the settlement estate duty ought to be borne as between the residuary estate and the legatees and annuitants:—

Held, (1) that the contingent legacies must be treated as settled, and, having regard to the decision in In re Maryon-Wilson, [1900] 1 Ch. 565, the duty must be borne by the legatees; and (2.) as regarded the annuities, that the decision in Attorney-General v. Owen, [1899] 2 Q. B. 253, applied to the personalty, and consequently the annuitants must bear their proper proportion of the settlement estate duty in accordance with the rule laid down in In re Parker-Jervis, [1898] 2 Ch. 643. *In re DUKE OF ST. Property which is contingently settled is not the less liable to settlement estate duty under s. 5 of the Finance Act, 1894, because the contingency may never arise.

A testator left his residuary estate in trust for all his children who should attain the age of twenty-one years, or being daughters should marry under that age, in equal shares, and directed the trustees to retain the share of each daughter and pay the income thereof to such daughter for her life, and after her death to hold it in trust for her children. The testator died leaving two sons and one daughter surviving him, all being under the age of twenty-one years and unmarried:—

Held, that as there was a chance of the sons dying under the age of twenty-one, and of their shares becoming subject to the trusts of the daughter's settlement, settlement estate duty was payable on the whole of the testator's residuary estate. ATT.-GEN. v. FAIRLEY

By the Finance Act, 1894, s. 21, sub-s. 1, "estate duty shall not be payable on the death of a deceased person in respect of personal property settled by a will or disposition made by a person dying before the commencement of this part of this Act, in respect of which property" probate duty (amongst other specified duties) "has been paid or is payable, unless in either case the deceased was at the time of his death, or at any time since the will or disposition took effect had been, competent to dispose of the property." Under a marriage settlement personal property belonging to the wife became vested in trustees upon trust for the wife for life, and after her death, if her husband should survive her, upon trust for the husband for life, and, after the death of the survivor of them, upon trust for such person or persons as the wife should by deed or will appoint. The wife died in the lifetime of her husband, before the commencement of the Finance Act, 1894, having by her will appointed the property in favour of certain beneficiaries, and probate duty was thereupon paid by her executors in respect of the value of the property so appointed after deducting the value of the husband's life interest. The husband died after the commencement of the Act:—

Held (affirming the decision of Div. Ct., [1897] 1 Q. B. 722), that the settlement and will together constituted a "disposition" by which the property was settled within the meaning of s. 21, sub-s. 1, and, therefore, that estate duty was not payable on the husband's death in respect of the value upon which probate duty had been paid.

By Rigby L.J.: Semble, estate duty was not payable on the amount of the value of the husband's life interest, probate duty having been paid on the whole of the property. ATT.-GEN. v. DODINGTON

Sect. 9, sub-s. 6, enacts,—“A person having a limited interest in any property who pays the estate duty in respect of that property shall be entitled to the like charge as if the estate duty in respect of that property had been raised by means of a mortgage to him.”

Sect. 11 of the Entail Amendment Act, 1868, gives power to an heir of entail in possession to grant, with the authority of the Court, bonds and dispositions in security for the amount of any debts “which might lawfully be made chargeable by adjudication or otherwise upon the fee of the estate.”

An heir of entail who had obtained certificates of payment of estate duty and of settlement estate duty presented a petition for authority under s. 11 of the Entail Amendment Act, 1868, to grant a bond and disposition in security over the entailed estate for the amount so paid :—

Held, that he was entitled to authority to charge the fee of the estate by way of bond and disposition in security for the duty paid, but not for expenses incurred in settling the amount, nor for the expenses of the petition. J. C. LAURIE, (1898) 25 Rettie, 636.

A testatrix domiciled in Ireland died possessed of mortgages on freehold property situate in the Colony of Victoria and in Switzerland.

The Finance Act, 1894, s. 1, imposes on the property, real or personal, which passes on the death of a person dying after the commencement of the Act, a duty called “Estate Duty.” Sect. 2 (2) enacts that “property passing on the death of the deceased, when situate out of the United Kingdom, shall be included only if, under the law in force before the passing of this Act, legacy or succession duty is payable in respect thereof, or would be so payable but for the relationship of the person to whom it passes.”

The Commrs. of Inland Revenue having decided that estate duty was payable in respect of these mortgages, the executors presented a petition under the Finance Act, 1894, to have the question determined by the Court. It was contended on behalf of the executors that estate duty was not payable on two grounds: first, that the mortgages were immovable property, situate out of the United Kingdom, and therefore not liable to legacy duty before the passing of the Finance Act, 1894; and, secondly, that the mortgages were “estates and effects” out of Ireland, and therefore exempt from duty under 56 Geo. 3, c. 56, s. 115, which was still in force.

It was contended on behalf of the commrs., first, that the mortgages were personal or movable property, and therefore liable to legacy duty; and, secondly, that 56 Geo. 3, c. 56, s. 115, was impliedly repealed by 5 & 6 Vict. c. 82 :—

Held, that the contention of the commrs. on both points was correct, and that estate duty was payable. LAWSON v. INLAND REVENUE COMMRS., [1896] 2 Ir. 418 Ex. Div. (Ir.) [1896] W. N. 145

In 1892 a foreigner domiciled in Austria gave, by a deed in the English language and form to an English co., constituted under the Companies Acts, and having its registered office in London, certain stocks, shares, and securities to a large amount upon the terms and conditions that the co. would permit the donor to receive the income thereof during his life, and, after his death, would apply the same, and any investment substituted for them under the powers of the deed, for the benefit of Russian Jews generally, and principally for the promotion of the emigration of Russian Jews from Europe, and of their settlement in various countries outside Europe. The co. had been formed to carry out the same objects, and at the time of the execution of the deed the various securities comprised therein were transferred to the co. by the donor. The whole of the co.’s business was, under the articles of association, transacted by a council which sat at the principal office of the co. in Paris. The ordinary and extraordinary general meetings of the co. were held at their registered office in London, but formal business only was transacted there. In 1896 the donor, who was still domiciled in Austria, died. At that time the principal part of the securities subject to the deed were foreign securities situate abroad, and the documents of title thereto were abroad, a small proportion only of the property subject to the deed being in England.

Held (affirming the judgment of a Div. Ct. [1900] 2 Q. B. 556), that there was on the death of the donor a succession by the co. within the meaning of s. 2 of the Succession Duty Act, 1853, and that therefore succession duty under that Act, and, consequently, estate duty under the Finance Act, 1894, were payable upon the principal value of all the property which was subject to the trusts of the deed of 1892 at the donor’s death. *ATT.-GEN. v. The donor released the rent-charge and power of revocation by deed in Sept. 1894 and died in Oct. 1894:—

Held, that benefits having been reserved to the donor, estate duty was payable upon all the property comprised in the deed of 1885 as property passing upon the death of the donor within the meaning of the Finance Act, 1894, ss. 1, 2, sub-s. 1 (c).

The husband died after the Finance Act, 1894, came into operation, leaving his wife surviving:—

Held (reversing the decision of Div. She then directed certain legacies to be paid out of these funds free of duty:—

Held, that the special direction in the will for payment of duties payable by law out of the testatrix's estate referred to duties which by law were payable out of the general residuary estate of the testatrix, and not to duties which by law were made payable out of specific property, and that therefore the direction did not amount to such an express provision as was required by s. 19 of the Finance Act, 1896, in order to make the settlement estate duty payable otherwise than out of the settled legacy:—

Held, accordingly, that the settlement estate duty payable in respect of the settled legacy must be paid thereout. In re LEWIS. LEWIS v. SMITH — Kekewich J. [1900] W. N. 32; [1900] 2 Ch. 176

By his will the father devised lands to trustees for the term of 2000 years, upon trust to raise thereout and to pay to the trustees of the settlement the 25,000*l.*, with interest from his death.

On the death of the testator the Crown claimed, under s. 5 of the Finance Act, 1894, the payment of settlement estate duty in respect of the 25,000*l.*—

Held, that, independently of the words "without any deduction" in the covenant, the settlement estate duty must have been paid out of the 25,000*l.* and not out of the testator's residuary estate.

But, held, that, by reason of those words, the settlement estate duty must be paid out of the residuary estate, or that if the 25,000*l.* was raised by the trustees of the term they must raise also the settlement estate duty in respect of the 25,000*l.*

Settled property—Finance Act, 1894 (57 & 58 Vict. c. 30), ss. 1, 2, 3.

By s. 1 of the Finance Act, 1894, estate duty is granted upon all property which "passes on the death" of a person dying after the commencement of the Act. By s. 2, "property passing on the death" shall be deemed to include (sub-s. 1 (d)) any annuity or other interest purchased or provided by the deceased to the extent of the beneficial interest accruing or arising by survivorship or otherwise on the death. Sect. 3 exempts from estate duty property passing on the death of the deceased by reason only of a bona fide purchase from the person under whose disposition the property passes, where such purchase was made for full consideration in money or money's worth paid to the vendor for his own use or benefit.

A., shortly before his marriage, effected a policy of insurance on his own life for a sum payable on his own death to his intended wife, and assigned the policy to the trustees of a settlement made in consideration of the marriage. By that settlement the principal moneys to be received under the policy were to be held by the trustees in trust for the wife for life and upon other trusts, and A. covenanted to keep up the policy and pay the premiums thereon during his life. He duly performed his covenant, and died after the commencement of the Act, leaving his wife surviving:—

Held, that the sum payable under the policy on A.'s death was an "interest purchased or provided by the deceased" within the meaning of s. 2, sub-s. 1 (d); that the exemption from duty contained in s. 3 did not apply; and, therefore, that on A.'s death estate duty was payable in respect of that sum. Under a settlement made by a father and son on the marriage of the latter, an estate was limited to certain uses in strict settlement, including a limitation of a jointure of 1000*l.* a year to the wife, A., in case she survived both father and son, which event happened, such jointure to be paid to her "without any deduction whatsoever except in respect of income tax." The father, by a subsequent settlement made on his second marriage, appointed, under a power in the former settlement, a jointure of 500*l.* a year to his wife, B., if she survived him, which event happened, and charged the same upon the settled estate, but there were no words of exemption as in the case of the 1000*l.* jointure.

Upon the father's death both jointures became payable.

Held, as to A.'s jointure, that she was not herself liable to pay the estate duty upon it, or any interest on such duty, since the words "without any deduction, &c." constituted a contract of exemption and also amounted to an "express provision to the contrary" within s. 14, sub-s. 1, of the Finance Act, 1894:

Held, as to B.'s jointure, that she must be treated as tenant for life of a sum equivalent to the capitalized value of the jointure, to be ascertained at the same number of years' purchase as the estate as a whole was capitalized for the purpose of duty; and that she must be charged with estate duty on that sum, but was entitled to throw the duty charged against her upon the corpus of the estate, on the terms of her paying interest to the tenant for life or in tail or in fee in possession at the rate actually paid to the Commrs. of Inland Revenue until payment of the duty, and thereafter at the rate at which the duty could be raised by mortgage of the estate.

Under the Finance Act, 1894, the estate duty on the estate passing on a debt is chargeable on the estate as a whole, without regard to tenancies for life or other particular interests, the scheme of the Act being that the duty shall be levied on the inheritance and that the inheritance shall bear it. In re PARKER-JERVIS. Father and son, tenant for life and tenant in tail respectively, executed a disentailing deed by which they granted the estates to a trustee to hold freed from the estate tail to such uses as they should jointly appoint. In exercise of that power father and son mortgaged the estates in fee simple to a co. as security for a loan, part of which was advanced for the benefit of the father and part for the benefit of the son. With part of the loan prior incumbrances on the father's life estate were paid off, and the co. took an assignment of the debts and all the assignors' rights and powers of recovery as further security for the loan. Father and son then executed a deed of resettlement by which the estates were charged with an annuity to the son payable during the father's life, and subject thereto were declared to be held in trust for the father for life and after his death for the son for life with remainders over. Upon the father's death in 1895 the Crown claimed from the son under the Finance Act, 1894, estate duty upon the gross value of the estates without allowing any deduction in respect either of the mortgage to the co. or of the annuity which ceased with the father's life:—

Held, reversing on this point the decision of the C. A. (In re Earl Cowley's Estate, [1898] 1 Q. B. 355), that the case fell under s. 1 of the Finance Act, 1894, that the settled property which passed to the son on the father's death was only the equity of redemption, and that estate duty was therefore payable only on the equity of redemption.

Held also, affirming the decision of the C. A. on this point, that no deduction was allowable in respect of the annuity.

By the Wills Act, 1837, s. 33, "Where any person, being a child . . . of the testator, to whom any real . . . estate shall be devised . . . for any estate or interest not determinable at or before the death of such person, shall die in the lifetime of the testator, leaving issue, and any such issue of such person shall be living at the time of the death of the testator, such devise . . . shall not lapse, but shall take effect as if the death of such person had happened immediately after the death of the testator, unless a contrary intention shall appear by the will."

A father devised real property to his son, who died in the lifetime of the father, leaving a daughter, who was living at the death of the father. The son devised his residuary estate to trustees. This devise included the property devised by the father's will, and took effect by virtue of the Wills Act, s. 33. On the death of the father estate duty was paid on all the property which passed on his death, including that devised to his son. The Commrs. of Inland Revenue claimed estate duty on the property devised by the son to the trustees.

On appeal by the trustees, under the Finance Act, 1894, s. 10, to determine the duty payable:—

Held, by Darling J., that the property was property of which the son was, at the time of his death, competent to dispose, and therefore was property passing on the death of the son, within the meaning of the Finance Act, 1894, s. 2, sub-s. 1 (a):

Held, by Channell J., that, as the Wills Act gave the property to the devisees of the son as if the son had survived the father, it gave it subject to the same duties as if the son had survived the father:

Held, by the Court, that estate duty was payable by the trustees. In re SCOTT

By ss. 1 and 2 of the Finance Act, 1894, estate duty is imposed upon property, real or personal, settled or not settled, "which passes on the death" of every person dying after the commencement of the Act. By s. 5, sub-s. 3, where the interest of any person under a settlement fails before it becomes an estate in possession, "and subsequent limitations under the settlement continue to subsist," the property shall not be deemed to pass on his death.

By a marriage settlement personal property belonging to the wife was settled upon trusts to pay the income to her during the joint lives of her husband and herself, and after the death of such one of them as should first die, to pay the income to the survivor during his or her life, and if the wife should survive her husband, and there should be no children of the marriage, then in trust for her absolutely. By marriage settlement dated Oct. 7, 1861, certain trust funds were settled upon trust for A., the husband, for life, with remainder to B., the wife, for life, and after the death of the survivor, then, in the event, which happened, of there being no children of the marriage, upon trust as to the capital of the funds for such person or persons as the wife should appoint. The wife died on March 14, 1897, and on her death the Inland Revenue claimed, and were paid, estate duty on the value of her reversionary interest in the capital of the trust funds. The husband died on April 14, 1897, and the Inland Revenue claimed duty on the entire funds comprised in the settlement:—

Held (affirming the decision of the Q. B. D.), that the duty paid on the death of the wife was in respect of "settled property" within the meaning of s. 5, sub-s. 2, of the Finance Act, 1894, and that credit for it should be given as regards the duty, which would otherwise have been payable on the death of the husband.

Held, also, by FitzGibbon, Walker, and Holmes L.J.J., that the principle, which should govern this case, having been already decided by the English C. A. in Att.-Gen. v. Dodington, [1897] 2 Q. without issue—Settlement estate duty—Finance Act, 1894 (57 & 58 Vict. c. 30), ss. 5 (1) and 22 (1) (h) (i).

By his trust disposition and settlement a testator directed his trustees to hold and apply certain bequests for behoof of his three daughters in life-rent, and for their alimentary uses alternately and their respective issue in fee, said fee to be payable to such issue in such shares, at such times, and subject to such conditions as to life-rent and otherwise as the daughters should appoint, and failing appointment equally. In the event of any daughter dying without issue it was provided that the share life-rented by her should accrete to the surviving daughters and their issue, and the issue of any predeceasing daughter equally, but that, notwithstanding this provision, any daughter dying without issue should have power to test upon the share life-rented by her for such purposes as she should think fit.

In an action by the Crown against the trustees for an account of the property settled by the deed, and for payment of settlement estate duty, the defenders contended that the share of each daughter was only settled in the event of her leaving issue, as otherwise she had an absolute power of disposing of the fee by will, and her share would at her death be liable to estate duty:—

Held (affirming judgment of Lord Stormonth-Darling), that the bequests in favour of the daughters were "settled property" in the sense of the Finance Act, 1894, and as such liable to settlement estate duty under s. 5 of that Act. *INLAND REVENUE v. An insurance co. who had been assessed to inhabited house duty in respect of their offices appealed on the ground that they were within the exemption mentioned in s. 13 of the Customs and Inland Revenue Act, 1878. The case upon appeal set forth that the only persons who occupied the premises at night were two messengers whose duties were to lock up the premises at night and open them in the morning, and in the daytime to go on errands, attend in the lobby, and perform various miscellaneous duties of a similar nature. The case further stated that the co. "rested their appeal on the fact that the messengers were servants absolutely necessary for their business, not merely for the protection of their premises."

Held, (1) that the words "for the protection thereof" in s. 13, sub-s. 2, of the Act of 1878 applied to "servant" as well as to "other person"; (2) that this construction was not modified by s. 24 of the Act of 1881; and (3) that the co. were not within the exemption in respect that the messengers did not reside in the premises solely for the protection thereof.

Question, whether the exemption would apply to the case of premises in which more than one person resided, such persons being necessary for the protection of the premises, and residing in the premises solely for the protection thereof. *FORBES v. The respondents, being lessees of a house, divided it into two tenements, one of which they occupied solely for the purposes of their trade, and the other they sub-let to a person who used it as his residence. Having been assessed to inhabited house duty for the whole house, they claimed exemption in respect of the tenement occupied by themselves:—

A lunatic asylum, originally founded by charitable subscription, and which was governed gratuitously, claimed exemption from payment of inhabited house duty under the above rule. The asylum was possessed of two mortifications, out of which was paid in part the maintenance of two indigent lunatics. The remaining inmates were private patients who paid for their own maintenance, and pauper lunatics, in respect of whom payment was made by the District Lunacy Board of a sum estimated to cover the cost of their maintenance and clothing. The accounts of the asylum shewed that for some years it had maintained itself, and that a profit had been made out of the board paid by both classes of inmates:—

—57 Geo. 3, c. 25, s. 1—5 Geo. 4, c. 44, s. 4—41 Vict. c. 15, s. 3 (2).

Held, following Scottish Widows' Fund Society v. Solicitor of Inland Revenue, (1880) 7 R. 491, and Glasgow and South Western Ry. Co. v. Banks, (1880) 7 R. 1161, that the clauses in the above statutes exempting from payment of inhabited house duty a house or part of a house assessed therefor, on proof that it is occupied as trade or business premises, do not apply to an entire house occupied by the owner in part as a dwelling-house and in part as business premises.

Question, whether these cases were rightly decided. INLAND REVENUE v. GRANT, (1898) 25 R. 1040 Ct. of Sess. (Sc.) [1899] W. N. 195

This decision was reversed by H. L. (Sc.) [1900] A. C. 383. See next Case.

60. — Public-house—Exemption in favour of buildings occupied for trade only—48 Geo. 3, c. 55, Sched. B, r. 3.—57 Geo. 3, c. 25, s. 1—5 Geo. 4, c. 44, s. 4—Customs and Inland Revenue Act, 1878 (41 & 42 Vict. c. 15), s. 13, sub-s. 2.

By sub-s. 2 of s. 13 of the Customs and Inland Revenue Act, 1878, "Every house or tenement which is occupied solely for the purposes of any trade or business or of any profession or calling by which the occupier seeks a livelihood or profit shall be exempted from the duties (on inhabited houses) by the said commrs. upon proof of the facts to their satisfaction."

The appellant was the owner of a building of two storeys under one roof situate in Portobello, Edinburgh. The ground-floor was occupied by the appellant to carry on the trade of a licensed retailer of spirits, and was numbered 49, Bath Street. The upper storey was occupied by the appellant as his dwelling-house, and was numbered 47, Bath Street. Access to the dwelling-house was by a door opening from the public street and by a staircase from that door which led up to the upper storey. Access to the public-house was by a different door also opening from the street. There was no internal communication between the dwelling-house upon the upper storey and the public-house on the ground floor:—

Held, reversing the decision of the Ct. of Sess., Langston v. Grant, (1898) 25 R. 1040, that the public-house was exempt from inhabited house duty, and that the duty ought to be confined to the value of that portion of the building used as a dwelling-house. GRANT v. LANGSTON

Rule 6 of Sched. B of the Act 48 Geo. 3, c. 55, enacts, with regard to the duties on inhabited dwelling-houses, that when a house is let in parts to two or more persons, the house shall be subject to the same duty as if let to one person, and the owner shall be deemed the occupier, and shall be charged with the duty.

The schedule of the Act 14 & 15 Vict. c. 36, enacts,—“For every inhabited dwelling-house, which, with” offices and gardens, “is or shall be worth the rent of 20*l.* or upwards, by the year . . . . When any such dwelling-house shall be occupied by any person duly licensed by the laws in force to sell therein by retail, beer, ale, wine, or other liquors . . . . there shall be charged for every 20*s.* of such annual value of any such dwelling-house, the sum of 6*d.*; and where any such dwelling-house shall not be occupied and used for any such purpose, and in manner aforesaid, there shall be charged for every 20*s.* of such annual value thereof the sum of 9*d.*”

Sect. 31 of the Act 34 & 35 Vict. c. 103, enacts that duty at the lower rate shall be charged for every inhabited dwelling-house “which shall be occupied by any person who shall carry on in the said dwelling-house the business of a hotel-keeper, although not licensed to sell therein by retail” excisable liquors.

The owner of a house let part of it to a hotel-keeper, who was licensed to retail liquors therein, and the remainder to a club, which had no licence. The rent was above 60*l.*

Held, that duty at the rate of 9*d.* per 1*l.* was chargeable on the owner of the house, in respect that he was to be deemed the occupier in the sense of the statutes, and was not licensed to sell liquors therein. M'DOUGALL v. CAMPBELL, (1899) 2 Fraser, 244 Ct. of Sess. (Sc.) [1900] W. N. 217

62. — School buildings—Head and assistant masters' houses—Occupier—48 Geo. 3, c. 55, Sched. B—House Duty Act, 1851 (14 & 15 Vict. c. 36).

The governing body of a public school was assessed to inhabited house duty, as occupier, in respect of the houses of the head master and assistant masters, and the chapel and other school buildings, which were built for the use of the school, and were used by all the boys at the school, whether boarders in the masters' houses or not. The head master paid no rent, but was bound by the terms of his appointment to reside in his house, and took in boarders. The assistant masters paid rents less than the full annual value of their houses, and took in boarders, and resided in their houses as house masters.

On a case stated under the Taxes Management Act, 1880:—

Held, that the head and assistant masters did not occupy their houses as servants or agents of the governing body, so as to make their occupation the occupation of the governing body, but were themselves the occupiers of their respective houses, and that the other school buildings were not inhabited dwelling-houses, and therefore the assessment was wrong. *CHARTERHOUSE SCHOOL v. A co. owning a public school, founded by charter, was assessed to inhabited house duty in respect of land and school buildings, and a head master's house, garden, and stables, after allowing for the value of ten out of eleven acres, which were occupied as a garden and playground. The premises were used for the purposes of the school. The head master's house was held by him under a lease, which would determine if he ceased to hold his office. He resided in the house and kept boarders there for profit, but was not bound to reside in it.

On a case stated under the Taxes Management Act, 1880:—

Held, that the head master, and not the co., was the occupier of the head master's house, and that the rest of the school buildings could not be treated as inhabited dwelling-houses, and therefore the assessment was wrong. CLIFTON COLLEGE v. TOMPSON - - Div. Ct. [1896] 1 Q. B. 432

A trainer of race-horses occupied stables which he used for the accommodation of horses trained by him; in one wing of the stables were four rooms in which some of the stable-lads employed by him slept. Close to the stables, but outside the stable-yard, was a ten-roomed house with domestic offices and garden, which was occupied by the trainer's “head-lad.” The stables were included with the dwelling-house in an assessment to the inhabited house duty:—

Held, that the stables belonged to and were occupied with a dwelling-house within the meaning of 48 Geo. 3, c. 55, Sched. B, r. 2; that they did not come within the exemption in s. 13, sub-s. 1, of the Customs and Inland Revenue Act, 1878 (41 & 42 Vict. c. 15), in favour of premises occupied solely for the purpose of a trade or business; and that the assessment was therefore right. *LAMBTON v. A firm of worsted spinners, having a lease for years of their business premises, generated steam power on part of those premises for the purpose of driving their spinning machines, and sub-let another part, and supplied their surplus steam power to the sub-lessees, and to others, at agreed prices. The firm subsequently became insolvent, and executed a deed of assignment of all their real and personal estate, other than leasehold property, to a trustee for the benefit of creditors. The trustee thereupon occupied the part of the premises which had been retained by the firm, and, under the powers of the deed of assignment, continued to supply the sub-lessees and the others with steam power upon the same terms for the purpose of realizing the firm's assets to the best advantage. He did not otherwise carry on the business of the firm. On the expiration of the sub-lease the firm, by the direction of the trustee, granted to the same underlessees a further underlease of the same part of the premises, and the trustee continued to supply the steam power on the same terms as before. The sums received by the trustee for the steam power supplied exceeded the cost of supplying it, though the whole business carried on by the firm had been carried on at a loss, and the assets realized by the trustee had only produced a dividend of 8s. in the pound:—

Held, that income tax under Sched. D. was payable by the trustee in respect of the profit made by him in supplying the steam power. ARMITAGE v. MOORE Div. Ct. [1900] W. N. 123; [1900] 2 Q. B. 363

A benefit building society lent money to borrowing members at a fixed rate of interest, and took from them a security on their property. The repayment of the loans was by weekly payments of a fixed sum, in respect of principal and interest, the proportion of interest to principal in each payment decreasing as time went on, and the principal remaining due decreased. No deduction was allowed to be made by the borrower in respect of income tax. The society were assessed to income tax under Sched. D. on the interest they received, as being interest of money within s. 2 of the Income Tax Act, 1853. On a case stated:—

Held, that the expression "interest of money" in s. 2 of the Income Tax Act, 1853, is not restricted to annual interest, and that the interest received by the society was not in respect of a loan on land, but of a contract relating to interest of money lent, and was therefore assessable in their hands to the income tax. LEEDS PERMANENT BENEFIT BUILDING SOCIETY v. The appellants carried on the business of brewers, and also, as a branch or adjunct of their brewery business, the business of bankers and money-lenders, and in the course of such business lent money to their customers on security, and received money on deposit from their customers, who were allowed to draw bankers' cheques or orders on the appellants. In no case was any loan or advance made by way of permanent investment, but the same was taken only in connection with the current dealings and transactions of the customer with the appellants, and, in the event of such current dealings or transactions terminating, the loan or advance was required to be paid off, and the account closed. The profits of the brewery were largely increased by the addition of the banking and money-lending business, and the loans were necessary to enable the appellants to realize profits. They claimed to deduct from an assessment to the income tax on profits from trade, bad debts in respect of loans to customers:—

Held (distinguishing Watney v. Musgrave, (1880) 5 Ex. D. 241) that, on the facts above stated, the appellants must be taken to have carried on one business only, that the money advanced to customers was used in the business, and not capital invested, and that the appellants were entitled to the deduction claimed. REID'S BREWERY CO. v. The co. having been assessed for income tax on these sums as part of the annual profits of the co., in an appeal the co. maintained that they were not entitled to divide these sums as profits, but were bound to retain them to meet the obligations undertaken by them for all time coming:—

The Income Tax Act, 1842, Sched. A, r. 6, provides for certain allowances to be made from income tax, and, inter alia, on "the rents and profits of lands, tenements, . . . vested in the trustees for charitable purposes," on proof before the Commrs. for Special Purposes of the application of the said rents and profits to charitable purposes only.

The General Trustees of the Free Church of Scotland having been assessed for income tax on the annual value of their assembly hall under the general rule of Sched. A, claimed exemption in respect of the branch of rule 6 above quoted. It appeared that the assembly hall was used for church purposes, and was unlet and yielded no rents or profits:—

In returning the profits of the colliery for income tax purposes they claimed to deduct the yearly average excess of their contributions over the amounts received by them as indemnities:—

The Customs and Inland Revenue Act, 1893, imposed income tax for the year 1893–94 upon income chargeable under Scheds. A, B, C, D, and E of the Income Tax Act, 1853, and enacted that provisions in any Income Tax Act in force in the previous year should have full force and effect “with respect to the duties of income tax hereby granted.”

An insurance society was assessed for income tax for the year 1893–94 on the interest of colonial investments not received in Great Britain, but received and re-invested in the colonies, on the ground that it was subject to assessment under s. 102 of the Income Tax Act, 1842:—

Held, (1) that if and in so far as s. 102 of the Act of 1842 subjected to assessment income not covered by the lettered schedules, it was not in force for the year 1893–94; and (2.) that s. 102 did not impose duties, but merely contained provisions as to the duties granted in the schedules.

Where interest derived from the colonial investments of a society for mutual insurance was not remitted home, but was re-invested abroad, held that, by being entered in the society's accounts, it was not constructively remitted to this country so as to be chargeable with duty under case 4 of *Sched. Where a trade is carried on either wholly in the United Kingdom or partly within and partly outside it, and profits accrue therefrom to a person or a corporation residing in the United Kingdom, the assessment for income tax falls under the 1st case of Sched. D of 5 & 6 Vict. c. 35, s. 100, and does not fall under the 5th case, and the duty is to be computed upon the full amount of the balance of the profits or gains of the trade, and not only upon the actual sums annually received in the United Kingdom. A co. registered under the Companies Acts, whose registered office was in England, were the proprietors of a ry. in Brazil. The working of the ry. was under the control and direction of, and the business of the co. was managed by, the directors in England. The directors purchased in England and sent out to Brazil the materials and plant necessary for the purposes of the ry. The accounts were kept and the balance-sheet and reports were made out in London, where also the meetings were held, and all dividends were declared and paid. With the exception of certain small amounts for transfer fees and annual interest on money, the whole revenue of the co. arose from moneys paid to them in Brazil for the carriage of passengers and goods on the ry. and for other matters connected with the ry. :—

Held, that it was not necessary to decide the question whether the business of the co. was carried on wholly in the United Kingdom, since it was clearly carried on partly in England and not (as in Colquhoun v. Brooks, (1889) 14 App. Cas. 493) wholly outside the United Kingdom; and that the co. were therefore assessable to income tax, under the 1st case of Sched. D of 5 & 6 Vict. c. 35, s. 100, upon the full amount of the balance of the profits or gains of their business, and not, under the 5th case, only upon the actual sums annually received in the United Kingdom.

Upon the transfer of an insurance business the transferees agreed to take into their service the transferors' manager at a fixed salary, with liberty to commute the same by payment to him of a gross sum to be calculated upon life tables. The transferees retained the manager's services for a short time and then paid him a gross sum in commutation of his salary. They claimed to deduct that sum in estimating their profits for income tax :—

Held, that the agreement to pay the commutation money was in fact part of the consideration for the transfer of the business, that the payment was therefore a "sum employed as capital" and could not be deducted.

In order to enable the liquidation of the City of Glasgow Bank to be finally closed the Assets Co. was formed in 1882, and acquired from the liquidators the whole assets of the bank in return for a payment sufficient to discharge the outstanding liabilities of the bank, with the expenses of the liquidation, and a general undertaking to pay all debts of the bank which might afterwards emerge. These assets consisted of real and other properties and securities, and of sums which the liquidators expected to recover from the estates of contributories. At the date of the transference the assets stood in the books of the liquidators estimated at certain values, but these values did not represent the amount paid by the co., which would have been the same if the book values had been increased or diminished to any extent.

The income of the co., as stated in the revenue accounts, consisted of the returns from these assets and investments. From time to time the co. sold portions of the assets at prices exceeding the book values. The surpluses arising from such sales were not entered as income in the revenue accounts, but were credited to capital under the head of "suspense account for surplus assets." Large sums resulting from such sales and recoveries from debtors were carried to the credit of this account during each year subsequent to 1882, and in 1893 the directors, in terms of an interlocutor of the Court, distributed to the shareholders, from the sum standing in the suspense account, a sum of 15,000*l.* as "repayment of surplus capital."

The Inland Revenue claimed that the co. were liable to income tax for the year 1894–95 on the full amount of the sums carried to the credit of suspense account, and assessed the liability on an average of three years preceding 1894.

In a case for appeal against the assessment, in which the foregoing facts were stated, held, that as there was no statement of the price paid for each of the assets at the date of the transference, it was not possible to determine whether the realization of the assets had resulted in a profit to the co.

The London County Council had deducted income tax under s. 24, sub-s. 3, of the Customs and Inland Revenue Act, 1888, from dividends paid by them on their consolidated stock. These dividends were paid out of the council's Consolidated Loans Fund, which was by statute made applicable in the first place to their payment. That fund consisted of (among other things) interest which had been received by the council on loans made by them to other local authorities, and from which, in accordance with the subsection, income tax under Sched. D had been deducted before payment of the rents and profits of land on which income tax under Sched. A had been paid, of the proceeds of sales of property, and of money raised by rates:—

Held, that the county council were entitled to retain a proportion of the income tax which they had deducted corresponding to the proportion in which the dividends on the consolidated stock had been paid out of moneys on which income tax under Sched. D had been already paid; but that they were not entitled to retain

The Taxes Management Act, 1880, s. 21, enacts, sub-s. 3, that all penalties exceeding 20*l.* shall be recoverable in the High Court; sub-s. 4, that "in default of prosecution within the space of twelve months from the time of any penalty being incurred . . . no penalty or forfeiture shall afterwards be recoverable in any other manner"; sub-s. 5, that subject to the above restriction as to time all pecuniary penalties not exceeding 20*l.* shall be recoverable before the Commrs.

In a prosecution for a penalty of 50*l.* raised in the High Court eighteen months after the penalty was incurred, the defender founded on s. 21, sub-s. 4, of the Taxes Management Act, 1880, and pleaded that the action was barred in respect that it had not been raised within twelve months:—

Held, (1) that the words "in any other manner" in sub-s. 4 did not mean in any manner of way, but in any manner other than that mentioned in sub-s. 3, namely, by an action in the High Court, and that the time limitation did not affect actions in the High Court; (2) that even assuming that it did, sub-s. 4 had been superseded by s. 22 of the Inland Revenue Regula-

The Income Tax Act, 1842, Sched. A, r. 6, exempts from income tax "any building the property of any literary or scientific institution, used solely for the purposes of such institution, and in which no payment is demanded for any instruction there afforded by lectures or otherwise":—

Held, that the hall, library, and museum of the Royal College of Surgeons of Edinburgh were not exempt under the above provision, in respect that the college was not a literary or scientific institution but an institution whose main objects were professional. SULLY v. ROYAL COLLEGE OF SURGEONS OF EDINBURGH, (1892) 19 Rettie, 751 Ct. of Sess. (Sc.) [1896] W. N. 98

The Royal College of Surgeons of England, incorporated by charter, had two main objects: the promotion of the science of surgery, and the promotion and encouragement of the practice of surgery, including the promotion of the interests of those practising surgery as a profession, and the examination of students and others to qualify for practice or honours in surgery and kindred subjects. On an appeal against an assessment to duty under the Customs and Inland Revenue Act, 1885:—

Held, that, as the promotion of the interests of those practising surgery as a profession was in itself a main object, and one in respect of which no exemption could be claimed, the only exemption that could be claimed under s. 11 of the Act was in respect of property or income so appropriated as to create a legal obligation to apply it to the promotion of the science of surgery. In re ROYAL COLLEGE OF SURGEONS OF ENGLAND

The exemption from income tax granted by the Income Tax Act, 1842 (Sched. 109. — Public free library—"Buildings used solely for the purposes" of institution—Subscription library—Exemption—Income Tax Act, 1842 (5 & 6 Vict. c. 35), s. 61, No. 6.

Sect. 61, Rule 6, of the Income Tax Act, 1842, exempts from duties under Sched. A, "any building the property of any literary or scientific institution, used solely for the purposes of such institution."

In the buildings of the Dundee Free Library accommodation was given to books belonging to the Dundee Subscription Library, and the expenses attending their safe keeping and circulation among the subscribers were defrayed out of the revenues of the Free Library. In consideration of the accommodation and services so given, each book, after being in circulation for a year, became the property of the Free Library:—

Held, that the buildings in question did not fall within the above exemption, inasmuch as they were not used "solely" for the purposes of the Free Library. INLAND REVENUE v. DUNDEE MAGISTRATES, (1897) 24 Rettie, 930.

A society whose object was to promote religion by the circulation of tracts and books, carried on the business of booksellers in a shop, and earned profits therefrom. The society also sold books by colporteurs, but the colportage work could not by itself be carried on at a profit as a commercial undertaking, and the society was able to continue it only by means of the profits earned in the shop and of voluntary subscriptions:—

Held, that the profits earned in carrying on the business of booksellers were trade profits and fell to be assessed for income tax, and that the losses arising from the colportage agencies did not fall to be deducted therefrom, the colportage being essentially distinct from the bookselling business, and not being of the nature of trade. RELIGIOUS TRACT AND BOOK SOCIETY OF SCOTLAND v. The appellant, who was clerk to the guardians of a union, and to the assessment and school attendance committees, was assessed in respect of his salary, under Sched. E, on a net amount of 289*l.* He contributed annually under s. 12 of the Poor Law Officers Superannuation Act, 1896, for the purposes of that Act, a sum of 15*l.* 10*s.*, which was deducted from his salary under that section. He claimed to deduct this sum from the amount on which he was assessed, by virtue of the Income Tax Act, 1842, s. 146, Sched. E, First Rule, by which duty is payable on salaries, &c., "after deducting the amount of duties or other sums payable or chargeable on the same by virtue of any Act of Parliament":—

Held, that the amount contributed by the appellant, under the Poor Law Officers Superannuation Act, came within the words "duties or other sums payable or chargeable by virtue of any Act of Parliament," in the Income Tax Act, 1842, s. 146, and therefore he was entitled to the deduction claimed. BEAUMONT v. The occupant of premises, which had been assessed to income tax for the year ending April 5, 1899, at the annual value of 40*l.* appealed against the assessment to the Commrs., and produced two leases, one dated May 2, 1898, for seven years from Whitsunday, 1898, and the other dated in July, 1888, for ten years from Whitsunday, 1888. The rent stipulated in both cases was 19*l.* 10*s.*, and the appellant maintained that the assessment should be reduced to that amount. It was admitted that the leases contained the whole contract between the owner and occupant. The appellant led no other evidence, and did not require the Commrs. to appoint a valuator.

The Commrs. refused the appeal, being of opinion (1) that they were not bound to accept the leases as conclusive evidence of the value of the premises, and (2) that, from their own local knowledge, and according to the best of their judgment, 40*l.* was a fair valuation.

On appeal the Court affirmed the determination of the Commrs., holding that the Commrs. were not bound or entitled to regard the leases as conclusive evidence of the value of the premises, although they were admissible as evidence quantum valeret, and that the Commrs. were entitled, in considering the evidence, to have regard to their own local knowledge. STOCKS v. A shipping co. having claimed a deduction under the above section in respect of the depreciation of their fleet of steamships, the Commrs. allowed a deduction at the rate of  $5\frac{1}{2}$  per cent. on the value of the fleet as at the beginning of the year. The shipping co., who claimed a deduction at the rate of  $9\frac{1}{2}$  per cent., appealed. The case for appeal did not state the method by which the Commrs. reached the rate of  $5\frac{1}{2}$  per cent., and merely put the question whether the deduction of  $5\frac{1}{2}$  per cent. was a just and reasonable exercise of the powers of the Commrs. under the statute; but the case stated that "the opinion of Sheriff Rutherford, who delivered the decision of the Commrs., and a statement shewing the effect of depreciation on the diminishing value of a steamer costing originally 20,000*l.* at various rates per cent., and on which the decision proceeded, are subjoined as an appendix to this case." In the opinion of Sheriff Rutherford it was stated that a deduction at the rate of  $5\frac{1}{2}$  per cent. on the annually diminishing value of a steamer would, at the end of twenty-two years (which, it was stated, was the assumed average life of such vessels), amount to the original cost of the vessel, provided that the sums annually deducted were put out at interest; but that if the sums deducted were not put out at interest, the sums deducted would amount only to about two-thirds of the original cost of the vessel. This, the opinion stated, "is put merely as an illustration with the view of shewing that  $5\frac{1}{2}$  per cent. on the diminishing value during each of the twenty-two years is a fair allowance."

At the hearing on the appeal the appellants maintained that the Commrs. had erred in law in taking account of interest in the manner explained in the sheriff's opinion; the Inland Revenue maintained that the opinion formed no part of the case, and that in any view no question of law was raised.

The Court remitted the case to the Commrs. for amendment with the view of embodying in the case the statements in the opinion—diss. Lord Young, who was of opinion that, assuming the opinion to form part of the case, the question what was a just and reasonable deduction under the statute was a question of fact and not a question of law.

In the case as amended the Commrs. stated, inter alia,—"in fixing the deduction to be allowed for diminished value through wear and tear, we took into account that the sum annually allowed might be so invested as to produce a return of 3 per cent. per annum."

The Court (diss. Lord Young) reversed the determination of the Commrs., and remitted to them with an instruction to the effect that in estimating the deduction to be allowed under the statute they were not entitled to make any deduction upon the sum representing the wear and tear during the year in question on account of any interest which might be earned on the sums allowed.

That sum was a totally inadequate consideration for A.'s interest. In an action against A.'s representatives by the Crown for payment of inventory duty, evidence upon which it was held that whether the transaction between A. and B. was of the nature of a donation or of a sale, it was a transaction by which A.'s interest in the business was transferred to B. absolutely, and that the claim of the Crown in consequence fell to be repelled. *LORD ADVOCATE v. A testator who died in 1876 devised real estate to trustees for a term of 500 years, and subject thereto on limitations under which A. became tenant for life. The trusts of the term were to raise and pay out of the rents and profits of the estate an annuity to the person who should, subject to the term, be entitled to the rents and profits; and the testator declared that, subject thereto, the trustees should, during twenty-one years from the testator's death, accumulate the rents and profits and invest them in land to be settled to the same uses; and after the determination of the twenty-one years should pay the rents and profits to the person for the time being entitled to the hereditaments comprised in the term:—

Held (Rigby L.J. dissenting), affirming the decision of Stirling J., [1895] 2 Ch. 517, that as A. during the period of twenty-one years had in effect a mere charge upon the estate of another person, legacy duty and not succession duty was payable on the annuity.

36 Geo. 3, c. 52, s. 23, enacts that where a legacy shall be released for a consideration or compounded for less than the value thereof, legacy duty shall be paid in respect of such legacy according to the amount taken in satisfaction thereof.

A competition between a person claiming a bequest on behalf of a class of beneficiaries under a will and the next of kin (a niece) of the testator, who maintained that the bequest was void from uncertainty, was terminated by joint minute under which each party received one-half of the subject of the bequest. The Court interposed authority to the minute, and in terms thereof ranked and preferred each claimant to one-half of the fund.

The Crown then claimed legacy duty at the rate of 10 per cent. on the whole fund, on the ground that as the bequest had not been set aside the rate of duty for the whole was that payable by strangers in blood to the testator. The testator's next of kin maintained that the rate of duty on the half payable to her under the arrangement ought to be 3 per cent. only:—

Held that, under s. 23 of the Act, the bequest having been released for payment of one-half of its amount, duty at the rate of 10 per cent. was payable on that half only, and that the half payable to the next of kin was liable to 3 per cent. duty. *LORD ADVOCATE v. Held, that the Crown debt for legacy duty was entitled to priority over the general creditors of the bankrupt; and (reversing the decision of Boyd J.) that such priority could be asserted by motion in the bankruptcy matter, and existed notwithstanding the vesting of the bankrupt's estate in his assignees:

127. — Life-rent—Trust deed—Legacy and inventory duty—Legacy Duty Act, 1796 (36 Geo. 3, c. 52), s. 14.

By a trust deed the trustees were directed to make an inventory of a library and art collection which were to be vested in and held by them as part of the trust estate with life-rent use thereof to D. his eldest son, and substitute heirs of entail. The deed also provided for the conveyance of the movable estate of the settlor to D. on the liquidation of certain debts and obligations during D.'s lifetime. D. liquidated the debts, but the library and art collection remained vested in the trustees during his life. On D.'s death:—

Held, affirming decision of Ct. of Sess., Lord Advocate v. Duke of Hamilton, (1891) 29 Sco. Law Rep. 213, that the library and art collection were part of D.'s estate, and legacy and inventory duty were payable thereon by his executors. DUKE OF HAMILTON v. LORD ADVOCATE

128. — Public-house—Offices occupied with certificated house—Stables—Inland Revenue Act, 1880 (43 & 44 Vict. c. 20), s. 43.

The Inland Revenue Act, 1880, s. 43, imposes duties payable on licences taken out by retailers of spirits, according to a graduated scale which depends on "the annual value of the dwelling-house in which the retailer shall reside or retail spirits, together with the offices, courts, yards, and gardens therewith occupied."

The holder of a public-house certificate was tenant of the house, and of a stable and stable-yard adjoining, at a lump rent for the whole. The entrance to the public-house was from A. street, and to the stable and stable-yard from B. street, at right angles to the former. At the back, the stable and stable-yard were separated from the house by a fence eight feet high, the magistrates having made the erection of such a fence a condition of granting the certificate, and there was no access from the house to the stable and stable-yard except by the public street, or through a small door from the house used only by the publican and his servants. The stables were used chiefly for the accommodation of farmers and others visiting the town, and the publican generally made a charge for stabling at ordinary rates. Some of the persons using the stable sought refreshment at the public-house; others did not.

In a question between the Board of Inland Revenue and the publican as to the amount of licence duty payable by the publican under the above Act, held (by Lord Stormonth-Darling, Ordinary in Exchequer) that the stable and stable-yard were occupied along with the public-house in the sense of the Act, and that the annual value of the stable and stable-yard fell to be included in computing the amount of the duty. PHILLIPS v. 129. — Licence to deal in plate—Secretary of watch club—Inland Revenue Act, 1867 (30 & 31 Vict. c. 90), ss. 1, 3, 17.

By s. 17 of the Inland Revenue Act, 1867, a penalty is imposed upon persons soliciting, taking, or receiving orders for articles, for the dealing in, retailing or selling which an excise licence is required, without having in force a proper excise licence, with a proviso that the section is not to be deemed to impose a penalty upon a bona fide traveller taking orders for goods which his employer is duly licensed to deal in or sell.

A watchmaker in London, holding an excise licence to deal in plate at his place of business in London, was the proprietor of a "watch club" in a provincial town. The secretary of the club, a clerk in the town, obtained members from among his fellow employees, receiving from each member a weekly subscription, which he forwarded to the watchmaker. A ballot was held at intervals among the members: the member who was successful at the ballot chose a watch from a catalogue of the watchmaker's goods; the secretary communicated his choice to the watchmaker and received from him a watch, which he handed over to the member. The secretary, who had no excise licence to deal in plate, was paid by the watchmaker a commission upon the amount collected by him:—

Held, that the secretary of the club was a person soliciting, taking, or receiving orders for an excisable article without having in force a proper excise licence within the meaning of the above section, and that he did not come within the proviso in favour of bona fide travellers therein contained. KILLICK v. Upon the death of a testator, a foreign subject domiciled in America, shares and debentures in an English co., of which he was the registered holder in the books of the co. in London, passed by his will to his executors in America, according to the law of his domicile. At their request the co. paid to them the dividends and interest payable upon the testator's shares and debentures and transferred into their names in the co.'s books in London two shares and a debenture. The executors to the knowledge of the co. had not obtained and did not intend to obtain probate in England:—

Held, that the co. had made themselves executors de son tort; that they had "taken possession of and administered" part of the testator's estate (see 55 Geo. 3, c. 184, s. 37; 28 & 29 Vict. c. 104, s. 57), and were liable to penalties, and to deliver an account and pay such duty as would have been payable if probate had been obtained in England.

A testator, who died domiciled in England, by his will after bequeathing legacies gave the residue of his real and personal estate to his executors in trust for his wife for life, and by a codicil gave one-fourth of his "said residuary real and personal estate" to his wife absolutely. His will was proved in England by his executors domiciled in England. His estate included mortgages on real property in New Zealand. His wife afterwards died and her will was proved in England. At her death her husband's estate had not been fully administered; the clear residue had not been ascertained, and no appropriation had been made of the New Zealand mortgages or of any securities to particular shares of the ultimate residue:—

Held, that the right of the wife's executors was, not to one-fourth or any part of the mortgages in specie, but to require her husband's executors to administer his personal estate and to receive from them one-fourth part of the clear residue, that this was an English asset of the wife's estate, and that probate duty was therefore payable under her will upon one-fourth part of the value of the New Zealand mortgages.

136. — Local situation of asset—Property in Jamaica—English will—Trust for sale.

A testator, who at the date of his will and death was living and domiciled in England, made an English will whereby in effect he devised and bequeathed a plantation in Jamaica to trustees upon trusts for the benefit of certain persons for life and their issue, and upon the deaths of those persons and failure of issue upon trust to sell the plantation and divide the proceeds amongst several persons therein named. The trustees were at the above dates all domiciled in the United Kingdom; and one of them after the testator's death proved the will in England and acted as trustee, and held as trustee in this country the plantation upon the trusts of the will.

The trust for sale ultimately took effect, and the proceeds of sale of the plantation became divisible amongst the several persons named in that behalf in the will, or their legal personal representatives.

One of those persons, who was at the time of his death living and domiciled in England, died while the persons entitled for life were in existence, and the question was whether probate duty was or was not payable here on his death in respect of his interest under the will:—

Held, that the interest of the legatee under the will was an English equitable chose in action, recoverable in England, and an English and not a foreign asset, and as such was subject to probate duty here.

A firm of bankers in London, having an account at the Bank of England, for the purpose of enabling a customer to pay customs duties on goods otherwise than in cash, issued a document addressed to the cashiers of the Bank of England and directing them to transfer from the account of the bankers to the account of the Comms. of Customs a sum named therein. This document was dealt with in one of two ways: (1.) It was handed by the bankers to their customer in exchange for his cheque for the same amount, and given by him to the Comms. of Customs, who handed it to the Bank of England; or (2.) it was handed direct by the bankers to a customs officer in exchange for their customer's cheque, and subsequently handed by the Comms. of Customs to the Bank of England:—

Held (affirming the decision of Div. Ct. [1896] 1 Q. B. 222), that the document was a bill of exchange payable on demand within the meaning of s. 32 of the Stamp Act, 1891, and that it was not exempt from duty as being a “bill drawn in the United Kingdom for the sole purpose of remitting money to be placed to any account of public revenue” within the meaning of the 10th exemption under the head “Bill of Exchange” in the 1st sched. to the Act.

Sect. 32 is not to be construed as if the first part contained a definition of bills of exchange other than those payable on demand, and the second a definition of bills of exchange payable on demand; but the first part applies to bills of exchange generally, and any document mentioned in it must, if payable on demand, be treated as coming within the second part.

The primary object of the documents in question was to enable the merchant to obtain the release of his goods from the custom house, and they were therefore not drawn “for the sole purpose” of remitting money to an account of public revenue, and, moreover, having regard to the history of the exemption clause, the word “remit” only applied to the placing to its proper account money which was already public money. *COMMITTEE OF LONDON CLEARING BANKERS v. No period was fixed for the duration of the agreement, which contained powers for its determination by either party in certain events; it was ipso facto to determine on the death of the manager. The agreement was not to operate as a demise to the manager, nor to constitute a partnership between the parties:—

By the Customs and Inland Revenue Act, 1888, s. 14, sub-s. 1, the stamp duty then payable upon a mortgage of any stock or “marketable security” was repealed; and by sub-s. 5 “any deed operating as a mortgage” of any “marketable security” was made chargeable with the ad valorem duty on a mortgage under the Stamp Act, 1870. An equitable charge upon the debentures of a limited co. is a “marketable security” within the definition given in s. 2, sub-s. 10, of the Stamp Act, 1870. A co. issued a series of debentures of 100l. each, each debenture containing an undertaking by the co. to pay to the registered holder upon a specified date “the sum of 100l. together with a premium thereon at 7l. 10s.” The debentures were marketable securities not transferable by delivery within the meaning of Sched. I. of the Stamp Act, 1891:—

Held, that each debenture was a security for the payment by the co. of 107l. 10s., the amount of the principal and the premium, and was therefore liable to ad valorem stamp duty upon that amount. ROWELL v. INLAND REVENUE COMMRS.

A limited co. issued a series of debentures for 100l. each, redeemable at par by annual drawings on and after July 1, 1902. Each debenture contained a stipulation that the co. might, at any time after July 1, 1900, on giving six months’ previous notice in writing to the registered holder, redeem the debenture at 103l., which sum, at the expiration of the six months, should become payable as if the same were the amount of the principal moneys thereby secured:—

Held, that ad valorem stamp duty was chargeable on each debenture under the head of “Marketable Security” in the 1st sched. to the Stamp Act, 1891, upon 100l. only, as being the “money secured” by the debenture within the meaning of the sched.

A bond and disposition in security contained a power of sale. The creditor exposed for sale the property held in security at a price less than the amount due under his security, and failed to find a purchaser. The creditor then applied to the sheriff under s. 8 of the Heritable Securities (Scotland) Act, 1894, and the sheriff issued a decree that the debtors had forfeited their rights of redemption, and that the creditor was vested absolutely in the subjects at the price named:—

Held, reversing the decision of the First Division of the Ct. of Sess., (1897) 24 R. 934, that the transaction constituted a sale to the creditor, and was chargeable, by virtue of ss. 54 and 57 of the Stamp Act, 1891, and the 1st sched. thereto, with ad valorem duty. *INLAND REVENUE COMMRs. v. By an agreement under seal the vendor agreed to sell the goodwill of the business of an hotel proprietor and licensed victualler, and the lease of the hotel in which the business was carried on, together with the household furniture, stock-in-trade, cash, and book debts; of the total consideration, 4085*l.* was apportioned to "lease and goodwill," 1462*l.* to furniture, stock-in-trade, and cash, and 37*l.* to book debts. The vendor was to shew a good title to the lease and to assign the lease and goodwill to the purchasers; in the event of the consent of the landlords to the assignment of the lease not being obtained, it was provided that the vendor should, at the option of the purchasers, execute a declaration of trust of the leasehold premises in their favour.

Held, (1.) by A. L. Smith and V. Williams L.J.J., affirming the judgment of Div. Ct., [1898] 1 Q. L. Smith and Rigby L.J.J., reversing the decision of the Div. Ct., that the goodwill was not merely an enhancement of the value of the leasehold premises, but was capable of being sold independently thereof, and as it was property other than lands, the agreement was liable to ad valorem duty in respect of the value of the goodwill; by V. By an agreement made in England the appellants, a limited co., bought from a firm of soap manufacturers in the United States their freehold works, book and other debts, together with the goodwill of the business and the trade-marks used in connection therewith. The vendors were the owners of a trade-mark, registered in England, relating to their soap, which trade-mark was extensively circulated throughout England in newspapers and pictorial advertisements at the expense of the vendors, who had an office in London for that purpose, and by this means a large demand for the soap had been created in the United Kingdom. The vendors did not sell direct to the retail dealers in the United Kingdom, but to a syndicate of three firms, who gave orders for soap which was despatched to them in England and paid for by them by remittances sent to the vendors; the syndicate then resold it to retail dealers and others at such prices as they thought fit; about two-thirds of the total sales of the vendors were made to the English syndicate:—

166. — Mortgage—Bond and disposition in security in ordinary Scotch form—Stamp Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 39), Sched. I., voce "Mortgage," sub-s. 5.

A bond and disposition in security, in the ordinary Scotch form, for the principal sum of 5000*l.*, was made in 1877. In 1887, the principal sum to the extent of 2000*l.* was paid off, and a discharge for that sum executed and stamped with 10*s.* duty. In May, 1895, the parties liable on the bond repaid the balance of 3000*l.*, and executed a discharge expressed to be in consideration of the 3000*l.* then repaid, and to be a discharge for that sum, and declaring (in the usual form of a Scotch instrument putting an end to the burden upon the land) the premises to be redeemed and discharged of the debt. The Comrs. of Inland Revenue assessed the duty upon this instrument at 1*l.* 5*s.*, being the ad valorem duty of 6*d.* per cent. upon the whole

(original) principal debt. The trustees who were debtors upon the bond appealed against this assessment, and maintained that the discharge being only a partial one, to the extent of 3000*l.*, it was liable to the duty (of 15*s.* only) on that amount; the 10*s.* duty already paid being imputable to the ad valorem duty of 6*d.* per cent. upon the 2000*l.*:—

Held, that the 5th sub-section of the Sched. (voce "Mortgage") applied only to such discharges as have the effect of wholly freeing the subjects of the security from that security; and that the duty was to be calculated by the maximum burden which has ever been incumbent by virtue of the security. The whole ad valorem duty was therefore payable on a discharge of the balance equally with a discharge of the whole money. It follows, also, that a discharge which lifts off part of the burden but leaves the security in part still incumbent, is not within the section; and that such discharges are liable to an ordinary deed stamp. *MUNRO v. No. 12), s. 25.

By the Stamp Act, 1891, s. 59, sub-s. 1, "Any contract or agreement made in England under seal, or under hand only, for the sale of any equitable estate or interest in any property whatsoever, or for the sale of any estate or interest in any property except property locally situate out of the United Kingdom," is charged with ad valorem duty.

By the New South Wales Trust Property Act of 1862, s. 25, "All mortgages of real or personal estate shall hereafter be deemed at law, as now in equity, pledges only of the property thereby mortgaged; and nothing in any such mortgage shall prevent the title of any mortgagor, or person claiming and being in possession, from being deemed a good title at law, subject to such pledge, as against all persons other than the mortgagee and those claiming under him."

The appellants entered into a written agreement in England to purchase property in New South Wales, subject to a mortgage.

On a case stated by the Commrs. of Inland Revenue, pursuant to s. 13 of the Stamp Act, 1891:—

Held, that the words of exception in the Stamp Act, 1891, s. 59, sub-s. 1, do not apply to an equitable estate or interest in property locally situate out of the United Kingdom, and therefore the general words, "any equitable estate or interest in any property whatsoever," apply, and ad valorem duty is payable on an agreement made in England for the purchase of such an estate:

Held, also, that the New South Wales Trust Property Act does not confer the legal estate in mortgaged property on the mortgagor:

Held, therefore, that ad valorem duty was payable on the purchase by the appellants of the equity of redemption. FARMER & CO. v. INLAND REVENUE COMMISSIONERS. Div. Ct. [1898] 2 Q. B. 141

A limited co. issued in 1892 500,000l. 4 per cent. debenture stock, secured by a trust deed duly stamped, by which freehold and leasehold property of the co. were conveyed to trustees to secure payment of the amount of the stock and interest as provided for by the deed. By a subsequent trust deed for securing debenture stock made in 1897, the trustees of which were the same as those of the deed of 1892, after reciting that the 500,000l. debenture stock was still outstanding and that the co. were intending to issue further irredeemable  $\frac{3}{4}$  per cent. debenture stock, it was provided (inter alia) that the amount of stock to be issued was limited in the first instance to 300,000l., the co. acknowledging in the deed that they were indebted to the trustees in that sum carrying interest at  $3\frac{1}{2}$  per cent. per annum; that the co. should be at liberty to issue further irredeemable  $\frac{3}{4}$  per cent. debenture stock not exceeding 540,000l., making a total of 840,000l., but only for the purpose of redeeming or paying off the 500,000l. 4 per cent. stock at the rate of not more than 108l. of the new stock for every 100l. of the stock redeemed or paid off.

Held, that in respect of the 540,000l., as well as the 300,000l., the deed of 1897 was chargeable with the ad valorem duty specified in the 1st sched. to the Stamp Act, 1891, under the heading "Mortgage, Bond, Debenture, Covenant," and, not being an "additional" or "substituted" security within the meaning of those words in the sched., it was chargeable with the full duty of 2s. 6d. per cent.

By A. L. Smith L.J.: The deed of 1897 was a "mortgage" within the definition contained in s. 86, sub-s. 1, of the Stamp Act, 1891:

By Rigby L.J.: Seem, the deed was not a "mortgage" within that definition, but it was chargeable as a security for the payment of money in the nature of a debenture under s. 88, sub-s. 1, of the Act.

The instruments were dealt in upon the Stock Exchange, but were not officially quoted there:—

Held, that the instrument was not a mere promissory note, but that as it contained a contract that the holder should be entitled to the benefit of the security it was a marketable security within the meaning of s. 82, sub-s. 1 (b), of the Stamp Act, 1891, and was chargeable with stamp duty as such.

177. — Railway company — Increase of nominal capital — Stamp Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 39), s. 113.

A special Act authorized the Midland Ry. Co. to rearrange and consolidate the several classes and denominations of the shares and stocks in the capital of the co., and of their loans and debenture stocks. Under the authority of that Act the following changes (inter alia) were effected by the co.: 3,899,121l. 4 per cent. consolidated perpetual rent-charge stock was consolidated so as to amount to 6,238,594l. guaranteed stock bearing interest at the rate of 2l. 10s. per cent. per annum. 29,048,191l. 4 per cent. perpetual preference stock was extinguished, and in lieu thereof 46,477,106l. 2½ per cent. perpetual preference stock was created. Ordinary stock to the amount of 35,000,000l. was extinguished, and in lieu thereof there was created 35,000,000l. preferred converted ordinary stock, entitled to a dividend at the rate of 2l. 10s. per cent. per annum, and 35,000,000l. deferred converted ordinary stock:—

Held, that the increase authorized by the Act of the nominal amount of the share capital of the co. was an "increase of the amount of nominal share capital" within the meaning of s. 113 of the Stamp Act, 1891, so that the stamp duty imposed by that section was payable in respect of it. ATT.-GEN. v. 178. — "Receipt" — Money received by servant on account of master and handed over to fellow servant — Acknowledgment of receipt by fellow servant — Stamp Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 39), s. 101.

A solicitor was employed by a bank under an agreement whereby he was appointed an officer of the bank upon the terms that he was to be paid a salary, and to be provided with an office, stationery, and staff of clerks, and was to devote his whole time to the conduct of the legal business of the bank. The solicitor from time to time sued for and recovered sums of money due to the bank. As each sum was recovered he entered the amount in an account book, and then in accordance with his duty handed over the money to the secretary or cashier of the bank, who wrote against the entry in the account book his initials and the date on which the money was handed over to him, in some instances adding the word "received." The account book was the property of the solicitor and remained in his possession:—

Held, that as the initialling of the entries in the account book, whether with the addition of the word "received" or not, was intended as an acquittance of the solicitor in respect of the money handed over by him, the entries so initialled constituted "receipts" within s. 101 of the Stamp Act, 1891, and required to be stamped, none the less because the solicitor was a servant of the bank on whose behalf he had received the

A ry. co. having given notice under s. 78 of the Railways Clauses Act, 1845, to a colliery co. not to work certain coal under and adjacent to their ry., compensation therefor was assessed. The colliery co. gave the ry. co. a receipt under seal for the amount of the compensation, in which they undertook to leave the coal in question unworked, and further undertook to do and execute all deeds, matters, or things necessary for vesting the same in the ry. co. whenever required, and the document continued: “We further acknowledge and declare that the said sum includes satisfaction and compensation for all claims which but for these presents we might have maintained, either under the provisions of any statute, or at law or in equity, against the ry. co. in respect of the said coal.”—

Held, that the document was not a release or renunciation of property, or of any right or interest in property, upon a sale, and was, therefore, not chargeable with ad valorem duty, but that it was a release of an interest in property, and should, therefore, bear a 10s. stamp. *GREAT NORTHERN RY. A peer bequeathed his residuary personal estate in trust for his wife for life and after her death in trust for the person who should then be his right heir absolutely. After his death five nieces became his co-heiresses, and the appellant, a nephew, succeeded to the title. In order to make provision for the title a deed of family arrangement was executed whereby the testator's widow assigned her interest in bank shares (part of the testator's residuary estate), and the co-heiresses and the appellant respectively assigned their contingent reversionary interests in the residue, to trustees in trust by clause 1 during the widow's life to pay out of the income of the bank shares an annuity of 15,000l. to the appellant and other annuities to the co-heiresses; and by clause 2 after the widow's death to pay out of the income of the whole residue an annuity of 15,000l. to the person for the time being holding the title, with other payments to the co-heiresses and provisions for keeping up the title. The widow died and the co-heiresses paid legacy duty at 3 per cent. on the whole residue. The Crown having claimed succession duty at 6½ per cent.

Held, that the C. A. was right in holding that the annuity was not payable under “a contract made for valuable consideration in money or money’s worth” within s. 17 of the Succession Duty Act, 1853; and wrong in holding that the deed created a new succession; that the case fell under s. 15 and was one of “alienation” of part of the succession created by the testator’s will, whereby the duty payable in respect of the annuity was at the same rate and time as would have been payable if the annuity had not been created; but that as legacy duty had been paid upon the whole residue out of which the annuity was carved, s. 18 applied and no succession duty would have been payable by the co-heiresses if the annuity had not been created, and therefore that the effect of ss. 15 and 18 together was that no succession duty was payable by the appellant in respect of the annuity.

By his trust disposition and settlement J. Dalrymple directed his trustees to hold one-half of the residue of his estate, including the property of W. L., for his daughter in liferent and her issue in fee, with power to his daughter, in the event of her having no issue, to dispose of the estate so held for her by mortis causa deed. Failing her doing so the trustees were directed to hold the estate for behoof of the truster’s grandson, G., in liferent. Miss Dalrymple, who did not marry, exercised the power conferred upon her, and by her settlement directed her trustees to convey W. L. to Mrs. Durrant (a stranger in blood) in liferent, and her son C. in fee, and to hold the residue of her estate for Mrs. Durrant in liferent and her whole children in fee.

G. having raised an action of reduction of Miss Dalrymple’s settlement, it was ultimately agreed that G. should consent to decree of absolvitor, and that Mrs. Durrant and her children should convey to him their rights to W. L. Decree of absolvitor was thereafter pronounced, and Mrs. Durrant and her children having assigned their rights to W. L., Mr. Dalrymple’s trustees, who had the feudal title, executed a disposition of W. L. to Gordon.

The Crown thereafter raised an action against G. for succession duty at the rate of 10 per cent. “in respect of the succession of Mrs. Durrant . . . to the liferent of . . . W. L.” The defender tendered duty at the rate of 3 per cent. on the ground that Mrs. Durrant had not taken any right to W. L. under Miss Dalrymple’s settlement, and that his right to the property was acquired from Miss Dalrymple’s trustee:—

that the defender had acquired that right in virtue of the assignation in his favour, and that therefore he was liable in succession duty at the rate of 10 per cent. LORD ADVOCATE v. GORDON, (1895) 22 Kettie, 639.

By settlement, made on the marriage of A. and B., a sum of 5000*l.*, the fortune of A. (the wife) was assigned to trustees, upon trust to pay the interest thereof to her during the joint lives of herself and B., and upon trust, after the decease of the survivor, and in the events which happened, to apply same in payment and discharge (so far as same would extend) of incumbrances affecting lands brought into settlement by B. and his father C., and over which a jointuring power was reserved to them in favour of A., which they exercised to its full extent; and by the said settlement A. was given a life interest, after B.’s death, in a sum of 4000*l.*, brought into settlement by C. In the event (which happened) of there being no issue of the marriage, D., who was a grandson of C., but a stranger in blood to A., became tenant in tail of the settled lands; and barred the entail and resettled them.

A. survived B., and on her death the 5000*l.* was applied towards discharging incumbrances upon the settled lands:—

Held, that A. was predecessor of D. within the meaning of the Succession Duty Act, 1853, and that duty at 10 per cent. was payable by D. in respect of his succession to this sum.

A settlement in consideration of marriage and money or money’s worth is not within the exemption in s. 17 of the Act.

C. was also a niece of W.

In a question between the Crown, claiming succession duty, and C. held (affirming judgment of Lord Wellwood) that when the destination to the heirs-male of the body of D. was exhausted on the death of W. the estate passed, not by devolution of law, but under the entailor’s disposition, to a new stirps, the heirs-female of D.’s body, of which C. was the head, and that C. succeeded by “disposition” to the entailor as her “predecessor,” and not by devolution by law to her uncle W.

1. — Sale of reversion—Inadequate price—“Unfair dealing”—Expectant heir—Sales of Reversions Act, 1867 (31 & 32 Vict. c. 4), s. 1.

The Court, without deciding whether, notwithstanding the Act, a sale of a reversion could be set aside merely on the ground of gross undervalue as being evidence of fraud or unfair dealing, held that the circumstances of the present case shewed that there had been unfair dealing by the defendant, and therefore he was not entitled to the protection of the Act, and the old doctrine of the Court as to dealing with expectant heirs applied, as was shewn by Earl of Aylesford v. Morris, (1873) L. R. 8 Ch. 484. BRENCHLEY v. HIGGINS — — C. A. [1900] W. N. 242

SALE OF GOODS.

Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (56 & 57 Vict. c. 71), codifies the law relating to the sale of goods.

1. — Acceptance—Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (56 & 57 Vict. c. 71), s. 4, sub-ss. 1, 3—Act which recognises a pre-existing contract of sale.

Where goods sold under an oral contract were delivered to the buyer, who took a sample from them, and, after examining it, said that the goods were not equal to his sample, and that he would not have them:—

Held, that there was evidence of an act done by him in relation to the goods which recognised a pre-existing contract of sale, and therefore evidence of an acceptance within the meaning of s. 4 of the Sale of Goods Act, 1893. ABBOTT & Co. v. WOLSEY — C. A. [1895] 2 Q. B. 97

2. — Contract—Oral contract—Part payment—Statute of Frauds (29 Car. 2, c. 3), s. 17—Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (56 & 57 Vict. c. 71), s. 4, sub-s. 1.

Where, upon an oral contract for the supply of goods, it was a term of the contract that a sum of money which had been overpaid to the vendor upon a previous sale of goods by him to the purchaser should be retained by the vendor on account of the price of the goods contracted to be supplied:—

Held, that there was not a part payment which would satisfy the provisions of s. 4, sub-s. 1, of the Sale of Goods Act, 1893.

Walker v. Nussey, (1847) 16 M. & W. 302, followed. NORTON v. DAVISON — C. A. [1899] W. N. 12 (12); [1899] 1 Q. B. 401

3. — Contract—Sale by description—Implied Condition—Acceptance—Passing of property—Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (56 & 57 Vict. c. 71), ss. 13, 17, 35.

The expression “contract for the sale of goods by description,” in the Sale of Goods Act, 1893, s. 13, applies to all cases where the buyer has not seen the goods, but relies solely on the description given by the seller.

The plt. agreed to sell and the deft. to buy a reaping machine, which the deft. had never seen, and which the plt. stated to have been new the previous year, and to have been used to cut only fifty or sixty acres. The machine was delivered, and shortly afterwards the deft. wrote complaining that it did not correspond with the plt.’s statements. After some further correspondence the deft. returned the machine.

In an action to recover the price:—

Held, that there was a contract for the sale of goods by description, within the meaning of the Sale of Goods Act, 1893, s. 13, and therefore, by that section, there was an implied condition that the goods should correspond with the description, that there had been no acceptance of the machine by the deft., within the meaning of s. 35, that the property had not passed to the deft., within the meaning of s. 17, and the plt. was not entitled to recover. VARLEY v. WHIPP

4. — Contract—Sale or return—Transfer of property as between seller and buyer—Pledge of goods—“Act adopting the transaction”—Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (56 & 57 Vict. c. 71), s. 18, r. 4 (a).

Where a person who has received goods on sale or return pledges them he thereby does an act adopting the transaction within the meaning of the Sale of Goods Act, 1893, s. 18, r. 4 (a), so that the property in the goods passes to him, and the original vendor cannot recover them from the person with whom they have been pledged. KIRKHAM v. ATTENBOROUGH. KIRKHAM v. GILL

C. A. [1897] 1 Q. B. 201

5. — Contract—Shipment to be made by sailing ship between specified dates—Condition precedent—Implied condition—Measure of damages.

By agreement in writing the defts. sold to the plts. 250 bales of Manila hemp, shipment to be made from a port or ports in the Philippine Islands by sailer or sailers between May 1 and July 31, 1898; the agreement contained a clause that if the goods did not arrive from loss of vessel or other unavoidable cause the contract was to be void. In consequence of the Spanish-American war it was in a business sense impossible for the defts. to ship hemp by sailer between the specified dates, but in Sept. they shipped hemp (which would otherwise have satisfied the contract) by steamer, and on Oct. 27 declared it against the contract; the plts. refused to accept this declaration, and returned it to the defts., who, on Nov. 4, wrote that it was the only declaration that they were in a position to make:—

Held, that the stipulations as to shipment by sailer or sailers between the specified dates were conditions precedent and the declaration was bad; that it was not an implied condition of the contract that it should be possible to ship by sailer between those dates; that the defts. were not protected by the express condition as to non-arrival of the goods, the non-arrival not having been occasioned by any unavoidable cause within the meaning of the contract; and that the damages were to be ascertained by reference to the market price on Nov. 4, the day on which the defts. finally notified their inability to make a declaration in accordance with the contract. ASHMORE & SON v. 6. — Contract—Warranty—Implied condition as to fitness of goods—Evidence—Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (56 & 57 Vict. c. 71), s. 14.

Coals were supplied under a written contract of sale containing no mention of the particular purpose for which they were required, though prior to the making of such contract the buyers made known that purpose to the sellers, who were coal agents, and relied on their skill and judgment. In an action for damages for breach of warranty by the sellers:—

Held, that evidence of what took place between the parties prior to the making of the contract was admissible to raise the implication of the condition specified in s. 14 of the Sale of Goods Act, 1893, and, therefore, by virtue of that section a warranty or condition by the sellers that the coals were reasonably fit for the purpose for which they were required must be implied:

Held, also, that a contract for the sale of coals under a particular description known in the coal trade was not “a contract for the sale of a specified article under its patent or other trade name” within the meaning of the proviso to s. 14. *GILLESPIE BROTHERS & Co. v. In fulfilment of a contract for the sale of a certain quantity of copper the sellers forwarded to the buyer a bill of lading indorsed in blank for copper shipped on the deft's ship, together with a draft for the price of the copper for acceptance. The buyer, who was insolvent, did not accept the draft, and delivered the bill of lading to the plts. in fulfilment of a contract which he had, previously to obtaining possession of the bill of lading, made for the sale to them of copper, and they thereupon paid him the price of the copper. The plts. took the bill of lading in good faith, and without notice of the rights of the original sellers in respect of the copper. The sellers stopped the copper in transitu. In an action by the plts. against the defs., non-delivery of the copper:—

Held, reversing the judgment of Mathew J., [1898] 2 Q. B. 61, that, the buyer having obtained possession of the bill of lading with the consent of the sellers, the transfer of it by him to the plts. gave them a good title to the copper under s. 25, sub-s. 2, of the Sale of Goods Act, 1893, and that the sellers had no right to stop it in transitu. *CAHN AND MAYER v. Elementary Education (School Attendance) Act (1893) Amendment Act, 1899, amends the law respecting the employment and education of young children.

1. — Employment of child by parent “for purposes of gain”—Elementary Education Act, 1876 (39 & 40 Vict. c. 79), s. 47.

By s. 6 of the Elementary Education Act, 1876, a person who takes into his employment a child, between the ages of ten and fourteen, who is not exempted from school attendance, is liable to a penalty.

By s. 47, “a parent of a child who employs such child in any labour exercised by way of trade or for the purposes of gain shall be deemed for the purposes of this Act to take such child into his employment.”

The respondent, in order to enable his wife to go out and earn money, kept his daughter, a child of the age of thirteen who was not exempted from school attendance, at home to do the housework:—

Held, that he did not thereby employ the child for the purposes of gain so as to render himself liable to the penalty imposed by s. 6. MATHER v. LAWRENCE Div. Ct. [1899] W. N. 67; [1899] 1 Q. B. 1000

Where, therefore, a child apparently under fourteen years of age is charged before a court of summary jurisdiction with larceny, and the charge is dismissed, but evidence is given that he frequents the company of reputed thieves, he may be sent to an industrial school under s. 14 of the Act, upon an application under that section, without being brought afresh before the Court by summons or otherwise. *REG. v. By s. 34 of the Elementary Education Act, 1870, a member of a school board who (inter alia) "shall in any way share or be concerned in the profits of any bargain or contract with or any work done under the authority of such school board" is liable to a penalty, and his office becomes vacant.

The respondent, a member of a school board, sold sand and gravel to a builder who had entered into a contract with the board for the building of a school; at the time of the sale the respondent was aware that the sand and gravel were intended to be used (as they were in fact, used) in the building of the school:—

Held, that the respondent had been concerned in work done under the authority of the board, and had therefore been guilty of an offence under the section. BARNACLE v. CLARK

At elections of school boards in boroughs a voter has the option of placing on the ballot-paper supplied to him, opposite the name of any candidate for whom he intends to vote, either crosses or figures to signify the number of votes he intends to give to such candidate. Where a ballot-paper is marked with crosses instead of figures the returning officer ought to count every cross as one vote for the candidate opposite whose name it is placed. If any ballot-paper be marked with a less number of crosses than the voter has votes at that election, the returning officer, in performing his duty of counting the votes, ought not to act upon any presumption or inference that the voter intended to exhaust his whole voting power. If, therefore, there are fifteen candidates for election, and a ballot-paper be marked with a single cross placed opposite the name of one only of those candidates, it ought to be counted as one vote, and not as fifteen votes, for that candidate. So, if a single cross be placed opposite the names of three or five of the fifteen candidates, it ought to be counted as one vote, and not as five or three votes, for the candidate opposite whose name it is placed. MORRIS v. BEVES

Div. Ct. [1897] 1 Q. B. 449

7. — Election petition—Recount of votes—Correctness of Returning officer's figures—Onus of proof.

At an election for a school board there were eight candidates for five seats. The five highest on the poll, of whom the respondent was fifth, were declared by the returning officer to be elected. A petition was presented by the candidate who was sixth on the poll against the election of the respondent, on the ground that certain votes given for the petitioner had been wrongly counted for the respondent or for some other candidate, and the petitioner claimed the seat. A recount having been had of the votes given for the respondent and the petitioner, it appeared that the petitioner had a majority over the respondent. The votes of the other candidates were not recounted:—

Held, that the petitioner was entitled to the seat, for that it was enough for him to establish that he had more votes than the respondent, and that it was unnecessary for him to recount the votes given for the first four candidates. LORD MONESWELL v. THOMPSON - Div. Ct. [1898] 1 Q. B. 479

When a school board acquire land, whether by agreement or compulsion, for the purposes of the Elementary Education Act, 1870, and purchase with notice of a restrictive covenant to which the land was subject in the hands of the vendor, the covenantee cannot maintain an action against the school board for breach of covenant; his only remedy is compensation under s. 68 of the Lands Consolidation Act, 1845. *KIRBY v. 10. — Teacher's remuneration—Superannuation fund—Management by board—Elementary Education Act, 1870 (33 & 34 Vict. c. 75), s. 35.

A school board established and managed a superannuation fund for the payment of allowances to their officers and teachers upon their superannuation. This fund was provided by annual deductions from the salaries of the officers and teachers, made in pursuance of contracts between them and the board:—

Held, affirming the judgment of a Divisional Court, [1898] 1 Q. B. 4, that the officers and teachers could not recover back the amount of the deductions from their salaries, for (1) even if it was ultra vires for the board to pay the expenses of managing the fund out of the school rates, it was no part of the contract between the board and the officers and teachers that this should be done, and the making of the contract was therefore not ultra vires; (2) assuming that the board could not undertake the management of the fund, in the absence of power under the Elementary Education Acts to do so, the money having been applied to the purposes for which it was subscribed, and the subscribers having had the right to participate in the benefits of the fund, there had been no failure of consideration. PHILLIPS v. A society falling within the general scope of the Literary and Scientific Institutions Act, 1854, may be an institution in the nature of a joint stock co. within the exception in s. 30, although not formed for purposes of profit, if it has the other usual indicia of a joint stock co.—as, for example, if it has common property derived from the contributions of its members, and held by them in transferable shares.

In re The Bristol Athenæum, (1889) 43 Ch. D. 236, considered.

A horticultural society was constituted in 1844 under a deed which provided that any person who paid a certain fixed sum to the funds of the society should be a member and entitled to one share in the society, which was to be transferable by him or his legal personal representatives, and that each member should pay a fixed annual subscription, and should be entitled to admission for himself and family to the gardens of the society, but should not be entitled to any dividend or bonus, nor to any interest in the property of the society except the right to participate in the profits on a dissolution:—

Held, that the society came within the exception in s. 30 of the Literary and Scientific Institutions Act, 1854, and that upon dissolution the property of the society became distributable among the members. In re JONES. LEGG v. ELLISON — Stirling J. [1898] 2 Ch. 83

1. — Reappointment of trustee—Discharge of both trustee and bankrupt—Sequestration—Bankruptcy (Scotland) Act, 1856 (19 & 20 Vict. c. 79), ss. 102, 103, 132, 152, 155.

The Ct. of Sess. has power to revive a sequestration after both the bankrupt and trustee have been discharged, where the bankrupt has been discharged without composition, and there are funds not belonging to the sequestrated estate still unrecovered, and the creditors have not been paid in full. The discharge of a trustee in ignorance or inadvertence that the funds vested in him by the sequestration have not been fully recovered does not revest such funds in the bankrupt. The appointment of a new trustee in such a case is mere machinery for carrying out the Bankruptcy (Scotland) Act, 1856. An application for this purpose is to be made to the Inner House.

The magistrates and council of Leith, who were also the local authority for public health, incurred costs in opposing in Parliament a bill for amalgamating the burghal territory of Leith and Portobello with an enlarged district subject to the government of the new and extended corporation of the city of Edinburgh, and they succeeded in having the bill thrown out as regards Leith:—

Held, affirming the decision of the Ct. of Sess., Leith Dock Commrs. v. Leith (Magistrates of), (1897) 25 R. 126, that it was ultra vires of the magistrates to include the expenses of the opposition in the public health assessment as expenses “incurred in executing” that act.

By a clause in an agreement for the sale by M. of property to B., it was provided that the arrangement proceeded upon the basis that the net profits of the property amounted to — pounds on the average. A day was named for completion; if the facts were not as stated, the arrangement was to be at an end; B. was to be at liberty to examine the books.

B. agreed to sell the property to C. at an enhanced price by a conveyance; M., at the instance of B., conveyed the property to C.

More than a year after the conveyance to C. it was discovered that the books had been improperly dealt with by a clerk of M. without M.'s knowledge, so as to make the profits appear greater. An action was begun by C., with the concurrence of B., for reduction of the sale:—

Held, that C. and B. had no title to maintain the action, for the contract did not provide for the insertion in the disposition of a clause making that disposition void if the profits were less than stated, the parties contemplating that the time given for completion was sufficient for ascertaining what profits had been made.

In an action by a husband against his wife for divorce on the ground of desertion for the statutory period, under the Scots Act, 1573, c. 55, it appeared that she had left him because of conduct on his part causing her mental distress sufficient to interfere with her restoration to health, and because of menaces by him sufficient to create in her a well-founded apprehension of physical restraint, and culminating in an act of violence against her person:—

Held, that she had reasonable cause for leaving her husband's house, and for declining to return to it, and that there was a good defence to the action. Whether in an action for adherence by a husband, misconduct on his part short of cruelty or other matrimonial offence may be a ground for refusing relief, quære.

More than forty years ago lands were conveyed to a ry. co. "in implement of the said decree arbitral." The disposition declared that, "The said ry. co. shall be bound and obliged to preserve the effective drainage of the lands in so far as the same may be interfered with by the ry. works, and to keep up the works, fences, watercourses, and others falling upon them under the Railways Clauses (Scotland) Act, 1845, and protect and keep in repair the bottoms and sides of the streams deepened below the natural level by the ry. co., and also to keep the same clear in so far as affected by the ry. works." In 1897 the First Div. of the Ct. of Sess., reversing the decision of the Lord Ordinary, ordered the appellants to make further and better accommodation:—

Held, that the Railways Clauses Act, 1845, s. 65, expressly and in terms protects ry. cos., after five years, from the burden the respondent attempted to throw on the appellants, and there was nothing in the decree arbitral—the governing instrument—or the evidence to shew that the appellants had ever dreamed of waiving the bene-

The husband received the purchase-money. There was no marriage contract. The spouses separated by consent, and the wife executed a deed of revocation of all donations and provisions in her husband's favour. On an action brought for a declaration that the price of the estates in the husband's hands was either surrogatum for her heritage not subject to ius mariti or a donation validly revoked:—

The lease exceeding twenty-one years, the co. under the Valuation of Lands (Scotland) Act, 1854, s. 6, became primarily liable to pay and did pay during the whole term of the lease, "owner's assessments, rates, and taxes," amounting in the aggregate to

Held, reversing the decision of the Ct. of Sess., Glasgow Tramway and Omnibus Co. v. Glasgow Corporation, (1897) 24 R. 628, that the assessments, rates, and taxes, whether imperial or local, levied on the owner in respect of a tramway or other erection in solo, were an expense connected with the tramway or erection, and that the co. were bound by their lease to relieve the corporation from these expenses, and were not entitled to claim reimbursement. *GLASGOW CORPORATION v. to credit—Pleading—Mercantile Law (Scotland) Amendment Act, 1856 (19 & 20 Vict. c. 60), s. 6.

By s. 6 of the Mercantile Law (Scotland) Amendment Act, 1856, it is provided inter alia that "All representations and assurances as to the character, conduct, credit, ability, trade, or dealings of any person, made or granted to the effect or for the purpose of enabling such person to obtain credit, money, goods," &c., "shall be in writing and shall be subscribed by the person . . . making such representations and assurances, or by some persons duly authorized by him or them, otherwise the same shall have no effect."

The pursuers alleged that the defenders' agent, knowing that D., R. & Co., customers of the defenders, were largely indebted to the defenders' bank and were insolvent, conceived a fraudulent design of obtaining the pursuers' acceptances in favour of D., R. & Co., in order to apply them pro tanto in reducing D., R. & Co.'s debt to the defenders' bank. That in pursuance of this fraudulent scheme, D., R. & Co. applied to the pursuers for accommodation, and referred them to the defenders' agent, who falsely assured the pursuers, first, that D., R. & Co. were in a thoroughly sound condition financially and only required temporary accommodation; secondly, that the sum due to the defenders' bank was very trifling; thirdly, that D., R. & Co. had made up the losses which they had sustained through another co.; and fourthly, that no portion of the proceeds of any acceptances by the pursuers would be applied in extinction of the bank's debt or of any obligation to them. That in reliance on these assurances the pursuers granted acceptances to D., R. & Co., which were applied to the credit of D., R. & Co.'s banking account with the defenders. D., R. & Co. were sequestrated, and the pursuers, as the bills fell due, were compelled to pay them. All the representations relied on were made orally:—

Held, that there was no cause of action, for as to the three first allegations, which undoubtedly came within the Act, the terms of s. 6 were comprehensive and imperative that no oral representations made with the intent specified in the section should be of any legal effect, however false and fraudulent; and secondly, assuming that the fourth representation was independent of the statute, there was no relevant allegation that the bank did not give full effect to the alleged representation of their officer.

The English rule against double portions to children does not obtain in Scotland.

In an ante-nuptial marriage settlement made on the marriage of his adopted daughter the testator covenanted that his executors should within six months after his death pay the marriage contract trustees 4000*l.* with interest at the rate of 4 per cent. from his death, to be held on trusts declared by reference to the trusts of the adopted daughter's property; with the exception that on the failure of children of the marriage, before the period of vesting, the 4000*l.* should be held on trust for the testator absolutely. By the marriage contract the adopted daughter assigned to her trustees all after-acquired property. Subsequently the testator, by his trust disposition and settlement, among other "legacies and annuities" directed his trustees to pay "a legacy of 4000*l.*" to his said adopted daughter, "who shall be allowed interest at 5 per cent. on that sum so long as she shall prefer to allow it to remain as part of the share in the indigo concern":—

Held, that by Scottish law there was no presumption that the 4000*l.* given by the will was intended by the testator to be in satisfaction of the 4000*l.* covenanted to be paid by the marriage settlement, and that the proper inference was that the legacy was given by him as an additional benefit.

SECT. 16 of the Glasgow Police (Amendment) Act, 1890, enacts that if the drains of any house, &c., are found to be defective, the owner of the premises shall be bound, immediately on an "order to that effect being given by the Police Commrs., to carry out all necessary operations for removing defects of structure, or doing such acts as may be requisite to prevent risk to health, and, failing compliance with such order, the Police Commrs. may execute the work and recover the expense thereof as damages from the owner."

The Commrs. having found that the drains of a block of houses were defective issued an order to the owners to repair the same, and, they having failed, the Commrs. proceeded to execute the work themselves; but, instead of repairing the old drain, they constructed a new drain on a different site and outfall into the main sewer. In an action for the expenses, the Ct. of Sess. assuoziled the owners upon the ground that s. 16 of the Act of 1890 did not warrant the formation of a new system of drainage. This House having remitted the case to the Ct. of Sess. to find whether the Commrs. had considered that the new drainage was necessary, that Court found that part of the drainage had been considered necessary, but the rest had not:—

Then, fourthly, he directed his trustees after his death to pay the free proceeds of the trust funds to his second son and the heirs male of his body; whom failing, to certain substitutes; whom failing, to the heirs female of the body of his second son. The second son succeeded to the estate, and died, leaving issue only two daughters, of whom the eldest succeeded to the estate, and was declared by Royal Letters Patent to succeed her father in the title and estate of C.:—

Held, that the daughters divided the income,

42. — Succession duties—Estate duty—Fee and life-rent.

A testator gave his wife a life-rent of his lands, and the fee of the residue of his movable estate, and conferred upon her full power to "raise such sums as may be required to pay all debts and succession duties which may fall upon her after my decease as well as all my debts and funeral expenses":—

Held, that this power did not authorize her to charge the heritage with his debts and funeral expenses, or with the whole estate duty, but only to charge it with the rateable part of estate duty effecting to the heritage itself. FRASER v. CROFT, (1898) 25 Rettie, 496

Ct. of Sess. (Sc.) [1898] W. N. 134

43. — Vesting—No gift till a certain event—Direct disposition of heritage.

A testator left to his wife who survived him "for her sole use and enjoyment during the term of her natural life" certain lands, "and after the death of my said wife, I hereby dispose, convey, and make over my said lands . . . to C., and the heirs whatsoever of his body; whom failing," to the brothers and sisters of C. in their order; whom failing, to a certain series of heirs. C. survived him:—

Held, that a right had vested in C. a mortis testatoris. FRASER v. CROFT, (1898) 25 Rettie, 496

Ct. of Sess. (Sc.) [1898] W. N. 134

44. — Vesting—Postponed period of distribution—Conditional institution.

A testator directed his trustees to allow his widow the life-rent use of his house and such allowance as they thought necessary, and "on the dissolution and winding-up of the firm of B. & Co." (of which he was a partner), "in the event of the predecease of my said wife, and if she then survives, on her death, to realize my whole means and estate and to divide the same into four equal shares, and pay one share to each of my children" A., B., C., and D., "or to their respective heirs." The widow survived the testator, and the firm had not been wound up. C. and D. survived the testator, but were dead:—

Held, affirming the decision of the Ct. of Sess., Bowman's Trustees v. Bowman's Trustees, (1898) 25 R. 811, but not on the same reasoning, that the interests of all the children were not in suspense, but had vested a morte testatoris. BOWMAN v. BOWMAN H. L. (Sc.) [1899] A. C. 518

45. — Vesting—Substitution—General disposition.

A. died leaving a holograph settlement, by which he gave his widow a life interest in all his property. He gave to B. his estate of S., but wished it to be expressly understood that in the event of B. dying without heirs male then S. was to revert to C. B. survived A., but died before testator's widow, unmarried, leaving a general disposition of all his estate:—

Held, that the fee of S. vested in B. after A.'s death, and that the clause of return to C. was not higher than simple substitution, and had been evacuated by B.'s trust disposition.

46. — Will—Provision for widow—Partial intestacy—Terce, jus relictæ, and legitim.

A testator by his will made a provision for his wife declaring it to be in full of all claims by her of terce and jus relictæ or otherwise. Through the death of certain devisees before vesting took place, the residue fell into intestacy:—

Held, affirming the decision of the Ct. of Sess., Hamilton's Trustees v. Boyes, (1898) 25 R. 899, that the declaration was to be construed as excluding the widow's claim in so far only as conflicting with the will, and an event happening which the testator never contemplated, the widow was entitled both to her provision and to terce and jus relictæ out of such heritable and movables as had fallen into intestacy. *NATSMITH v. Superior and Vassal.*47. — Entry—Casualty—Composition—Relief—Trust.

J.'s ancestor acquired three parcels of land by purchase, in all of which his authors were infeft and entered with the superior. He took base infeftment with one parcel; but none of the series of his heirs on whom his succession devolved expedite a feudal title or were entered with the superior. A trust over the lands was created by the appellant's grandfather, and the trustees after his death were entered with the superior. Ultimately the lands were reconveyed by the surviving trustee to the appellant, who was infeft, and under the Conveyancing (Scotland) Act, 1874, impliedly entered with the superior:—

Held, that the appellant was liable to the superior in a composition.

48. — Obligation in feu charter to rebuild—Disposition of feu after obligation has become enforceable—Conveyancing (Scotland) Act, 1874 (37 & 38 Vict. c. 94), s. 4, sub-s. 2.

A proprietor by feu-contract disposed certain subjects to a co. "and its successors and assignees whomsoever" under the condition (inter alia), "That the co. and its foresaids" should be bound to erect buildings suitable for a hydropathic establishment of not less value than 15,000*l.* and to uphold buildings of that value in all time coming, and to keep the same insured against fire to the extent of not less than that sum, and in case the said buildings should be destroyed by fire, to rebuild the same so as to maintain the total value of 15,000*l.* Buildings were erected of the stipulated value, and insured. The co. sold the subjects to the first-named appellants. On Nov. 7, 1893, the buildings were destroyed by fire, and on the 27th of the same month the superior, the respondent, raised an action against the first appellants for performance of the obligation to rebuild. Before defences were lodged the first appellants, by a duly recorded disposition, conveyed the subjects to the second appellants, who subsequently conveyed them to one John Wilson. All these were thereafter made parties to the action.

The first appellants then pleaded that, as they were no longer vassals in the feu, they were not liable in the performance of the obligation.

The Ct. of Sess. decided that the obligation, having become prestable during the first appellant's tenure, continued to be binding upon them; and (2.) that all the defenders were jointly and severally liable to rebuild in respect that the obligation was a condition of the grant remaining unfulfilled during the respective periods of their tenure of the subjects.

Upon appeal to the House of Lords the appellants, after argument, consented that the appeal should be dismissed. CALLANDER AND TROSSACHS HYDROPATHIC CO. AND THE EAGLE PROPERTY CO. v. MARSHALL - - H. L. (Sc.) [1896] A. C. 223

Walls.*49. — Boundary wall—Mutual gable—Half cost of erection.

The proprietor of two adjoining building plots erected a house upon one of them, building the whole gable half upon one plot and half upon the other plot. He afterwards conveyed the plot with the house upon it to A. The mutual gable, resting partly on the two plots, was described in the conveyance as a mutual gable. He subsequently sold the other plot, and the purchaser proceeded to erect a house upon it, making use of the mutual gable. In the letters of sale to A. the vendor said: "The unused half of the gable and boundary walls is not included in the offer." In an action by A.'s successor against the purchaser of the second plot for half the cost of the mutual gable wall, the deft. relied upon the words of the letters as shewing that A. had not acquired the claim for recompense for the unused half of the gable :—

Held, affirming the decision of the Ct. of Sess., Berkeley v. Baird, (1895) 22 R. 372, that A.'s successor was entitled to claim from the purchaser of the second plot one-half of the value of the mutual gable, and that there was no inconsistency between the letters of sale and the words of the conveyance. *BAIRD v. A., by a mortis causa settlement, conveyed to B., his son, his whole estate, heritable and movable, subject to a free annuity to C., his daughter, which was "hereby declared to be a real burden on the estates and effects hereby conveyed." After A.'s death B. completed his title to the heritable subjects by recording notarial instruments in accordance with the Titles to Lands Consolidation (Scotland) Act, 1868, in all which notarial instruments the annuity was declared to be a real burden on the land. B.'s estate was sequestrated, and his trustee claimed that C.'s annuity had not been validly constituted a real burden on the lands :—

Held, that the annuity had been constituted a real burden on the lands.

The pfts. were the local authority of L., and the seashore at L. between high and low water-mark was vested in them under a lease from the Crown. W., a clergyman of the Church of England, held services and delivered addresses on the seashore without the consent of the pfts., and asserted that the seashore was a highway and that he had a right to do so. The pfts. brought an action against W., claiming a declaration that he was not entitled to hold services, &c., on the seashore without their consent, and an injunction to restrain him from so doing. There was no evidence that the acts of W. caused an obstruction or led to a breach of the peace; nor did W. adduce any evidence of a prescriptive right or custom in support of his contention :—

Held, that the pfts. were entitled to the declaration for which they asked; but that the matter was too trivial for an injunction, which must be refused.

SEQUESTRATION.

1. — Application of proceeds in satisfying claims of creditor in action generally.

Where a writ of sequestration was issued against a debt. for disobedience to an order directing him to transfer certain shares, and there was a fund in Court representing the proceeds of the sequestration, the Court held that it had jurisdiction to order payment out of the fund to the plt. of costs which the debt. had been ordered to pay to him, and that it was not necessary to resort to the circuitous process of compelling the plt. to issue a second writ of sequestration. ETHERINGTON v. BIG BLOW GOLD MINES, LD. Kekewich J. [1897] W. N. 21 (9)

2. — Costs—Enforcing payment of—R. S. C., Order XLII., r. 6; Order XLIII., rr. 7, 8—Married woman.

The old practice as to sequestration for non-payment of costs is superseded by Order XLIII., r. 7. Where an order has been made directing a party to pay costs without limiting any time for payment and the costs have been taxed, an immediate sequestration to enforce payment can be issued without any previous four day order. An order to pay costs within four days and in case of non-payment for sequestration is wrong in form, as it is not competent to make an order for the issue of writs of attachment or sequestration on a

3. — Discretion—Non-payment of costs—Procedure—R. S. C., 1883, Order XLIII., r. 7.

When application is made for leave to issue a sequestration for non-payment of costs the Court or judge should be satisfied that the application is reasonable, but it is not necessary to point to any particular property which may be made available for the payment of the costs by sequestration.

When the Court or judge to whom the application is made has exercised a discretion and made an order, that order ought not to be interfered with by a superior Court unless it is shewn that there has been an improper exercise of the discretion or some miscarriage of justice. HULBERT v. CATHCART - H. L. (E.) [1896] A. C. 470

The month's notice required by Order LXIV., r. 13, where there have been no proceedings for a year, applies to pleadings, &c., in the action, and not to motions for execution of judgment, whether by sequestration or otherwise. Leave granted for sequestration to issue for balance of costs which should be found due from deft., although the time allowed by Order XLII., r. 22, had elapsed. TAYLOR v. ROE (No. 2)

5. — Payment of costs—Service—Practice—R. S. C., Order XLI., r. 5; Order XLIII., rr. 6, 7.

In the case of a writ of sequestration issued by leave of a judge to enforce payment of costs under Order XLIII., r. 7, the provisions of Order XLI., r. 5, and Order XLIII., r. 6, are inapplicable. Therefore in such a case it is not necessary that the order for payment of costs should limit a time for payment, or should bear the indorsement mentioned in Order XLI., r. 5, nor is personal service of it essential. In re Lumley, Ex parte Cathcart, [1894] 2 Ch. 271, followed. *In re DEAKIN. A bonus dividend was returned to the shareholders of a co. in the form of seventy-five fully paid new shares of 10l. each. These new shares were sold for 1363l.:—

- 5. — Company—Profits not divided—Tenant for life and reversioner—Capital or income.

A testator gave his estate on trust for conversion, with power to postpone conversion, and directed that interest produced in the interim should be treated as interest. He bequeathed, inter alia, certain 10l. shares with 8l. paid up to B. for life, with remainder to C. The co. was wound up and reconstructed, and paid 9l. 5s. for each share. The excess arose from profits retained to meet contingencies, and from profits in excess of 10l. per cent. retained to make up dividends if they should fall below 5 per cent.:—

Held, by C. A. (reversing Chanc. of Lancaster), that a tenant for life of shares has only a right to dividends and bonuses declared during his life, and that the excess price of 1l. 5s. per share was not income but capital. In re ARMITAGE. ARMITAGE v. GARNETT - C. A. [1893] 3 Ch. 337

- 6. — Company—Sale of company's undertaking.

A co. sold its undertaking for a sum which, after deducting an amount equivalent to its paid-up capital, left a large surplus:—

Stock in a public co. forming part of a testator's residuary estate was settled upon trust for A. for life, and after her death "to pay transfer and assign my residuary estate and the stocks funds and securities upon which the same shall be invested unto and amongst" certain beneficiaries. After the death of the tenant for life the stock was sold "cum dividend" under an order of the Court for the purpose of distribution. This order was made in the absence of the legal personal representatives of the tenant for life. After the sale a dividend was declared and received by the purchaser in respect of profits, a portion of which had been earned prior to the death of the tenant for life:—

Held, that the estate of the tenant for life was not entitled under the Apportionment Act, 1870, to be paid out of the purchase-money of the stock anything in respect of the dividend; but, inasmuch as if the trust had been strictly carried out in accordance with the terms of the will, by transferring the investments to the beneficiaries, the representatives of the tenant for life would have been in a position, either directly, or through the trustees, to obtain payment of an apportioned part of the dividend, their claim ought under the special circumstances of the case to be acceded to.

9. — Conversion, Trust for—Tenant for life and remainderman—Discretionary power of postponement—Annual produce until conversion to be deemed annual income of converted fund—Reversionary interest—Omission to convert—Non-exercise of discretion by trustees—Right of tenant for life—Rate of interest.

When property is given by will on trusts for conversion and investment, and to hold the investments on trust for a tenant for life and remaindermen, with a discretionary power to the trustees to postpone the conversion, and a provision that the income until conversion is to go to the tenant for life, that provision extends to property (such as a reversionary interest) which is not producing income as well as to property of a wasting character.

MacKie v. MacKie, (1845) 5 Hare, 70, followed.
Decision of Stirling J. affirmed.

In adjusting the rights as between tenant for life and remaindermen in respect of a reversionary interest which ought to have been but was not converted by trustees:—

Held, that interest should be calculated at the rate of 3 per cent.

In re Goodenough, [1895] 2 Ch. 537, followed.

A testator bequeathed his personal estate to two trustees, upon trust for conversion and investment of the proceeds, and to pay the income of the investments to his sister during her life, and after her death to hold the capital on trusts for her children. But, if no child of the sister should attain a vested interest, the trust fund was to go to the two trustees beneficially, in equal moieties. The testator gave the trustees a discretionary power to postpone for such period as to them should seem expedient the conversion of any part of his personal estate, but the outstanding personal estate was to be subject to the trusts thereinbefore declared, and the yearly produce thereof was to be deemed annual income for the purpose of the trusts. At the time of the testator's death he had no property of a wasting character (except some leaseholds, as to which a special provision was made by his will), but he was entitled to a reversionary interest in a sum of Consols, subject to the life interest therein of his sister. When he died she was a spinster aged thirty-five. Ten years afterwards she was found a lunatic, and less than two years after that she died intestate. She had never married.

The trustees did not during her life sell the reversionary interest, and it fell in upon her death:—

Held, by C. A. (upon evidence which was not before Stirling J.), that the trustees had never exercised their discretion as to the conversion of the reversionary interest, and that under the circumstances it ought to have been sold and the proceeds invested so as to produce income for the tenant for life:

Held, therefore, that the fund must be apportioned between the representative of the tenant for life and the remaindermen on the principle laid down in In re Earl of Chesterfield's Trusts, (1883) 24 Ch. D. 643, interest being calculated at the rate of 3 per cent. per annum. ROWLLS v. BEBB. In re ROWLLS. WALTERS v. SOLICITOR FOR THE TREASURY - C. A. [1900] W. N. 108; [1900] 2 Ch. 107

10. — Conversion—Trust for immediate conversion—Interim rents—Investment.

Trust after the death of A. for immediate conversion of realty with no power to postpone sale. Income of property when sold and invested to go to B. for life. B. died before the property was sold. The property was sold without undue delay. Question to whom belonged the rents received between the death of A. and the sale:—

Held, that notwithstanding the absence of any power to postpone the sale or any direction as to the interim rents, the whole rents between the deaths of A. and B. belonged to B.'s personal estate. HOPE v. D'HÉDOUVILLE

A testator gave his residuary estate to trustees upon trusts for sale and conversion, and empowered them in their absolute discretion to retain securities in their existing state of investment. The trustees retained certain bonds which were liable to be paid off at par at a future date, but of which the present value was considerably above par:—

Held, there was a gift of the full income to the tenants for life. In re THOMAS. WOOD v. THOMAS — Kekewich J. [1891] 3 Ch. 482

12. — Insurance, Life—Premiums—Mortgage debt—Adjustment of liability for premiums and interest—Tenant for life and remainderman.

Where trustees paid premiums on a mortgaged policy on a life, and interest on the mortgage out of income, and the life fell in:—

Held, that the tenant for life was entitled to be recouped the amount of income so expended with interest at 4 per cent. out of the property preserved by the expenditure—that is the surplus policy money—after deducting the mortgage, and that the balance must be apportioned between capital and income according to the rule in Chesterfield's Case, 24 Ch. D. 643. In re MORLEY. MORLEY v. HAIG — Kekewich J. [1895] 2 Ch. 738

Where a testator charged his residuary estate with a principal sum and interest to be settled upon a tenant for life and remaindermen (the interest to be paid to the tenant for life and the capital to the remaindermen) and the interest fell into arrear and the residuary estate realized less than the principal sum:—

Held, following In re Moore, (1885) 54 L. J. (Ch.) 432, that the realized sum ought to be apportioned between the tenant for life and the remaindermen in the proportions which the arrears of interest and the principal sum bore to each other, the Court intimating an opinion that the apportionment in In re Foster, (1890) 45 Ch. D. 629, was intended to be confined to the case of a mortgagee in possession. In re BARKER. BARKER v. BARKER

14. — Power to postpone sale and conversion of estate—Property “not actually producing income”—Tenant for life and remainderman—Will—Conversion.

The will of a testator contained the ordinary clause empowering his trustees to postpone the sale and conversion of his estate, and declaring that the income thereof, previous to the conversion, should be applied as if it were income arising under investments authorized by the will. Then followed this proviso: “But no property not actually producing income which shall form part of my estate shall be treated as producing income or as entitling any party to the receipt of income.”

There was a debt, due to the testator at the time of his death, which could not be got in, and the trustees took from the debtor as security for it a third mortgage upon certain policies of insurance on his life. The debtor died in the lifetime of a lady who was tenant for life under the will, and the trustees, who had received neither principal nor interest in respect of the debt, realized their security, with the result that, after payment of the prior charges, they received a sum which was less than the amount due by all the interest and some of the capital:—

Held (reversing the decision of Stirling J.), (1) that according to the rule of the Court, this sum represented the arrears of interest as well as the capital, and (2) that it must be treated as property actually producing income within the meaning of the proviso, and must be apportioned between the tenant for life and the remainderman in the proportion that the interest due from the date of the mortgage bore to the capital thereby secured. In re HUBBICK. A business was bequeathed to trustees on trust for sale, with power in their absolute discretion to postpone sale, and directions pending sale to pay the profits to the same persons and in the same manner as income for the trust estate:—

A testator devised and bequeathed his property to trustees, upon trust for his mother for her life, with remainder to other persons. And he gave to his trustees, if and when they should consider it expedient, full power to sell and dispose of all or any part of his estate. Part of the testator's property consisted of the reversion, expectant on the death of his mother, of funds settled on her marriage of which she was tenant for life. The trustees did not convert this reversionary interest during the mother's life:—

Held, that the discretionary power of sale given by the will to the trustees excluded the application of the rule in Howe v. Earl of Dartmouth, and that the personal representative of the mother was not, after her death, entitled to any part of the proceeds of the sale of the reversion. In re FITCAIRN. BRANDRETH v. Where the tenant for life sold freehold ground rents and the proceeds were invested in long leaseholds, thereby doubling the income:—

Held, that the income of the leaseholds should be in accordance with the provisions of s. 34 of the Settled Land Act, 1882, by giving the tenant for life a sum equal to the sold ground rents and

A testator gave his residuary estate, to his wife for life, with a gift over. Part of the residue consisted of consolidated and preference stock of a gas co. which stood at 100 per cent. premium; testator had made the investment himself:—

Held, (1) that to entitle the wife to the income of the fund as it stood something equivalent to a specific gift was required; (2) that the trustees must put a value on the stock and pay the wife 4 per cent. on it, invest the surplus income and pay the interest thereon to the wife, the corpus to belong to the remainderman. *In re EATON. Land which was subject to mortgages was settled, subject to a term for securing incumbrances, to the use, in the events which happened, of A. for life, with remainders over. The trusts of the term provided that so long as the mortgages remained unpaid the trustees should receive the rents and profits and manage the premises and keep down the interest of the mortgage debts and certain rent-charges created by the settlement, that they should then pay to the tenant for life for the time being subject to the term an annuity of 600*l.* a year, and should apply the residue of the rents and profits towards the payment of the principal moneys charged by the mortgages, and there was a proviso for the ceasing of the term upon the discharge of the mortgage debts. The settlement conferred on the trustees an immediate power of sale and exchange, but no power of leasing:—

The Court, having held that A. was a person having the powers of a tenant for life under the Settled Land Act, 1882, ordered him to be let into possession upon his undertaking to perform the trusts of the term, and gave him the custody of the title-deeds.

The Court would have made the order apart from the annuity to A.

A. subsequently contracted to sell, under the powers of the Settled Land Acts, certain portions of the settled lands, including parts of all the mortgaged lands and a portion which was unincumbered, and in order to complete the sale it was necessary that the mortgages should be paid off. A. therefore directed that the trustees should apply the proceeds of the sale in paying off the mortgages. He deposed that he considered that this would be for the benefit of all the parties entitled under the settlement, seeing that the mortgages bore interest at 4 per cent., whereas the purchase-money could not be invested in trustee securities to yield more than 3 per cent. Upon a summons to determine whether the mortgages ought not to be kept on foot for the benefit of the ultimate remainderman:—

Held, that the beneficiaries under the settlement took subject to the power of sale conferred on the trustees, and that inasmuch as the trustees in the exercise of that power might properly, for the purpose of carrying into effect a beneficial sale, pay off the existing incumbrances out of the purchase-money, a tenant for life doing the same thing under the powers of the Settled Land Acts ought not to be held to be acting unjustly towards the remaindermen; that consequently the mortgages ought not to be kept on foot, and that upon the payment off out of the capital moneys of all the mortgages the term would cease.

Semble, the Court would have arrived at the same conclusion if the settlement had conferred no power of sale upon the trustees. In re RICHARDSON. RICHARDSON v. RICHARDSON. In re RICHARDSON. RICHARDSON v. RICHARDSON settled estate, and apply the money in pulling down and rebuilding houses on the estate.

Settled land was vested in trustees upon trust for P. for life, and after his death upon trust for his children. He had two children, both infants. Four of the houses on the land were old and in bad repair, and it appeared that if they were pulled down and rebuilt at an expense of about 8000*l.* the value of the settled property would probably be increased to 13,000*l.*, and its income more than doubled. There were no powers in the settlement by which this could be done, and it did not appear that it was necessary by way of salvage. An application by the trustees to raise money by mortgage to be applied for the above purpose was refused for want of jurisdiction.

42. — Recouping expenditure—Improvements—Tenant for life—Purchase of adjoining land under right of pre-emption—Addition to settled estate—Expenditure by tenant for life—Permanent improvements—Trustee and cestui que trust—Constructive trust—Remaindermen.

Where a constructive trustee of property has expended money thereon in permanent improvements, he is prima facie entitled to be recouped his expenditure to the extent of the improved value; and the fact that he is beneficially entitled as tenant for life under the constructive trust does not displace his right to recoupment.

H., tenant for life of a public-house settled by the will of E. W., purchased with his own moneys and had conveyed to him in fee an adjoining piece of land, over which he had, under the Turnpike Acts, a right of pre-emption by virtue of the ownership of the public-house. He then at his own expense enlarged and permanently improved the public-house by new and additional buildings extending over the land purchased by him. He afterwards died having devised all his real estate to the defts., one of whom he appointed his executor.

It being admitted that H. must be regarded as having held the land purchased and the buildings upon it as a constructive trustee for the several persons entitled under the will of E. W., and therefore as having been tenant for life only of the property:—

Held, in an action by the remaindermen under the will of E. W. against the executor and devisees of H. to ascertain the rights of the parties, that H.'s executor was entitled to a charge on the land purchased and the buildings upon it, for (1.) the amount of the purchase-money paid by H., and of the costs of conveyance to him, with interest at 4 per cent. from his death; (2.) the amount by which, at H.'s death, the value of the land bought by him had been increased by his expenditure in permanent improvements, together with like interest; and that the persons entitled under E. W.'s will could only

The submission of a scheme before the execution of improvements is no longer necessary since the Act of 1890, and the Court has jurisdiction to sanction the re-imbursement of a tenant for life. But when a tenant for life who has not prepared a scheme asked for re-imbursement the Court should be vigilant and careful to see that no expenses were thrown on capital which from a business point of view might fairly come out of income.

Repairs incidental to the ordinary enjoyment of the property should not be allowed, nor the expense of additions and alterations to the sanitary arrangements of a mansion. In re TUCKER'S SETTLED ESTATES C. A. [1895] 2 Ch. 466

The settlement required that the money so raised should be repaid by instalments. The improvements authorized were similar to those authorized by s. 25 of the Settled Land Act, 1882:—

Held, (1) that the sinking fund formed by the repayments was capital within the meaning of the Act, and could be employed on further improvements; (2) that the tenant for life having taken the money for improvements under the settlement instead of applying under the Act, must continue to pay the instalments; (3) that having acted under the settlement did not preclude the tenant for life from exercising the powers given him by the Act. In re SUDBURY AND POYNTON SETTLED ESTATES. VERNON v. of the county. In 1897 the tenant for life, in exercise of the statutory power, contracted to sell this farm for 5500*l.* plus a further sum to be paid by the purchaser, after a valuation, for the straw, hay, crops, underwood, tenant's fixtures, fallow dressings, and half manures; the purchaser on paying a small deposit was allowed to go into immediate possession to cultivate the farm.

On completion of the purchase, the tenant for life claimed to be entitled to the whole of the sum paid by the purchaser under the valuation:—

Held, that the tenant for life was not entitled to any part of the valuation money paid by the purchaser or incoming tenant which represented the price of underwood, fallow dressings, or half manures, or fixtures permanently annexed to the buildings or land, which must be treated as capital moneys, and paid to the trustees. *In re ROSHER. In an action by the reversioner, claiming to have the reconveyance set aside or rectified, he gave evidence that he did not intend to pay off the mortgage debt for the benefit of the settlement, but that he intended to keep the charge alive for his own benefit:—

A testator who died in 1890 gave his residuary real and personal estate to trustees upon trust to convert the same and invest at such time as in their discretion they should think fit, and to pay the income to one for life, with remainders over. Power was given in the will to postpone conversion, and to retain any investments of the testator at the time of his death. There was no direction as to payment of the income of the retained funds. The trustees paid to the tenant for life the whole income, including that of certain investments which they had retained as held by the testator at his death, but which did not fall within the description of securities allowed by the investment clause contained in the will.

Held, that the tenant for life was not entitled to receive the income of the retained investments, and that such investments must be valued as at the end of a year from the testator's death, and that, as to the past, interest at the rate of 4 per cent. on that value ought to be allowed to the tenant for life, but as to the future at the rate of 3 per cent. *In re LYNCH-BLOSSE. C., tenant for life of a freehold house, who had mortgaged his life interest, in 1892 granted to the deft. a lease of the premises for seven years in consideration of a yearly rent of 25*l.* and covenants by the lessee to execute certain repairs and improvements. As an inducement to execute the deed the deft. had paid to C. the sum of 21*l.*, which he applied to his own use. There was no evidence that a higher rent could have been obtained. In an action to set aside the lease:—

Held, (1) that the Court, in giving relief to the beneficiaries, would not consider the question whether they had been damaged or not; (2) that on the evidence the payment to C. could not be regarded as a fine, and the liability of the deft. was not therefore limited to paying the sum over again to trustees appointed for the purposes of the Settled Land Acts; and (3) that, having regard to the improper payment to C., the “best rent” required by s. 7, sub-s. 2, of the Settled Land Act, 1882, had not been obtained, and consequently the lease was void. Part voluntary expenditure by lessee on buildings comprised in his lease is not consideration in law which will justify a tenant for life in granting a building lease under s. 8, sub-s. 1, of the Settled Land Act, 1882, at less than the best rent that can be reasonably obtained as required by s. 7, sub-s. 2. When a person has under several instruments a power of appointment over the same subject-matter, and makes an appointment in exercise of “every power” enabling him in that behalf, the power first in point of time is exercised; and if effectually exercised there remains no subject-matter on which the other powers can operate. The Court may also consider which power is most beneficial to the donee of the power.

By a settlement made in 1876 estates were limited, in the events which happened, to A. for life, remainder to B. for life, with remainders over. The settlement contained a power for every person “as and when he should be entitled to the possession or the receipt of the rents and profits” of the settled estates, to grant mining leases reserving the best rents or royalties “by the acre, ton, or otherwise” without taking any fine or premium. During A.’s life B. absolutely aliened his reversionary life interest for value. A. died in 1882. Between the coming into operation of the Settled Land Act, 1882, and of the Settled Land Act, 1890, after the later Act, B. granted mining leases reserving rents varying with the selling price of the minerals gotten, which was in accordance with the custom of the county. All the leases were granted in exercise of “every power” enabling B. in that behalf. Questions having arisen as to the validity of the leases, and whether they were granted under the power in the settlement or under the power in the Settled Land Acts:—

Held, (1.) that it was competent for B. to exercise the power of leasing in the settlement notwithstanding that he has aliened his life estate; and (2.) that the reservation of rents varying with the selling price of the minerals was within the power and valid:

Held, also, that the leases were granted under the power in the settlement, which was first in point of date, and not under the power in the Settled Land Acts:

Held, further, that, assuming the leases were granted under the Settled Land Acts, the “conflict” referred to in s. 56 of the Act of 1882 means a conflict between provisions connected with the execution of the power—e.g., the consent of a third party—and not with the result or subject-matter of the power. *EARL OF LONSDALE v. Sect. 11 of the Settled Land Act, 1882, does not apply to a mining lease granted by a tenant for life for giving effect to a contract entered into by a predecessor who was absolute owner. *In re KEMEYS-TYNTE. Under s. 11 of the Settled Land Act, 1890, a tenant for life has power to mortgage the unmortgaged part of settled land in order to pay off the incumbrances on the other part, but he is not justified in trying to preserve a heavily incumbered estate by mortgaging it if he thereby sacrifices the interest of existing incumbrancers. A tenant for life proposed to mortgage unincumbered lands to pay off incumbrances on other properties. Certain annuitants applied for an injunction on the ground that the effect of the mortgage would be injurious to their security, since ss. 20, 21 of the Settled Land Act, 1882, gave such a mortgage priority over all annuities and charges created by the settlement:—

Held, that having regard to s. 53 of the Act of 1882 and the circumstances, the Court could and should interfere to restrain the tenant for life from effecting the proposed mortgage. HAMPDEN v. EARL OF BUCKINGHAMSHIRE

A testator, who died in 1878, devised some cottages and marsh lands upon trust for his wife for life, she out of the rents and profits keeping "the premises in good tenantable repair and condition," and after her death upon trust for C. in fee. In 1882 C. mortgaged his reversion in fee to the widow, who was in receipt of the rents and profits of the property as tenant for life. She died in 1897, and her executors brought an action of foreclosure against C., who had made no payment either of principal or interest since the date of the mortgage, and who set up the Statutes of Limitations. The cottages were out of repair and the marsh lands had been depreciated to some extent by mowing:—

Held, that C. was entitled to damages for non-repair of the cottages, but not for depreciation of the marsh lands, the tenant for life in her dealings with the latter having followed the course that had been adopted by the testator:

Held, also, that C. on redeeming was not liable to six years' arrears of interest prior to the date of the writ, but must pay all arrears of interest with principal and costs from the date of the mortgage.

A tenant for life borrowed, between 1881 and 1885, under the Land Improvement Act, 1864, money for "improvements" and the repayment was secured by rent-charges. Between 1883 and 1885 some of these rent-charges were bought up by the trustee under s. 60 of the Act of 1864. In 1888 the portion of the estate on which the improvements were effected was sold, and the rent-charges shifted to the unsold portions:—

Held, inter alia, that the instalments of rent-charges falling due after the passing of the Settled Land Act, 1887, and after the question had been raised by the tenant for life, should be provided for out of capital moneys. In re HOWARD'S SETTLED ESTATES

The tenant for life of settled estates, in order to obtain a reduction of the rate of interest payable on money borrowed for improvements and secured by rent-charges under the Improvement of Land Act, 1864, caused the rent-charges to be transferred to an insurance society on payment to the original holders of a lump sum in consideration of their consenting to the transfer:—

Held, that the repayment of this sum to the tenant for life would not be an expenditure "in redeeming" the rent-charges, "or otherwise providing for the repayment thereof," within s. 1 of the Settled Land Act, 1887, and therefore ought not to be made out of capital money in the hands of the trustees of the settlement.

The fact that the Commrs. under the Act of 1864 sanctioned an improvement, in respect of which a rent-charge was created, as coming within a provision in that Act substantially identical with a provision in the Settled Land Act, 1882, was treated by the Court as evidence that such improvement was within the last-mentioned provision. In re VERNEY'S SETTLED ESTATES —Conditions of sale—“Wilful default.”

“Incumbrance” in s. 5 of the Settled Land Act, 1882, includes a rent-charge created under the improvement of Land Act, 1864; and therefore where settled land is subject to such a rent-charge, the tenant for life can, on a sale of part of the land, effectually exonerate the part sold by obtaining the consent of the owner of the rent-charge to charging the whole of it upon the unsold land under s. 5 of the Act of 1882, and the intervention of the Board of Agriculture under ss. 68 and 69 of the Act of 1864 is unnecessary.

Decision of Kekewich J. reversed.

As the exoneration operates as an effectual discharge of the land sold, the purchaser is not liable, under s. 63 of the Act of 1864 and s. 16 of the Tithe Act, 1842 (5 & 6 Vict. c. 54), to contribution at the instance of owners of unsold land subject to the rent-charge.

Per Kekewich J.: Where a purchase cannot be completed by the appointed day through the failure of the vendor to obtain the concurrence of necessary parties, he cannot claim interest from the purchaser under the usual condition requiring the purchaser to pay interest on the purchase-money “if from any cause whatever, other than the wilful default of the vendor,” the purchase is not completed by the appointed day, the delay being attributable to the vendor’s “wilful default.”

In this case it was held that the evidence did not shew that the proposed repairs were in the nature of salvage the cost of which it was impossible to pay otherwise than out of capital, and that therefore the Court had (independently of the special provisions of the will) no power under its general jurisdiction to direct the payment of the costs out of capital:—

Held, also, that the power given by the will to the trustees, to make out of the income or capital of the personal estate any outlay for the benefit of the estate, did not authorize the trustees to make out of capital any payment which would otherwise have been properly payable only out of incomes or vice versa.

A testator devised two estates, W. and S., to his son J. for life, remainder to such of J.'s children as should attain twenty-one, and his residuary estate to J. absolutely. W. was subject to a mortgage in fee. S. was unincumbered. J. sold part of S. under the Settled Land Act, and the money was applied in part-payment of the mortgage on W. J. died leaving only infant children. The contingent remainders failed as to S., but not as to W. The heir-at-law claimed to have a charge on W. for the money applied in reducing the mortgage:—

An estate including an old family mansion-house became vested under a settlement in a tenant for life, who was a young man in embarrassed circumstances, and too poor to reside on it. He contracted under the Settled Land Acts to sell it for a good price to a wealthy purchaser. A petition under s. 10 of the Act of 1890 for leave to sell the mansion-house was opposed by the remaindermen, who wished the mansion-house and demesne lands to remain in the family:—

Held, that the paramount object of the Settled Land Acts was the well-being of settled land, and that the Court must have regard to the interests of the persons from whose industrial occupation the rents and profits were derived as well as the interests of those entitled under the settlement, and that to refuse the sanction of the Court to the petition would be to defeat the object of the Legislature.

Section 22 of the Settled Land Act, 1882, which confers on a tenant for life the option of capital money arising under the Act being paid either to the trustees of the settlement or into court, presupposes that there are trustees for the purposes of the Act in existence.

Therefore, where a vendor selling as tenant for life enters into a contract for the sale of settled land, he cannot, under s. 22, require the purchaser to pay the purchase-money into court where no trustees for the purposes of the Act are in existence when the time comes for the completion of the contract, and the contract will not be enforced.

A testator by his will, made in 1828, gave his real estate to his granddaughter for her life, with remainder to her first and other sons successively in tail male. And he empowered her, either before or after her marriage with any husband, by deed or will to appoint to such husband for his life, to take effect immediately after her decease, a yearly rent-charge not exceeding 600*l.*, to be charged on the devised property, with power to limit a term for securing the same. And also by deed or will to charge the property with portions for the younger children of the granddaughter to the extent of 10,000*l.*, with power to limit a term for the raising and securing of the portions. After the death of the testator the granddaughter married three times.

In 1866, the entail created by the will was barred, and the property was resettled to such uses as the third husband, the wife, and her son by her first husband should appoint, and in default of appointment to the uses of the testator's will. By a settlement made in 1871, on the marriage of the daughter of the granddaughter by her second husband, the third husband and his wife demised part of the settled property to trustees for 100 years from the date of the daughter's marriage (if her mother should so long live) upon trust to raise out of the income two annual sums, to be held respectively on the trusts of a settlement of even date.

In 1894, the Court appointed two trustees for the purposes of the Settled Land Act of the will of the testator and the resettlement of 1866.

The granddaughter and her third husband, as tenants for life, desired to sell part of the settled estates. The married daughter was still living:—

Held, that the will of the original testator, the three settlements made by the granddaughter, the deed of resettlement and the settlement made on the marriage of the daughter, together constituted the settlement of the estates, and that, in order that the tenants for life might be able to exercise the powers conferred by the Settled Land Act, trustees for the purposes of the Act must be appointed of that compound settlement.

The trustees appointed in 1894 were accordingly so appointed.

As a general rule it is not necessary, whenever a deed has been executed affecting the interests created by an original settlement, so that that settlement is no longer the only instrument "under or by virtue of which the land stands limited for the time being to or in trust for persons by way of succession," to appoint trustees of a compound settlement constituted by the original settlement and the subsequent deed. Sect. 4 of the Settled Land Act, 1890, is not to be read as providing that an assignment made by a tenant for life of settled land, in consideration of marriage or by way of family arrangement, is to be deemed one of the instruments creating the settlement for all the purposes of the Act. It is limited to the purpose of excluding the operation of s. 50 of the Settled Land Act, 1882, altogether. Upon a sale, therefore, under the powers of the Settled Land Acts, by a tenant for life who has made such an assignment, it is not necessary to appoint trustees of the settlement constituted by the original deed and the instrument effecting the assignment; but the trustees of the original settlement, having powers of sale, or appointed for the purposes of the Settled Land Acts, are competent to receive and give receipts for the purchase-money.

By a deed dated in 1861, lands were settled to the use of A. for life with remainder to his first and other sons successively in tail male. In exercise of a power reserved to him by this deed, A., upon his marriage in 1865, by deed charged the lands with a jointure rent-charge for his wife, and with portions for his younger children, both charges being secured by terms of years in the usual way. In 1889, in order to carry out a family arrangement, A. and B. (his eldest son) by deed No. 1 disentailed the lands, and by deed No. 2, in exercise of a power contained in deed No. 1, appointed them to the use of A. for life with remainders over, without, however, in terms expressing that this life estate was limited to A.

Held, that deed No. 2 of 1889 should not under the circumstances be treated as the only settlement of the property, but should be treated as constituting, together with the previous deeds of 1861, 1865, and 1889, a "settlement" within the meaning of the Settled Land Act, 1882, ss. 2 and 20; and held accordingly that it was competent for A. to sell and make a good title to the lands discharged from the jointure and portions, upon trustees of the settlement being appointed to receive the purchase-money.

The words in sub-s. 1 of s. 2 of the Act of 1882, "stands for the time being limited to or in trust for any persons by way of succession," have no technical force, and, according to their natural meaning, include the case of a jointure and portions for younger children limited to arise on or after the death of a tenant for life and the terms of years limited to trustees to secure them.

There may be at the same time a more comprehensive settlement consisting of several deeds, and a less comprehensive settlement constituted by one only of the deeds. The decision of Stirling J. on this point in In re Du Cane and Nettiefold's Contract, [1898] 2 Ch. 96, approved.

The effect of s. 50 of the Act of 1882 is that the statutory power of sale given to a tenant for life by the Act of 1882 is not annexed to his estate as in ordinary conveyancing, but is vested in him once for all by the Act, is incapable of being assigned or released, and continues exercisable by him notwithstanding assignment by him of his estate; so that, although the life estate of A. must be treated as a new life estate arising under the resettlement, the statutory power of sale vested in A. before the resettlement was not affected by it.

Per V. Williams L.J.: Where an estate in fee simple is settled in the ordinary way with the usual limitations and powers, it is doubtful whether the terms to secure jointure or portions, or the interests thereby secured, are limitations by way of succession within the meaning of s. 2 of the Settled Land Act of 1882, for such terms are mere charges overriding the successive limitations which exhaust the fee and come into operation contemporaneously with them.

power conferred by the settlement; that executed by A. was in operation and constituted an existing charge on the settled property. Trustees of the will had been appointed for the purposes of the Settled Land Acts. B. having contracted, under the powers conferred upon him by those Acts, to sell a portion of the estate, the purchaser insisted that trustees should be appointed of the compound settlement created by the will and the several jointure deeds :—

Held, (1) that the jointures were not charges upon the estate of the tenant for life within the meaning of s. 4 of the Settled Land Act, 1890; (2) that the will by itself constituted a settlement within the meaning of s. 2 of the Settled Land Act, 1882; (3) that under s. 20 of the same Act B. could convey the land discharged from the jointures, they being "estates, interests, or charges subsisting under the settlement" within that section; and consequently that B. could make a good title to the property, and the trustees of the will could give a good discharge for the purchase-money.

An order dated June 2, 1897, was made on an originating summons headed "In the Matter of the Freehold Estates situate in the County of London, settled by the will of M. D. Skerritt, deceased, dated Sept. 18, 1895, and in the Matter of the Settled Land Acts, 1882 to 1890," appointing two persons "trustees of the settlement created by the said will so far as relates to the above-mentioned estates for the purposes of the above-mentioned Acts.

Doubts were raised whether the above order appointed the two trustees named as separate trustees of the three several settlements created by the will; and this summons, with separate titles for each settlement, was taken out for the purpose of having separate trustees for the purposes of the Settled Land Acts appointed of the three several settlements. The judge in chambers dismissed the summons. A motion was now made to vary the order made in chambers by appointing separate trustees.

Held, that the effect of the order of June, 1897, was to appoint the trustees named separate trustees of the several settlements, and the motion was refused. In re SKERRITT'S ESTATE.

The father's creditors were neither parties to nor named in the deed, nor was it ever communicated to them. After the father's death the trustees sold part of the settled estate with the consent of the son, and applied the proceeds in payment of all the father's debts, except one due to a sister, of which the trustees were unaware. In 1889 the trustees, with the concurrence of the son, who was his father's legal personal representative, conveyed the unsold hereditaments to the uses of the second indenture of 1867. The son died in 1890. In 1896 the executors of the sister, who had died, having become aware of the deeds of 1867 and 1889, brought an action seeking to charge the hereditaments in the possession of the infant tenant in tail with the debt due to the sister's estate:—

Held, that the case fell within the principle of Synnot v. Simpson, (1854) 5 H. L. C. 121, and not within that of Garrard v. Lord Lauderdale, (1831) 2 Russ. & My. 451, and that the infant tenant in tail took the estate subject to the liability for the debt. PRIESTLEY v. ELLIS

14. — Accumulations—Covenant to settle wife's property—Purchase by wife during coverture.

If income not originally included in a covenant in a marriage settlement to settle other and after-acquired property is so invested as to indicate a permanent intention on the part of the owner to turn it into capital, such investment becomes subject to the covenant, provided the terms are sufficiently large to include it as capital. The same result follows in the case of a sale of capital property not originally included in the covenant, where the proceeds are laid out in the purchase of other property coming within the terms of the covenant.

A wife during coverture purchased property partly out of the proceeds of property subject to a covenant to settle, partly out of accumulations of her income under the settlement, and partly out of a loan subsequently repaid by herself and her husband:—

Held, that the property so purchased belonged to her absolutely, but subject to a charge in favour of the settlement trustees for the amount (a) of the income accumulations, (b) of her contribution towards repaying the loan. In re BENDY. WALLIS v. BENDY — Kekewich J. [1895] 1 Ch. 109

sion, remainder or expectancy, then and in every such case the said R. Byrne J. held that the property in question was not bound by the covenant, and that the case was not distinguishable from an unreported case decided by himself on Dec. 8, 1899, of In re Gray, Pakenham v. Maclean, the only distinction between the two cases being that in that case there were recitals relating to the matter, but there he had held that the addition of the words "and all other necessary parties" did not render the covenant so ambiguous as to permit recitals to be referred to for the purpose of assisting the construction, and that the words "all other necessary parties" do not import the same meaning, so far as regarded the wife being bound, as they bear in those cases where the wife is specifically named, and that the introduction of those words only meant that all other persons over whom the husband may be expected to have a right to call on would join. He considered that In re Gray would not be differentiated from Ramsden v. Smith, (1854) 2 Drew. 298, and Daves v. Tredwell, (1881) 18 Ch. D. 354, and that the reasoning in those cases applied to the present one, but he would observe that there was a clear distinction between the effect of a covenant drawn as in the present case and where it was in the form that the property shall be settled. In re SMITH. Held, that in the absence of words shewing that a more extended operation was intended, the covenant operated only during coverture, and that this construction was assisted by a recital that the parties agreed to covenant as to any personal property which should accrue during the joint lives of the husband and wife, which recital might be referred to in order to explain the ambiguity. *In re COGHAN. Husband and wife assigned two reversionary interests to a purchaser, and received the purchase-money. The deed was acknowledged by the wife under 20 & 21 Vict. c. 57, but was inoperative to bind her, as the reversionary interests were derived under wills made before December 31, 1857. The interests both fell in simultaneously during the life of both husband and wife. One fund was received and expended by them. The wife claimed that the second reversionary interest should be settled on her and her children:—

Held, by C. A., that although the assignment was nugatory, the Court should take into consideration the conduct of the wife. On appeal, the order was varied by consent, and only half the amount settled. ROBERTS v. COOPER

In order to constitute a "purchaser in good faith" within s. 47 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, it is sufficient if there be good faith on the part of the purchaser; it is not necessary that both parties should act in good faith. A wife (married in 1883) after marriage allowed her separate property to pass into her husband's hands, but not as a gift nor as a loan for the purposes of his trade. He, having applied part of the property to his own use, settled the residue, together with property of his own, upon trusts under which he took a life interest, with a proviso for cesser in the event of his bankruptcy; the wife had no notice of any fraudulent intention on his part:—

Held, (1) that the settlement was not void under s. 47 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883; (2) that to the extent of the wife's property received by the husband the proviso for the cesser of his life interest was good; and (3) that s. 3 of the Married Women's Property Act, 1882, did not apply. MACKINTOSH v. The trust funds were appointed, inter alia, as to part to pay certain of B.'s debts and as to another part to himself for life with a gift over on alienation. B. became bankrupt:—

Held, (1) that this was not a settlement by a bankrupt of his own property, and therefore the discretionary trust over was valid, and the trustee in bankruptcy was not entitled to the life estate; (2) that the trust to pay debts was a revocable trust, which must be considered as revoked by the bankruptcy, and therefore the trustee was entitled to such funds as were in the hands of the settlement trustees for that purpose.

25. — Settlor's own property, Settlement of—Forfeiture clause—Determinable life interest—Forfeiture—Breach of trust—Bankruptcy—"Cease to be payable."

By a settlement of 1878, property of the settlor was assigned by him to trustees upon trust to pay the income to him until his death or bankruptcy, or until he should "assign charge or incur the said income or do or suffer anything whereby the same or some part thereof would through his act or default become payable to or vested in some other person or persons" with remainder in favour of the children of the marriage. In 1887 the settlor induced the surviving trustee to lend him the greater part of the trust fund, and the money thus obtained was spent by him for his own purposes. In 1891 the settlor became bankrupt. Proceedings were subsequently taken on behalf of the children of the marriage with the result that the funds lost by the breach of trust were replaced, and the question now raised was, whether the settlor's interest had been forfeited prior to the bankruptcy by the dissipation of the trust fund:—

Held, that the settlor's interest had not been determined prior to the bankruptcy; and that, as the limitation until bankruptcy was void as against his creditors, his life interest passed to the trustee in bankruptcy, and that the income of the trust fund was now payable to a purchaser from the trustee during the life of the settlor.

Semle: Had the settlement contained a limitation over if the income should "cease to be payable" to the settlor, the dissipation of the trust fund would have worked a forfeiture. In re BREWER'S SETTLEMENT. MORTON v. BLACKMORE

The whole of the 13,000*l.* had been appointed unequally among the three children of the marriage, the 5000*l.* was unappointed and the question now raised was, whether the two sums were to be aggregated for the purposes of hotchpot, or whether the 5000*l.* was divisible into three equal shares:—

Held, that the two funds were distinct, and that the three children were entitled to the 5000*l.* in equal shares, without having to account for or bring into hotchpot any sums appointed to them out of the 13,000*l.* In re MARQUIS OF BRISTOL. EARL GREY v. GREY

In an action to rectify a settlement after the death of the husband, on the ground that it did not exercise a certain power of appointment in favour of the wife, in accordance with the arrangement alleged to have been entered into prior to the marriage, the defts. pleaded the 4th section of the Statute of Frauds; they also contended that relief could not be given against a non-execution, as distinct from an imperfect execution, of a power, and particularly after the death of the donee thereof:—

Held, that parol evidence was admissible in an action to rectify a mistake in a settlement, notwithstanding the Statute of Frauds, an action of that kind not being one seeking "to charge any person upon any agreement made upon consideration of marriage" within the meaning of s. 4; that relief could be given, and that rectification in the present case did not amount to aiding the non-execution or defective execution of a power; when once the settlement was made to accord with what the Court found to have been the real bargain and intention of the parties to it, no further deed or relief was necessary. JOHNSON v. On April 30, 1873, a widower executed a deed, by which, in contemplation of a marriage which "had been agreed upon and was intended shortly to be solemnized" between himself and C. P., he conveyed real estate to trustees in fee, to the use of himself and his assigns during his life, with remainder to the use of C. P. during her life, "provided she shall remain a widow and unmarried; and from and immediately after her decease or marriage, whichever event shall first happen," to such uses as the settlor should by deed or will appoint, and, in default of appointment, to the use of such person or persons as would be entitled thereto if the deed had not been executed. C. P. was in fact a sister of the settlor's deceased wife, though this was not stated in the deed. On March 5, 1877, he went through the ceremony of marriage with her, and she afterwards lived with him as his wife. He died in Nov., 1891, intestate. He had not exercised the power of appointment by deed reserved to him by the settlement. During the life of his son and heir-at-law C. P. received the rents of the property without objection on his part:—

Held, that the trust for C. P. was illegal and invalid, and that the property was held on trust for the son's administratrix, she being, under the Land Transfer Act, 1897 (60 & 61 Vict. c. 65), his real representative.

By a voluntary settlement dated July 27, 1892, after reciting that the property comprised in the settlement of April 15, 1874, was vested in trustees upon trust to pay the income to the plt.'s mother for life, and upon her death upon trust for the plt., her heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns, the plt. conveyed all her reversionary property under the settlement of April 15, 1874, to trustees upon trust for conversion and to pay the income to herself for life, then to her husband for life, and on the death of the survivor, on the usual trusts for the benefit of their issue, with a trust in default of issue in favour of the plt. The settlement contained no covenant to settle after-acquired property, and no power of revocation.

In August, 1897, the plt.'s mother, in exercise of the power contained in the settlement of April 15, 1874, irrevocably appointed that the trustees of that settlement should stand possessed of the property therein comprised in trust for the plt., her executors, administrators, and assigns absolutely. There was no issue of the marriage between the plt. and her husband:—

Held, that the deed of July 27, 1892, only passed the interest which the plt. had under the deed of April 15, 1874, and did not comprise the interest taken by her under the appointment.

The recital, though inaccurate, was true as far as it went, and worked no estoppel either legal or equitable.

Equitable estoppel is not applied in favour of a volunteer.

Where a young person is minded to make a voluntary settlement in favour of a parent, it is not enough that he should have independent advice unless he acts on that advice: it is the duty of a solicitor independently advising an intending settlor to protect him against himself, and not merely against the personal influence of the donee in the particular transaction; and if his advice is not accepted he should decline to act further for the intending settlor.

In every voluntary settlement of this kind a power of revocation should be inserted.

P. and others twenty years ago connected their water-closets with a drain belonging to the sanitary authority without its knowledge. A nuisance was caused thereby. No other drain was available for the purpose. The authority had not carried out any system of drainage in its district:—

In consequence of increase of buildings in D. a sewer which had been sufficient became insufficient to carry off the water, when storms occurred. The cellars of the S. Co. became flooded in consequence of the insufficiency. The only mode of preventing the flooding was to construct a new drainage system or a new sewer, which would be an expensive and difficult operation, and would require the advice of experts before a scheme could be commenced. After complaints by the S. Co. the corporation of D. consulted experts, but their report had not been received:—

Held, (1) that the rights and liabilities of the parties must be ascertained not as between strangers, but under the statutes regulating the sewers; (2) that the liability imposed by s. 19 of the Public Health Act, 1875, is limited to cases where the public body has been guilty of negligence. STRETTON'S DERBY BREWERY CO. v. A private street, or part thereof, is not "sewered" within s. 150 of the Public Health Act, 1875, when the houses in it are served either singly or in groups by private drains or sewers constructed by the several owners of the houses, but not forming one system of sewerage. Accordingly, the local authority may, although these private sewers are vested in them under s. 13, require the frontagers, under s. 150, to sewer the street, unless the local authority have, either expressly or by inference from circumstances, determined that it is already sewerd to their satisfaction within that section; in which case their powers under that section are no longer exercisable, and any required new sewers must be provided at their own expense under ss. 15 and 18.

The notice under s. 150 to frontagers to sewer a street must be served upon every frontager.

If the proportion of sewerage expenses payable by any frontager under s. 150 is referred to arbitration under s. 180, all objections to the validity of the proceedings of the local authority on the ground of insufficient notice, such as neglecting to serve every frontager, or otherwise, must be raised, if at all, before the arbitrators; and it is too late to raise them by action or other proceeding after the award, which is by sub-s. 15 of that section made "final and binding" on the parties. *HANDSWORTH DISTRICT COUNCIL v. A ry. co., whose special Act expressly incorporated the Railways Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, constructed land drains for the purpose of conveying surface water from lands adjoining the ry., and these land drains were, without the knowledge or consent of the co., used by a rural sanitary authority to convey sewage from certain houses within the district of such authority:—

Held, affirming the judgment of Stirling J., [1898] 1 Ch. 34, that these drains were "sewers" within the meaning of the Public Health Act, 1875, but that they were sewers made and used for the purpose of draining land under a local or private Act of Parliament within the second exception in s. 13 of that Act, and did not vest in the local authority; and consequently that the co. were entitled to an injunction to restrain the sanitary authority from so using them. *LONDON AND NORTH WESTERN RY. A drain-pipe passing through private property had, from a date prior to 1890, received the drainage of several houses belonging to different owners before it joined the public sewer. The pipe having become a nuisance, the local authority of the district, who had adopted the Public Health Acts Amendment Act, 1890, gave the owners of the said houses notice under s. 41 of the Public Health Act, 1875, to repair it, and, on failure of the owners to comply with the notice, executed the necessary work themselves, and claimed to recover from the owners the expenses incurred by them in so doing:—

Held, that the pipe in question was a "single private drain" within the meaning of s. 19 of the first-mentioned Act, and that the local authority were entitled to recover.

The word “profit” in s. 13, sub-s. 1, of the Public Health Act, 1875, is not to be restricted to a direct money payment. Accordingly a sewer which is not made for ordinary drainage purposes, but to enable the land on which it is made to be occupied more profitably, or to avoid an expenditure which would otherwise have to be incurred in order that the occupation might be equally beneficial, is made for the “profit” of the owner within the meaning of the section, and does not vest in the local authority:—

So held, in the case of a line of pipes laid down by the owner of a field adjoining a highway from a ditch bordering the highway to a disused gravel pit in the field for the purpose of supplying water to the cattle fed in the field.

—Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), ss. 21, 299.

In an action by a landowner against a corporation (the urban sanitary authority for the borough of D.) for an injunction to restrain them from discharging or allowing to be discharged sewage upon his lands from the sewers vested in them so as to cause a nuisance, the defts. set up a prescriptive right based on the presumption of a lost grant by the plt.'s predecessors in title to trustees for the benefit of the inhabitants of the borough to drain all sewage from any tenements built or to be built within the borough, and to discharge the same on the plt.'s lands. This claim of right failed. It was proved, however, that there were a number of houses in the borough in respect of which prescriptive rights had been acquired to pass sewage into and along the sewers, and that there were other houses the connections of which with the sewers had been made with the consent or by the acquiescence of the defts. :—

Held, that an injunction could not be granted so as to interfere with the prescriptive rights that had been acquired, nor to oblige the defts. to stop up the connections of the other houses which they had sanctioned; but that an injunction must be granted to restrain the defts. from authorizing or directing any sewage to flow or be discharged on to the plt.'s lands from sewers vested in them as the sanitary authority.

Att.-Gen. v. Acton Local Board, (1882) 22 Ch. D. 221, and Att.-Gen. v. Clerkenwell Vestry, [1891] 3 Ch. 527, followed.

Held, also, following Ainley v. Kirkheaton Local Board, (1891) 60 L. J. (Ch.) 734, that a householder has an absolute right under s. 21 of the Public Health Act, 1875, to connect his drains with a sewer, subject only to the regulations prescribed by the local authority in whom the sewer is vested as to the manner in which the connections are to be made, and therefore that an injunction could not be granted to restrain the defts. from allowing any future connections to be made with their sewers.

Charles v. Finchley Local Board, (1883) 23 Ch. D. 767, dissented from on this point.

Held, further, that the plt. ought to have applied to the Loc. Govt. Bd. under s. 299 of the Public Health Act, 1875, to make an order on the defts. to adopt a proper system of sewage for their district. BROWN v. DUNSTABLE CORPORATION open ditch. According to the plan, deposited with the sanitary authority when the houses were built by the appellants' predecessor in title, the houses should have been drained into cesspools, but cesspools to receive the slop and scullery water had not been constructed. No sewer had been constructed by the sanitary authority, by means of which the houses could be drained. The houses were separately occupied, and were not within the same curtilage. The justices made an order to abate the nuisance, by disconnecting the drains of the houses from the surface-water drain, and making cesspools for the houses. On a case stated :—

Held, that the sanitary authority were not bound, under the Public Health Act, 1875, s. 15, to provide a sewer to drain the appellants' houses, that the surface-water drain, though for some purposes a "sewer," within the meaning of s. 4, was not a sewer into which the appellants were entitled to empty their drains, that the nuisance was caused by the want of a structural convenience, within the meaning of s. 94, and therefore the defts., as owners, were liable. *KINSON POTTERY CO. v. Where the owners of buildings have acquired a right to discharge drainage into a public sewer through a connection lawfully made, that right extends to the discharge of trade and manufacturing effluents, and the provisions of s. 7 of the Rivers Pollution Prevention Act, 1876, do not justify a local sanitary authority in cutting off the connection with their sewer, even although it is shewn that the discharge of the trade effluent prejudicially affects the disposal of the sewage matter conveyed through the sewer.

Two houses, owned by different persons, were connected with a sewer by a single private drain; the local authority, which had adopted s. 19 of the Act of 1890, served on one owner a notice addressed to both, under the Public Health Act, 1875, requiring them to abate a nuisance by Five houses, of which three belonged to one owner and two to another, were connected with the public sewer by a single private drain. The drain being a nuisance and injurious to health, the local authority served on each of the two owners a notice, under s. 41 of the Public Health Act, 1875, and s. 19 of the Public Health Act, 1890, addressed to them jointly, requiring them to relay the whole of the drain:—

Held, that the fact that neither of the owners could relay the part of the drain situate in the other's premises without committing a trespass was no objection to the validity of the notice, and that on non-compliance with the notice the local authority might execute the work and recover the expenses from the owners under the last-mentioned section. LANCASTER v. A drain-pipe passing through private property received the drainage of several houses belonging to different owners before it joined the public sewer. The pipe having become a nuisance, the local authority, who had adopted the Public Health Acts Amendment Act, 1890, took proceedings against the owners of the said houses under s. 41 of the Public Health Act, 1875:—

Held, following Bradford v. Eastbourne Corporation, [1896] 2 Q. B. 205, and disapproving Hill v. Hair, [1895] 1 Q. B. 906, that the pipe in question was a single private drain within the meaning of s. 19 of the Act of 1890. SEAL v. MERTHYR TYDFIL URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL

Section 41 of the Public Health Act, 1875, empowers a local authority, on written application made to them stating that a drain is a nuisance or injurious to health, to enter the premises, and, if the drain appears to be in bad condition, or to require alteration or amendment, to give notice to the owner or occupier to do the necessary works.

S. ct. 148 of the Hastings Improvement Act, 1885, in cases where two or more houses are connected with a single private drain which conveys their drainage into a public sewer, gives the corporation all the powers conferred by s. 41 of the Act of 1875.

The owner of several houses connected with a single drain conveying their drainage into a public sewer applied for a mandamus to the corporation to repair and maintain the drain. No application had been made under s. 41 of the Public Health Act, 1875:—

Held, that the Hastings Improvement Act, 1885, did not empower the corporation to require the owner to repair and maintain the drain, and the corporation were liable to repair and maintain it. REG. v. HASTINGS CORPORATION

By a local Act, where in a certain metropolitan parish the goods of any person liable to pay a rate by virtue of the Act shall have been “taken in execution” by a sheriff before the rate shall have been paid, the sheriff upon demand by the rate-collector is “directed and required in the first place” to pay the rate to the collector; and by the Metropolis Management Act, 1855, the vestry of the parish are to have, for the purpose of levying the rates therein mentioned, the same powers, remedies, and privileges as for levying money for the relief of the poor.

A sheriff seized under a fi. fa. the goods of a judgment debtor who was at the time liable to pay to the vestry as the rating authority of the parish a certain rate made up of a poor-rate by virtue of the local Act and a general rate under the Metropolis Management Act, 1855. A demand was made on the sheriff by the rate-collector for the amount of the rate; but the sheriff, having subsequently received from the debtor the amount of the judgment debt, withdrew from possession without having paid the rate:—

Held, that the goods had been taken in execution within the meaning of the local Act, and that the sheriff was liable to the vestry for the amount of rate.

Where a contract for carriage of goods by sea contains an exception of negligence of the master and crew, the shipowner is entitled to a contribution from the owner of the goods to general average expenses, though the necessity for the same has been occasioned by the negligence of the master:—

So held by A. L. Smith L.J., and Romer L.J., V. Williams L.J. dissenting.

A charterparty, which contained an exception of the negligence of the master and crew, provided that the captain should sign bills of lading at any rate of freight the charterers or their agents might choose without prejudice to the stipulations of the charterparty, and that the charterers should indemnify the shipowners from any consequences which might arise from the captain following the charterers' instructions and signing bills of lading.

The captain, upon the instructions of the charterers, signed bills of lading for goods shipped by a third person, which did not contain a negligence clause. The ship coming into collision with another ship through the negligence of the captain, general average expenses were incurred in putting back for repairs:—

Held, that the charterers were liable to indemnify the shipowners against the loss sustained by them through their not being able to obtain a general average contribution from the owner of the goods by reason of the bills of lading not containing a negligence clause.

In an action in rem for damage by collision brought by the owners of the Dutch steamer against the English steamer, to which the owners of the latter appeared and counter-claimed, the Dutch steamer was found alone to blame. On the reference as to damages, the owners of the English steamer claimed, inter alia, to recover against the owners of the Dutch steamer the balance due in general average contribution from ship to cargo in respect of the jettison, after deducting the amount due from cargo to ship in respect of the damage to the ship:—

Held, that the claim must be disallowed, as the loss sustained by the ship in having to make the general average contribution was not directly due to the collision, but arose from the obligation to contribute, resulting from the relation between ship and cargo. THE "MARPESSA"

10. — General average—Depreciation of cargo—Remoteness.

The plaintiffs shipped a deck cargo of cattle and sheep on board the defendants' ship for carriage from Buenos Ayres to Deptford under a contract which provided that the ship should on no account call at a Brazilian port before landing her live stock. The reason for this provision was that by an order of the Bd. of Agriculture foreign animals could not be landed in the United Kingdom if the ship conveying them had touched at a Brazilian port in the course of her voyage. During the voyage the ship sprung a leak, and the master, for the safety of all concerned, put into a Brazilian port for repairs. The plaintiffs thereby suffered loss in consequence of the live stock being unable to be landed in the United Kingdom, and having to be sold elsewhere at lower prices than would have been realized in the English market. The master at the time when he resolved to put into the Brazilian port knew that this would be the result of his so doing:—

Held, that the depreciation of the live stock was a loss which the plaintiffs were entitled to have made good in general average. ANGLO-ARGENTINE LIVE STOCK AND PRODUCE AGENCY v. TEMPERLEY SHIPPING CO. — Bigham J.

In the event of such a disaster there is no rigid rule of law that the shipowner may not

Shippers chartered a ship to carry a cargo of coals from Cardiff to Esquimaux. The master, for the safety of all concerned, put into a port of refuge and landed the coal, which was subsequently surveyed and found to be in such a condition as to be incapable of being carried with safety to its destination. The master accordingly abandoned the voyage, and the chartered freight was lost:—

Held, that the freight had not been sacrificed under such circumstances as to make the loss the subject of general average contribution.

The shipowners, finding, that owing to neap tides, the ship, although she could load afloat, would soon not be able to pass out of dock and so be delayed, removed her to another dock, causing the charterers extra expenses:—

By a charterparty the ship was let to the charterers for their sole use and benefit for the conveyance of merchandise <sup>and</sup> passengers with liberty to sublet (subject to owner's approval of trade) for two or three round voyages at charterer's option, to be placed by a certain day "with clear holds" at the disposal of the charterers, they "having the whole reach or burthen of the vessel," proper and sufficient room being reserved to the owners for the officers, crew, tackle, &c.; the owners undertaking to maintain her in a thoroughly efficient state during the currency of the charter; the captain to use every reasonable despatch in prosecuting the voyages, and (though appointed by the owners) to be under the orders and directions of the charterers as regards employment, agency and other arrangements; the freight for the hire of the ship to be paid monthly until she was returned by the charterers to the owners:—

Held, that upon the true construction of the whole of the charterparty (without deciding whether the contract more nearly resembled one of demise than of carriage) the responsibility for the navigation of the ship was imposed upon the owners, and that the owners were therefore liable to provide any ballast that might be necessary for safe navigation.

By a charterparty made in contemplation of a mid-winter loading the charterers agreed to load at a port in the United States "a full and complete cargo of wet wood pulp which contains about 50 per cent. of water." Frozen pulp is not compressible, and occupies more space than when unfrozen; consequently the cargo was less in quantity than it would have been in summer. The shipowners having brought an action against the charterers for the loss of freight thus caused, evidence was given that in winter wet pulp was usually loaded in a frozen condition:—

Held, that the obligation to load a full and complete cargo had been performed by loading

It was agreed by a charterparty that the ship should sail to Cardiff, and proceed to such loading berth as the freighters might name, and should there load "a cargo of steam coal as ordered by the charterers," which they bound themselves to ship, except in the event of (inter alia) strike of shippers' pitmen: the vessel to be loaded as customary, "but subject in all respects to the colliery guarantee, in ——— colliery working days as may be arranged, any claim for demurrage in loading to be settled with colliery direct." The charterers, for the purpose of fulfilling their obligation under the charterparty, contracted with a colliery for a cargo of steam coal, subject to the usual exception as to strikes. Subsequently a strike of pitmen took place, which extended to 85 per cent. of the South Wales collieries, including the before-mentioned colliery. The charterers, in performance of their obligation under the charterparty, tendered to the shipowners the guarantee of that colliery, by which the colliery proprietors undertook to load the ship in twenty days after she should be ready to receive cargo, subject to the usual exception as to strikes. The shipowners objected to the colliery guarantee, as not being in accordance with the charter, on the ground that the colliery was then on strike. The strike still continuing for three months after the arrival of the ship at Cardiff, her loading was in consequence delayed for that period. Steam coal might have been obtained from other collieries in the district which remained working during the strike, although at a very high price.

In an action by the shipowners against the charterers for damages for the detention of the ship:—

Held, that the shipowners were not entitled to object to the colliery guarantee as not being in accordance with the charterparty, and that the action was not maintainable. DOBELL & Co. v. GREEN & Co.

Under a bill of lading dated June 18, 1899, not protecting the deft. shipowners from the consequences of negligence due to improper stowage, a parcel of grain was shipped at Montreal for Liverpool by the steamship Arroyo, owned by the defts., and chartered for a term by L. & Co., under a charterparty dated April 19, 1899, not referred to by the bill of lading, but protecting the deft. shipowners from sea damage, and providing that “Bills of lading are to be signed at any rate of freight the charterers or their agents may direct, without prejudice to this charter . . . the charterers hereby indemnify the owners from all consequences or liabilities that may arise from the captain’s doing so.”

On the arrival of the vessel at Liverpool, the grain was found to be damaged from, it was alleged, negligence in the storage of a deck cargo, and the plts., indorsees of the bill of lading and owners of the grain, commenced an action in rem against the defts., as owners of the Arroyo, in the Liverpool County Court in the sum of 140*l.* 19*s.* 6*d.* for breach of duty in and about the carriage and delivery of the goods. The defts. served a third party notice on L. & Co., which the county court judge set aside on the ground that the contract of indemnity was “confined to any consequences or liabilities that might arise from the captain’s signing bills of lading at a rate of freight differing from that in the charterparty, and had nothing to do with the damages for breach of duty about the carriage and delivery of goods to which the claim related.”—

Held, reversing the decision of the county court judge, that the meaning of the indemnity clause was not so limited. THE “ARROYO”

Act of Congress known as “the Harter Act,” by which the owner of the vessel is not to be “held responsible for damage or loss resulting from faults or errors in navigation or in the management of the vessel.”

During the voyage the vessel met with heavy weather, and, the fore-castle becoming flooded, the boatswain, whilst endeavouring, with the aid of a poker, to clear a pipe used to carry off the drainage, drove a hole through it, thereby admitting water into the forehold, and damaging a portion of the cargo. The owner of the cargo sought to render the shipowner liable:—

Held, by the Div. Ct. (Sir F. H. Jeune, Pres., and Gorell Barnes J.), reversing the decision of a county court judge, that the shipowner was exempt from liability, as the damage resulted from a fault in the “management” of the vessel, the act having been done for the purpose of rendering the fore-castle habitable, that is, with the object of rendering the ship proper for the purpose for which she was intended.

Goods were shipped under a bill of lading incorporating the Act of Congress known as “the Harter Act,” by which the owner of the vessel is not to be “held responsible for damage or loss resulting from faults or errors in navigation or in the management of” the vessel.

After the arrival of the vessel at her port of destination, and during the discharge of the cargo, it became necessary to stiffen the ship. For this purpose the engineer ran water into a ballast tank, but negligently omitted first to ascertain the condition of the sounding-pipe and casing, which had, owing to heavy weather during the voyage, become broken. The owner of the goods damaged by the water getting to the cargo, sought to render the shipowner liable:—

Held, that the shipowner was exempt from liability, as the damage resulted from a fault in the “management” of the vessel, and the operation of the exception as to “management” was not limited to the period during which the vessel was at sea, but extended to the period during which the cargo was being discharged. THE “GLENCHIL” — Div. Owing to stress of weather, a vessel, after sailing under charter from Cardiff for Cape Town with coals, put into a port of refuge. The coal was discharged partly to effect the necessary repairs to the ship, and partly for the benefit of the cargo, portions of which had become heated from wetting by excepted perils of the sea. After the repairs to the ship were completed, the cargo owner required the shipowner to reload the coal; the shipowner refused on the ground that in the opinion of the surveyors on both sides the coal was not then in a fit state for reshipment, though, subsequent to the commencement of an action for breach of contract, the coal had dried sufficiently to be carried on if the small coal were eliminated from the bulk:—

Held, that the charterer was not entitled to recover, as, at the date of the issue of the writ, there was no breach of contract by the shipowner. Up to that time, on the evidence before him, the master, acting on behalf of the shipowner, was justified in refusing to carry on the cargo, and was not bound to wait an indefinite period until experts should be agreed that, the coal being dry, there would be no further risk of spontaneous combustion on a voyage through the tropics, provided the excessive amount of small coal, due to repeated handlings, were removed, for which no facilities existed at the port of refuge, except at an expense out of proportion to the value of the cargo.

The cargo consisted of fresh cut deals, shipped, as usual at the port of loading, without regard to the weather, which at the time was wet. During the voyage part of the cargo became tainted, discoloured, and out of condition. In an action for balance of freight:—

Held, that the defts., the holders of the bills of lading, were not entitled to deduct the amount of the deterioration of the cargo from the balance of freight, as the word "damaged" referred to damage due to breach of contract by the shipowner, and did not include damage arising from want of power in the cargo to bear the ordinary transit in a ship. THE "BAROCRE"

By the Bills of Lading Act, 1855, s. 3, "Every bill of lading, in the hands of a consignee or indorsee for valuable consideration, representing goods to have been shipped on board a vessel, shall be conclusive evidence of such shipment as against the master or other person signing the same, notwithstanding that such goods, or some part thereof, may not have been so shipped"

A bill of lading described goods as "marked and numbered as in the margin." Some of the goods shipped were marked and numbered differently from the description in the margin, but this marking and numbering did not affect or denote the substance, quality, or commercial value of the goods.

In an action for damages for short delivery, brought by the consignee against the shipowners' agents, who had signed the bill of lading:—

Held, that the defts. were not prevented, by the Bills of Lading Act, 1855, s. 3, from shewing that there was a mistake in the marginal description, and that these goods formed part of the quantity set forth in the bill of lading, and were shipped as part of the plts.' consignment.

33. — Despatch money—Time for discharge of cargo—"Sundays and fête days" excepted.

Plts.' ship was chartered by defts. to carry a cargo "to be discharged at the rate of 200 tons per day weather permitting (Sundays and fête days excepted) according to the custom of the port of discharge, and if sooner discharged to pay at the rate of 8s. 4d. per hour for every hour saved":—

Held, that despatch money was payable on the difference between the number of hours actually occupied in the discharge (omitting Sundays and fête days) and the total number of hours allowed by the charterparty. THE "GLENDEVON" — Div. Ct. [1893] P. 269

A charterparty contained a condition in case of breakdown that payment of hire should cease "until the vessel was in an efficient state to resume service." The ship's machinery broke down on her homeward voyage, and she was towed to a port of discharge, the expense being treated as a general average:—

Held, that while being towed the ship was not

36. — Incorporation of conditions of charterparty—“Freight and all other conditions as per charterparty”—Limitation to conditions to be performed by consignee.

By a charterparty a vessel was to load a full cargo of timber, including a deck cargo at merchant's risk. Timber was loaded under a bill of lading which contained no reference to deck cargo, but in which there was a clause “freight and all other conditions as per charterparty.” In an action for freight by the shipowner against the consignees of a part of the cargo which had been carried on deck, the defts. counter-claimed for damage to their cargo:—

Held (Rigby L.J. dissenting), that the conditions of the charterparty incorporated into the bill of lading were limited to such as were to be performed by the consignee, and did not include the exemption of the shipowner from liability in respect of deck cargo. *DIEDERICHSEN v. 38. — Loading—Ship to load “always afloat as and where ordered by charterers”—Insufficient depth of water in dock—Detention of ship.

A charterparty provided that a ship should proceed to a named dock and “there load in the customary manner (Sundays and holidays excepted) always afloat as and where ordered by the charterers, a cargo of rails.” The depth of water in the dock varied with the tides and was sufficient at spring tides, but not at neap tides, for a ship of the size of the chartered vessel to load there always afloat, and this was within the knowledge of the owners and of the charterers. The ship having arrived in the dock the charterers ordered her to a berth where the loading began and continued for several days; then the water began to fall, and to avoid taking the ground the ship was compelled to leave the dock. After several days she returned with the spring tides and completed her loading. The shipowners having sued the charterers for demurrage or damages:—

Held, affirming the decision of C. A., [1897] 2 Q. B. 485, that the charterers were not bound to do that which (as was known to the ship-owners) might be physically impossible, namely,

44. — Port—"Safe port"—Ship unable to reach port without being lightened—Evidence of custom of port.

A ship was chartered to proceed with a cargo of grain to a port of call "for orders to discharge at a safe port . . . Charterers to have the privilege of naming the discharging dock . . . the dock to be one into which the vessel can at once safely enter and lie afloat at all times." She was ordered to discharge at Gloucester. The basin at Gloucester is approached by a canal seventeen miles long. On arrival of the ship at Sharpness, which is at the entrance to the canal, she was found to be of too great a draught to proceed up the canal. The charterers requested the master to discharge a sufficient part of the cargo at Sharpness to allow of her navigating the canal, and to proceed to Gloucester with the remainder. The master refused to do so, and discharged the whole at Sharpness. Gloucester and Sharpness are for commercial purposes different ports. In an action by the charterers for breach of the charterparty:—

Held, that the port of Gloucester, being one which the vessel could not safely reach with a full cargo, was not a safe port within the meaning of the charterparty; and that evidence of a custom of the port for vessels carrying grain to be lightened at Sharpness to allow of their proceeding up the canal to Gloucester was inadmissible, as being inconsistent with the terms of the charterparty by which the discharge was to be "at a safe port."

48. — Warranty of seaworthiness—Voyage of steam-vessel in stages—Insufficiency of coal—Cargo burned as fuel.

The plts.' steam-vessel left Cebu in the Philippine Islands, for Liverpool, with cargo belonging to the defts., shipped under a charterparty and bill of lading giving liberty to coal at ports on the way, and excepting the negligence of the master and engineer. The vessel called at Colombo, but did not take in a reasonably sufficient quantity of coal for the next stage to Suez, and when passing Perim (a coaling station), the master did not call there owing to the negligence of the engineer in not informing him that the coal was running short. In consequence, whilst proceeding up the Red Sea, 50 tons of cargo were burnt as fuel in order to carry the vessel on to Suez, where she again coaled, and so was enabled to perform the chartered voyage to Liverpool:—

Held (affirming the decision of G. Barnes J.), that the defts. were entitled to set off by way of counter-claim the value of the cargo burned against the freight, on the ground that, if the plt. shipowners, owing to the necessity for coaling, availed themselves of the liberty to call at ports on the way, they must make their vessel seaworthy at the commencement of each stage for the voyage or stage of the voyage she then enters upon, and, in the circumstances of this case, the second stage was from Colombo to Suez. The plts., therefore, could not rely on the exception covering negligence of the engineer when off Perim, as by the insufficiency of coal when the vessel left Colombo the implied warranty of seaworthiness had been broken.

The owners of the British vessel commenced an action in rem and arrested the foreign vessel, the owners of which, domiciled abroad, appeared, and, having put in bail for the full value of the vessel and her freight, she was released. The foreign vessel was subsequently found alone to blame, and the decree in the usual form, in the case of owners who have appeared, condemned the defts. and their bail in damages and costs. The damages proved to be in excess of the amount of the bail, and the plts., in respect of this balance, sued out a writ of fieri facias under which the foreign vessel was seized. On application to the Court the sheriff was ordered to withdraw:—

Held, by C. A., reversing the decision of Bucknill J. [1899] W. On a fine clear night in the English channel those in charge of a tug and tow saw, about six miles off and about five points on their port bow, the electric lights of a fleet which proved to consist of thirty warships steaming in company, and proceeding at a speed of ten knots an hour on a course S. 72° E.

The tug and tow were making about six knots an hour on a course N. 9° E., and, acting under art. 21 of the Regulations for Preventing Collisions at Sea, kept their course and speed. They passed across and ahead of the first of the four lines of the fleet, and were crossing ahead of the second line, when the deft., the navigating officer in charge of the leading vessel of that line—acting under the Queen's Regulations corresponding with art. 19 of the Regulations for Preventing Collisions at Sea—kept out of the way of the tug by porting, but negligently omitted to notice the lights indicating the tow, and, starboarding back again, struck the tow and sank her.

In an action by the owner of the tow it was admitted that the deft. was to blame, and G. Barnes J. held that he was solely to blame, as he could, by the exercise of reasonable care, have avoided the collision, the position and movements of the fleet, in the opinion of the Elder Brethren, not constituting such a danger of navigation or collision, or such circumstances, as to render it necessary for the tug and tow to depart from art. 21, and, under art. 27, avoid immediate danger by keeping out of the way of the fleet. The deft. appealed on the ground that the tug and tow were also to blame for not complying with art. 27:—

Held, on the advice of the nautical assessors, that it was improper navigation, as a matter of seamanship, for the tug and tow to attempt, in the circumstances, to pass across and ahead of the fleet; but the Court dismissed the appeal, on the ground that—under the common law doctrine of contributory negligence, as applied in The Margaret (Cayzer v. Carron Co.), (1884) 9 App. Cas. 873—though the tug and tow had been guilty of negligence in keeping on, yet the deft. was not hampered by the other vessels of the fleet, and might, by the exercise of ordinary care and diligence, have avoided the collision.

67. — Joint tortfeasors—Assignment of judgment—Damages—Collision—Mercantile Law Amendment Act, 1856 (19 & 20 Vict. c. 97), s. 5.

A barque and a tug towing her were found to blame, as was also a steamship with whom they came into collision, and damages were given against the barque and tug, and also to the tug against the steamship. The owners of the barque applied for an order that on payment to the owners of the steamship of the balance due to them, the owners of the steamship should execute an assignment of the judgment to them:—

Held, that the application must be refused, since the owners of the barque and tug were joint tortfeasors, and not co-debtors liable for a debt or duty within s. 5 of the Mercantile Law Amendment Act, 1856. THE "ENGLISHMAN" AND THE "AUSTRALIA" (No. 2)

A steamer near the Goodwin Sands unshackled her anchors, banked her fires, shut off steam, and rode head to wind by her chains. She exhibited an anchor light forward and a globular white light aft. A sailing vessel bound down channel mistook the lights for the masthead and green lights of a steamer in motion:—

Held, that the steamer was alone to blame for a collision which occurred, as the lights were calculated to mislead, so that the mistake of the sailing vessel was excusable. The steamer having rendered herself unmanageable should have exhibited three red lights, and should have kept steam readily available, so as to bring herself

Held, that under s. 17 of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1873 (now s. 419, sub-s. 4, of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1894), the T. must be deemed at fault. THE "TALBOT"

74. — Narrow channel—Swin Middle Lightship—Risk of collision—Arts. 18 & 21 of the Regulations for Preventing Collisions at Sea, 1884.

A collision occurred at night, between the plts.' steamship, inward bound, and the defts.' steamship, outward bound, in the Swin Channel at the entrance to the river Thames, about half-way between the Swin Middle Lightship and the North-East Maplin Buoy. Both vessels were found to blame for not reducing speed under art. 18 of the Regulations of 1884 for Preventing Collisions at Sea.

The plaintiffs appealed on the ground that, by reversing at a quarter of a mile, their vessel had complied with art. 18:—

Held, by C. A., affirming the decision of G. Barnes J., [1896] W. N. 170 (1) and on the authority of The Beryl, (1884) 9 P. D. 137, that the officer in charge of the plts.' vessel having the green light of the defts.' vessel at a distance of half a mile on his port bow crossing to the wrong side of the channel, was not justified, before he stopped and reversed, in waiting to see if there would be a change of light until the vessels were only a quarter of a mile apart.

The plts.' vessel, just prior to the collision, had passed to the southward and eastward of the Swin Middle Lightship, in accordance with the practice sanctioned by the cases of The Minnie and The Corennie, [1894] P. 336, and 338, n.:—

Held, by G. Barnes J., that as any difficulty in the navigation at this part of the river has now been removed by making the North-East Maplin Buoy an occulting gas-light buoy, reliance can no longer be placed on those two cases, and inward-bound steamships must treat the Swin Middle Lightship as midway in a narrow channel, and, when safe and practicable, pass it on their port hand, in order to comply with art. 21 of the Regulations of 1884 (now art. 25 of the Regulations of 1897). THE "OPORTO"

A barge belonging to the defts., without negligence on their part, was sunk in the fairway of the river Thames. They employed an under-waterman to conduct the salvage operations necessary to raise her and, for that purpose, put him in possession and control: but, owing to the guard-vessel placed by him, with lights upon it, to mark the submerged barge, having been negligently allowed to get out of position, the plt.'s steamship coming up the river, without negligence, ran upon the wreck and sustained damage:—

Held, by C. A., affirming the decision of G. Barnes J., [1899] W. N. 14 (3); [1899] P. 74, that the defts. were personally responsible, as (following Penny v. Wimbledon Urban Council, [1899] 2 Q. B. 72), they were bound to see that the necessary precautions were taken to prevent danger to the public, and could not escape from this liability by throwing the blame on the contractor employed by them to do the work. Secondly, because, following The Utopia, [1893] A. C. 492, they were under an obligation to protect other vessels from receiving injury from the sunken barge, as the employment of the contractor did not amount to an abandonment or transfer of the possession, management, and control of the wreck. THE "SNARK"

In accordance with art. 40 of the Thames By-laws, those in charge of her gave "four blasts of the steam whistle in rapid succession" to indicate that the vessel was "not under command." The defts., the owners of a steamship which was following her, and ran into her, alleged that those in charge of the plt.'s steamship ought to have hoisted two black balls in accordance with art. 4 (a) of the Regulations for Preventing Collisions at Sea:—

Held, that—assuming, without deciding, that the Regulations for Preventing Collisions at Sea apply in the Thames, as being tidal waters, connected with the high seas, navigable by sea-going vessels—art. 4 (a) of those regulations was not applicable, because that article only provides for the exhibition of black balls by vessels not under command whilst afloat; and, secondly, because, if that article did apply to a vessel fast aground, the case was provided for by art. 40 of the Thames rules, and the sea regulations only come in where they are not excluded by express provision in, or the general scope of, the river rules. THE "CARLOTTA" G. 85. — Tow and tug—Action against—Decree by default against tow—Decree that plaintiffs' ship and tug were both to blame—Division of loss.

A Norwegian barque, whilst in tow of a tug in the Bristol Channel, came into collision with, and sank, a third vessel. The plts., owners of the third vessel, brought an action in rem against the owners of the barque and the owners of the tug. The owners of the barque having allowed judgment to go by default, the barque was sold by the marshal under a decree condemning that vessel in the amount of the plts.' damage.

The action proceeded against the tug, and resulted in a decree pronouncing both the plts.' vessel and the tug to blame, and condemning the owners of the tug in a moiety of the plts.' damage. On the question of the division of loss:—

Held, by the C. A., affirming the decision of Bucknill J., that the plts. were entitled to the proceeds in court of the barque, in part satisfaction of the whole of their damage under the decree by default against that vessel, and that they were also entitled to a moiety of their damage from the owners of the tug, under the decree of both to blame, the proceeds of the barque, and the moiety due from the owners of the tug, taken together, not exceeding the whole of the plts.' loss.

A tug towing a vessel collided with and sunk a third vessel. The tug and the third vessel were found to blame for excessive speed in a fog. The tow was found to blame for not controlling the speed of the tug:—

Held, that although the tow had not herself been in collision, and therefore her liability depended on the relation of master and servant between herself and the tug, still the Admiralty rule in case of collision between ships applied, and the tug and the tow were liable to half the damages to the third vessel, after deducting half the damage to the tow to which the third vessel

87. — Tug and tow—Fog—Stopping—Regulations for Preventing Collisions at Sea, 1884, art. 18.

By art. 18 of the Regulations for Preventing Collisions at Sea, "Every steamship, when approaching another ship, so as to involve risk of collision, shall slacken her speed, or stop and reverse, if necessary."

A four-masted barque, in tow of a tug, in a dense fog at night in the St. George's Channel, was going at the rate of  $1\frac{1}{2}$  knots an hour, and did not stop, though she heard the whistle of a steamer on her port side gradually nearing and indicating danger. The steamer was proceeding at about  $2\frac{1}{2}$  knots an hour, and heard the whistle of the tug crossing her bows from starboard to port. She ported and reversed her engines on seeing the barque, but struck her at right angles on her port quarter, and was held to blame under art. 18 for not stopping sooner:—

Held, that the barque was not also to blame for not stopping, as a tug incumbered with a tow is not to be deemed a steamship for all purposes under the rules, and the speed was as slow as was possible consistently with keeping the tow-rope sufficiently taut to prevent the risk of the two vessels being drawn together, and the propeller of the tug being fouled. THE "LORD BANGOR" — — JEUNE P. A British steamship, belonging to the defts., with passengers for Newcastle, from a place in the British Islands, came into collision with the plt.'s vessel in the Tyne. Neither the master nor the mate of the defts.' steamship held a pilotage certificate for the Tyne district, within which the collision occurred, and the vessel was at the time in charge of a pilot duly licensed by the Tyne Pilotage Commrs. The pilot was found alone to blame:—

Held, that the defts. were not liable for the damage sustained by the plt., as, under s. 604, sub-s. 1 of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1894, pilotage was compulsory, notwithstanding the provisions of s. 16 of the schedule to the Tyne Pilotage Order Confirmation Act, 1865, as interpreted in The Johann Sverdrup, (1886) 12 P. from the southward too close to the pierheads infringed by-law 20 of the Regulations of the River Tyne, 1884, as construed by the C. A. in The Harvest, (1886) 11 P. D. 90 :—

Held, that the defts.' steamship had not broken the rule, as it was not a question of actual distance, but whether the incoming vessel gave the other room to pass out in such a way as not to cause danger, and the defts.' steamship had left the plts.' steamship sufficient room to go out and pass to the southward, provided the outgoing vessel had seen the incoming vessel over the pier, and acted as soon as possible. THE "JOHN O'SCOTT" — C. On May 21, 1898, a collision occurred in the river Humber between the steamships Rijnstroom and Achilles. The owners of the Rijnstroom admitted liability, and, as plts., obtained a decree, under the provisions of the Merchant Shipping Acts, limiting their liability, with interest, to 622*l.* 10*s.* 5*d.*

At the reference the registrar, assisted by merchants, found that there was due to the several claimants 581*l.* 0*s.* 9*d.*, and the registrar in his report stated that he was of opinion that "each party ought to pay his own costs of the reference and a moiety of the reference fees."

Held—whilst dismissing the motion with costs on the ground that the registrar had taken the right view of the facts—that no such practice existed, as alleged, for where an exorbitant claim was put forward, which the plaintiffs succeeded in largely reducing, they were practically the successful party, and, therefore, the Court would act upon the suggestion of the registrar, and direct that each party should pay his own costs of the reference and a moiety of the reference fees. THE "RIJNSTROOM"

A charterparty provided that the ship should receive "a full and complete cargo" to be loaded as customary at G., as per colliery guarantee, in fifteen colliery working days:—

104. — Delay in loading—"Weather-working days"—Mode of computation.

A charterparty provided that cargo should be loaded at a certain rate per weather-working day. On certain days owing to bad weather cargo could only be loaded for a few hours:—

Held, that the time so occupied in loading cargo was not to be reckoned against the charterers as a whole, but as a part only, of a weather-working day.

Where work is stopped by bad weather, but a substantial quantity of work is done, though not amounting to half a day, it is to be reckoned as half a day: where substantially more than half a day's work is done, though not amounting to a whole day, it is to be counted as a whole day: no smaller fraction than half a day should be taken into the calculation. *BRANCKELOW STEAMSHIP CO. v. charterers in failing to provide a quay berth at the port of loading, the obligation to pay demurrage continues, in the absence of any default of the shipowner, until the completion of the loading.

A ship was chartered to go to a foreign port for a cargo, the charterers guaranteeing a cargo and quay berth ready at the port of shipment; owing to their inability to provide a quay berth the ship went on demurrage and, while lying at anchor waiting for a quay berth, was run into by another vessel. The ship was properly taken by her captain to another port for repair, and during her absence for that purpose a quay berth fell vacant which would otherwise have been given to her. After her return to the port of loading she was kept waiting a further six weeks for a quay berth. The shipowners claimed demurrage for the six weeks, but not for the period during which she was absent for repairs:—

Held, that upon the return of the ship to the port of loading the demurrage period was resumed without any break in the continuity of the demurrage obligation, and that the charterers were liable to pay demurrage from that date until the loading was completed. TYNE AND BLYTH SHIPPING CO. v. 106. — Discharge—Delivery of spars—Obligation of consignees.

A charterparty for the carriage of spars provided that the cargo should be taken from alongside at merchants' expense, the ship "to discharge over side into lighters or otherwise if required":—

Held, that the charterparty did not impose upon the ship the obligation to get the spars into the lighters, and for that purpose to put men on board the lighters: but that when it had brought the spars within reach of the consignee's men in the lighters, it was the duty of the latter to take their part in the joint operation of delivering and receiving the goods, and that the consignees were liable to pay demurrage for delay caused by reason of their men being too few to enable the discharge to be completed within the lay days. PETERSEN v. Held, that, under the terms of her charterparty, the obligation to unload did not begin until the ship was berthed in a usual fruit berth with the assent of the harbour authorities, the shipowners could not claim demurrage for the delay. GOOD & CO. v. ISAACS

108. — Discharge into railway wagons—Deficiency of wagons—Liability of charterer—"Ship to be discharged with all reasonable despatch as customary."

A ship was chartered to load a cargo of wood, to be carried to the port of Cardiff, and then to be "discharged with all reasonable despatch as customary." The custom at the port of Cardiff was to discharge such a cargo into the wagons of certain rys. that had access to the quay. The charterers arranged with one of these rys. for the supply of wagons to take the cargo. Without any negligence on their part, but owing to stress of work at the port, by reason of which there was a deficiency in the number of wagons available, the discharge of the ship was delayed. In an action against the charterers for the detention of the ship:—

Held, affirming the judgment of Bigham J., that the charterers having done their best to procure the appliances that were customarily used at the port for discharging such a ship, and having used them with proper despatch, were not liable for the delay. LYLE SHIPPING CO. v. 109. — Lay days.

Where charterers were asked to commence discharging at 10 A.M. and declined, but ultimately agreed and began to discharge on that day:—

Held, (1.) that the charterers were entitled to a whole lay day, and were therefore not bound to take delivery on the day in question, but (2.) that by agreeing to commence the discharge impliedly agreed to count that day as a lay day, and therefore the lay days began on that day. TUE "KATY" C. A. (revers. Jeune P.) [1895] P. 56

110. — Lay days—Damages by way of demurrage—Judicature (Scotland) Act, 1825 (6 Geo. 4, c. 120), s. 40.

By charterparty it was provided that the River Ettrick should proceed to Bo'ness and receive a cargo of coal, to be supplied by the charterers, and brought alongside within sixty running hours, demurrage to be paid at a specified rate, "lay days to count from the time the master has got ship reported berthed and ready to receive cargo, and given notice of the same in writing to the charterers." On Oct. 27 the shipowner informed the charterers that the River Ettrick had left Harwich for Bo'ness, and asked them to supply cargo for Oct. 19. On Oct. 19, at 8.30 A.M., the ship arrived in the roads of Bo'ness, but in consequence of the crowded state of the docks she was not allowed to enter. Her arrival was wired to the charterers. On Oct. 21 a loading berth became vacant owing to the cargo of an earlier arrived vessel not being forward. If a cargo had been then ready for the River Ettrick she would have been allowed to enter the dock, but her cargo was not ready. Eventually, she was docked on the 26th, berthed for loading on the 27th, and sailed on Oct. 28.

The shipowner recovered from the charterers, in an action raised in the Sheriff Court, Scotland, damages by way of demurrage for the detention of the ship from Oct. 21 until the time when the cargo was ready. Upon appeal to the Court of Session the judgment was reversed. The fact that there was a berth vacant on the 21st was not set out in the interlocutor of the Court of Session in accordance with the Scottish Judicature Act, 1825, but this fact was to be found in the opinion of the judge delivering judgment:—

Held, by the House of Lords, that to carry out the spirit of the Scottish Judicature Act all the facts ought to be found by the interlocutor appealed from; but, secondly, it made no difference in the result, for assuming the facts to be as found, the shipowner had no cause of action, for there was no obligation on the part of the charterers to have a cargo on the quay, ready for loading, on the off chance of a berth becoming vacant.

111. — Loading—Obligation of charterers to load—Successive ships—Approximate dates of arrival at loading port—Damages for detention of ship—Perils of the sea clause—Towage clause—Delay—Salvage service—Allowable deviation.

By a charterparty shipowners agreed with charterers to provide for the successive arrival at a foreign loading port of five steamers between Aug. and Dec. inclusive, “as nearly as possible a steamer a month,” at approximate dates afterwards agreed upon; and the charterers agreed to present cargo within twenty-four hours after notice of each ship’s readiness to receive it. The charterparty contained a clause excepting perils of the sea, and also a clause giving each steamer liberty to tow and be towed and assist vessels in all situations, and providing that salvages should be for the benefit of owners. Owing to perils of the sea, ship No. 2 arrived about a fortnight late; and while she was loading ship No. 3 arrived punctually. There was not sufficient labour to load the two ships at once, and ship No. 3 had to wait for her cargo till the loading of ship No. 2 was completed:—

Held, upon the construction of the charterparty, that the shipowners were entitled to damages for the detention of ship No. 3.

Ship No. 4 arrived three weeks late at her Australian port owing to her having while on her voyage to that port fallen in with a disabled ship and towed her to Mauritius as a salvage service; such towage was out of the course of the voyage, and took three weeks to effect. The arbitrator having found that the delay caused by this towing was not so great as to frustrate the object of the adventure:—

Held, that the salvage service was an allowable deviation within the contract between the shipowners and the charterers; and that notwithstanding the delay in the arrival of the ship, the charterers were bound to present cargo within twenty-four hours after notice, and not having done so were liable to pay demurrage to the shipowners. JOHN POTTER & Co. v. BURELL & SON

Time for delivery to count when steamer is ready to discharge.” There was only one customary place of discharge at the port in question, and when the steamer arrived at the port that place was occupied. In an action for demurrage:—

Held, that the steamer was not “ready to discharge,” and that the time for delivery did not therefore commence until she was at the customary place of discharge in the port. SANDERS v. JENKINS

The plts., living at N., brought an action in the N. County Court against defts., living at W., in another district, for demurrage for detention of ship at W. At the commencement of the action the ship was at sea, and the former cargo was not within the N. district:—

A charterparty provided that the cargo should “be discharged with all dispatch as customary,” and the ship was detained owing to a strike of dock labourers. By the custom of the port a dock co. undertook the work of discharging cargo:—

The charterers ordered her to proceed to R., one of those places. During the voyage the charterers heard of a strike at R. which did not extend to the other places named in the charterparty. The unloading was delayed by the strike beyond the time fixed in the charterparty;—

Held, that the charterers were not obliged to change the destination from R. to one of the other places on learning of the strike, and that as the delay was covered by the strike clause no demurrage was payable. BULMAN & DICKSON v. FENWICK & CO. — C. A. [1894] 1 Q. B. 179

By the custom of the port of

L. the ship had to put the timber into barges alongside. The stevedores employed struck during the discharge;—

Held, (1) that the provision as to the daily delivery was in favour of the cargo owner, but had not been satisfied, and that demurrage paid under protest in respect of the delay by the strike must be returned, less demurrage for one day on which barges were not ready. *DOBELL & CO. v. On arrival a berth was ordered, but, owing to the crowded state of the dock, delay occurred which prevented the vessel being berthed for some time after arrival. On a claim by the shipowners for demurrage arising from the delay;—

122. — "Cargo"—Hiring of entire capacity of ship—"Port."

A charterparty (which was on a printed form filled in with writing, and which commenced with a statement that the ship was of a dead weight capacity of 125 tons) provided that a ship should load "a cargo or estimated quantity of 470 quarters (i.e., 102 tons) of wheat at R. (in the port of L.), and proceed to G." (in the port of P). Also it excepted sea perils and allowed the ship to call at any ports in any order. The words "full and complete" which preceded the word "cargo" in the printed form had been struck out. Having loaded the wheat the ship went to M. (also in the port of L.), and loaded from another shipper ten tons of wire netting for P. (in the port of P.), where the netting was discharged.

Between P. and G. the ship came into collision and the wheat was damaged. The plt. claimed to recover damages for the injury to the wheat on the ground that the ship had deviated in not proceeding direct to G. :—

Held, that the liberty "to call at any ports" included liberty to call for the purpose of loading or discharging other cargo there, for that the charterparty, notwithstanding the use of the term "cargo," did not amount to a hiring of the full carrying capacity of the ship, and that there had consequently been no deviation, and the plt. could not recover.

Seem, in a charterparty "ports" is not to be understood in a strict technical sense, but includes loading places, though within the same port.

123. — Damage to cargo—Liberty to fill up for steamer's benefit.

By charterparty the deft.'s vessel was to load a cargo of wheat at Marianople for Gibraltar for orders for a port in the United Kingdom or on the continent between Havre and Hamburg, the master of the vessel, to avoid being frozen in at the port of loading, to be "at liberty to leave . . . with part cargo, and to fill up for steamer's benefit at any open Black Sea, Azoff or Mediterranean port for United Kingdom, Continent or Mediterranean; but in case of leaving with part cargo the steamer shall complete the voyage as if a full cargo had been loaded . . ."

The master, under this liberty, left Marianople with part of the cargo of wheat, and proceeded to Novorossisk, where he filled up for steamer's benefit with linseed. At Gibraltar he was ordered to deliver the wheat at Cardiff; but he first proceeded to King's Lynn, and there discharged the linseed. On the way between King's Lynn and Cardiff the wheat was damaged by fire. The plts., who were holders of the bill of lading incorporating the conditions of the charterparty, sued the defts. for the damage :—

Held, that the defts. were liable as, between King's Lynn and Cardiff, they had become insurers of the consignees of the wheat, for, though the usual exceptions in the bill of lading and charterparty would have covered the loss if it had occurred in the ordinary course of the voyage, the defts. were not entitled to deviate by taking the wheat round by King's Lynn, and could only discharge the linseed at a port on the way. THE "DUNBETH"

Exceptions.

128. — "Accident of navigation"—Negligence clause—Damage to cargo—Excepted perils.

By a charterparty and bill of lading the shipowner was exempted from liability to the charterer for damage to cargo arising from "perils, &c., of the sea or other waters . . . strandings . . . and all other accidents of navigation and all losses, &c., caused thereby . . . even when occasioned by negligence, &c., of the pilot, master, mariners or other servants" of the shipowner, "but unless stranded, sunk or burnt, nothing herein contained shall exempt" the shipowner "from liability to pay for damage to cargo occasioned by improper opening of valves, sluices and ports, or by causes other than those above excepted. . . ." While the ship was loading at her moorings, a valve in the side of the ship was properly opened, but negligently left open. A quantity of water came in and damaged the cargo. To prevent the ship sinking in deep water the master had her towed into shallow water, where she settled on the ground :—

Held, that the shipowner was not liable, because the clause as to negligence applied to "perils, &c., of the sea and other waters," and the exemption of improper use of valves was governed by "unless stranded, &c."

A cargo of oats and maize was shipped on the defts. steamship under a bill of lading excepting "accidents of the seas." During the voyage, owing to exceptionally heavy weather, and for the safety of the ship, the ventilators were closed for about a week, with the result that the air in the holds nearest the engine-room space became heated and, not being able to escape, a portion of the cargo was damaged:—

Held, that the shipowner was not liable, for the contract was for the carriage of goods by a steamship, and the damage was due to the air, heated in the usual course of the voyage of a steamship, being unable to escape from the holds owing to the ventilators being necessarily closed, and, therefore, the severity of the weather was the proximate cause, and the damage covered by the exception. THE "THRUSCOR"

130. — "Defects latent on beginning voyage or otherwise"—Exemption of shipowner from liability.

A bill of lading contained, among other exceptions, one by which the shipowner was not to be liable for loss or damage arising from "defects latent on beginning voyage or otherwise" in hull, tackle, boilers, or machinery, or their appurtenances:—

Held, affirming the judgment of Bigham J., [1898] 1 Q. B. 645, that the exception did not cover a defect which was obvious at the commencement of the voyage. OWNERS OF CARGO ON BOARD SS. WAIKATO v. NEW ZEALAND SHIPPING CO. C. A. [1898] W. N. 152; [1899] 1 Q. B. 56

131. — Delay—Lock-out—Accident to railway—Other clauses beyond charterer's control—Causes ejusdem generis with antecedent exceptions.

A ship was chartered to proceed to Batoum, and there load with oil from a named factory, and at a specified rate per day. The charterparty excepted, among other things, "strikes lock-outs accidents to railway," and also "other causes beyond charterer's control." Oil is brought to Batoum by a ry., which was injured by floods so that no oil could be sent down, and the workmen of the factory were discharged, there being no employment for them. Subsequently to the arrival of the ship in port the ry. was repaired, and oil arrived in sufficient quantity to load her; but there was delay in doing so, because the workmen who had been discharged could not be got together in sufficient numbers, and such men as were there were employed in loading other vessels according to the order of their arrival, as was the practice of shippers at that port. On a claim for damages for detention of the ship:—

Held, that the general clause excepting "other causes beyond charterer's control" referred to matters ejusdem generis with the antecedent exceptions, and that the delay in loading the ship after the arrival of the oil could not be attributed to accident to the ry., or to anything ejusdem generis with a lock-out, which was confined to the dismissal of workmen arising out of a trade dispute. *In re RICHARDSONS AND M. 132. — Disabled ship—Abandonment of voyage—Duty of shipowner to repair ship and complete voyage—Constructive loss.

Where a charterparty provided that the ship shall proceed to a port of discharge and there deliver the cargo, unless prevented by the excepted perils, and the ship has to put into a port of refuge for repairs, the shipowner is liable in damages for abandoning the voyage at that port without the consent of the charterers, unless the effect of the excepted perils proves to have been such as to make it either physically impossible to complete the voyage, or so clearly unreasonable as to be impossible from a business point of view.

133. — Due diligence—Negligence of agents—The Harter Act, 1893 (52 Congress, Sess. 2, c. 105).

Goods were shipped under a bill of lading which incorporated by reference an Act of Congress by which, if the owner of a ship shall exercise due diligence to make the vessel in all respects seaworthy, and properly manned, equipped, and supplied, neither the vessel, her owner, agent nor charterers shall become liable or be held responsible for damage or loss resulting from faults or errors in navigation or in the management of the vessel. The owner of a vessel supplied proper equipment and appointed a competent ship's carpenter, but by the negligence of the carpenter the ship was allowed to go to sea in an unseaworthy condition, by reason whereof a part of the cargo was damaged during the voyage. In an action by the owner of the damaged goods against the shipowner:—

Held, that to exempt the shipowner from liability it was not sufficient merely to shew that he had personally exercised due diligence to make the vessel seaworthy, but that it must be shewn that those persons whom he employed to act for him in this respect had exercised due diligence; and that, therefore, the negligence of the ship's carpenter prevented the exemption from applying, and the shipowner was liable. *DOBELL & Co. v. 135. — Negligence of master—Incorporation of charterparty conditions into bill of lading.

Goods were shipped under a charterparty, and a bill of lading contained the words "all other conditions as per charter":—

Held, that these words did not incorporate into the bill of lading the negligence clause in the charterparty, so as to extend the excepted perils to "stranding occasioned by the negligence of the master." The words ought to be construed as meaning only such conditions of the charterparty as are to be performed by the consignees of the goods.

Wheat was shipped under a charterparty and bill of lading, both excepting "perils of the sea and other accidents of navigation even when occasioned by the negligence of the master":—

Held, that damage to cargo arising from (1) leakage, (2) neglect of master to stop leak, were within the excepted perils. The charterparty was conditioned that there should be good dunnage, and that a surveyor should certify accordingly. A surveyor did certify that the ship was entitled to full confidence and a good risk for underwriters, but did not mention dunnage:

Held, that the certificate was not conclusive, and the shipowner was liable for damage caused by imperfect dunnage. THE "CRESSINGTON"

A bill of lading was signed by the deft., who was master and part owner of the ship, on behalf of himself and his co-owners. It contained an exception in respect of "the neglect and default of master in navigating the ship." The cargo was lost by the stranding of the ship through the negligence, but not the wilful negligence, of the deft. In an action by the owners and shippers of the cargo:—

Held, that the negligence which caused the loss was that of the deft. exclusively as master and not as part owner, and was within the exception. WESTPORT COAL CO. v. McPHAIL damaged by being negligently stowed by a stevedore employed by the shipowner:—

Held, that the words "or otherwise" in the bill of lading were general, and did not limit the exemption to loss or damage arising from negligence in matters akin to navigation, or to loss or damage arising from negligence in relation to the other excepted perils of the bill of lading. *BAERSELMAN v. 140. — Restraint of princes—Contraband of war—Risk of seizure—Contract of carriage partly performed—Justification of refusal to complete.

The plts. shipped goods which were contraband of war on the defts.' ship for carriage from London to Yokohama under a bill of lading containing the exception of "restraint of princes," and also a special clause that "if the entering of or discharging in the port (of discharge) shall be considered by the master unsafe by reason of war . . . the master may land the goods at the nearest safe and convenient port." The ship also carried goods belonging to other shippers. In the course of her voyage the ship arrived at Hong Kong, and on the day of her arrival there war was declared between China and Japan. There were at that time several Chinese war-vessels in and round the port of Hong Kong, and if the master had attempted to sail thence with the plts.' goods on board there would have been a serious danger of their being seized and confiscated. The master accordingly landed them there. In an action for breach of contract to carry the goods to Yokohama:—

Held, (1.) that the risk of the goods being seized, if attempted to be carried further, amounted to a "restraint of princes" within the exception; (2.) that such risk of seizure on the voyage between Hong Kong and Yokohama, rendered the "entering of or discharging in the port" of Yokohama unsafe within the meaning of the special clause; and (3.) that the master's duty to take care of the cargo justified him, apart from any exceptions in the bill of lading, in landing the plts.' goods where he did. *NOBEL EXPLOSIVES CO. v. Defts. chartered plts.' ship to load 3000 tons of nitrate at I. in C. at the rate of 200 tons per working lay day, to be reckoned from the day when the vessel was ready to receive cargo to the day of her despatch, "restraints of princes and rulers, political disturbances, or impediments during the said voyage always mutually excepted." The customary mode of loading at I. was to send the nitrate by rail direct to the ship's side as required. A civil war was going on, and I. was blockaded. After the blockade was raised, the ry. was in the hands of troops, and no nitrate could reach I. When the ship was loaded, she put into another port of C. to obtain coal (which was very dear at I.) and was detained by the Government in power there for refusing to pay to it export duties she had already paid to that in power at I. :—

Held, that the delay in both cases fell within the exception. SMITH & SERVICE v. ROSARIO NITRATE CO.

142. — Shipowner from liability, Exemption of — Clause of exemption in charterparty but not in bill.

A charterparty contained the following special clause: "The captain and crew, although paid by the owners . . . shall be the agents and servants of the charterers for all purposes . . . In signing bills of lading it is expressly agreed that the captain shall only do so as the agent for the charterers; and the charterers hereby agree to indemnify the owners from all consequences or liabilities (if any) that may arise from the captain signing bills of lading, or in otherwise complying with the same" :—

Held, (1.) that the clause in the charterparty was binding only between the owners and the charterers, and did not affect the liability of the owners to the holders of the bills of lading, who were entitled to consider the captain as the agent of the owners; (2.) that the reference to the charterparty in the bills of lading did not give the holders constructive notice of the contents of the charterparty, the equitable doctrine of constructive notice of contents of documents not being applicable to mercantile transactions.

Held, that the bill of lading contained an implied warranty that the refrigerating machinery was at the time of shipment fit to carry the frozen meat in condition, and that the exceptions applied only to what might happen during the voyage, and not to the original fitness of the machinery. OWNERS OF CARGO ON SHIP "MAORI KING" v. The returned answers were (1) that the practice was to case such a pipe before loading; (2) that after loading, the pipe was not accessible without removing part of the cargo :—

Held, on these answers that the ship was unseaworthy when the cargo was taken on board, that the peril was not therefore an excepted one, and the shipowners were liable.

145. — Advance freight—Loss of cargo—Liability of charterer.

A charterparty contained the following clause, "the freight to be paid as follows: one-third on signing bills of lading . . . and the remainder on unloading in cash." Bills of lading were to be signed within twenty-four hours after the cargo was on board. After the commencement of the voyage and before bills of lading were signed the ship sank and the cargo was lost. The charterers then refused to present the bills of lading for signature :—

Held, that the loss of the cargo did not relieve the charterers from their obligation to present bills of lading, and that the shipowner was entitled to damages equal to the amount of the advance freight. ORIENTAL STEAMSHIP CO. v. TYLOR — C. A. [1893] 2 Q. B. 518

By a contract of charterparty the defts. contracted to load on board the plts.' ship a full and complete cargo at a certain rate of freight per ton "on the quantity to be delivered to the consignees." "The freight to be due and paid as follows: Two-thirds in cash three days after sailing, ship lost or not lost, the balance on unloading and right delivery of the cargo." After the defts. had loaded a part of the cargo a fire broke out on board and destroyed the goods so loaded. Fire was one of the perils mutually excepted by the charterparty. The defts. subsequently loaded the balance of the cargo, and the ship sailed. Three days after sailing the plts. claimed payment of advance freight on two-thirds of the full cargo shipped:—

Held, that the plts. were not entitled to payment of advance freight on the part of the cargo destroyed.

148. — Advance on account of freight—Charterparty—Disbursements at port of loading.

A charterparty contained a clause, "Cash for steamer's ordinary disbursements at port or ports of loading, not exceeding 150*l.* in all, to be advanced at exchange of 50*d.* to the dollar on account of freight, subject to 3 per cent. to cover cost of insurance, &c." The master, having other cash in hand, paid part of the disbursements out of it, and only obtained an advance of part from the charterers. The charterers claimed the profit they would have made by the difference of exchange if the whole amount had been advanced:—

Held, that the clause was optional and not obligatory on the shipowner, and that the charterers were not entitled to recover. THE "PRIMULA" — G. Barnes J. [1894] P. 128

149. — Cost of Discharge—Bill of Lading.

By a clause in a charterparty it was agreed that freight on a cargo of coals shipped by the defts. on the plts.' steamship from Sunderland to Port de Bouc should be paid "at the rate of 9*s.* per ton of 20 cwt*s.* . . . delivered, or on bill of lading quantity, less 2 per cent., at receiver's option, to be declared in writing before bulk is broken"; and by another clause the consignees were "to effect the discharge of the cargo, steamer paying 1 fr. per ton of 20 cwt*s.*" The bill of lading stated that the quantity of coal shipped was 1184 tons. On arrival at Port de Bouc the consignees exercised their option by accepting the cargo at the bill of lading quantity, less 2 per cent., but charged the ship with 1 fr. per ton on the bill of lading quantity without deducting the 2 per cent.:—

Held, that the clauses of the charterparty must be read together, and, as the consignees had elected to pay freight on the bill of lading quantity, less 2 per cent., the same deduction of 2 per cent. must be allowed by the defts. in respect of the payment of 1 fr. per ton by the shipowner for the discharge. THE "HOLLINSIDE" Div. Ct. [1898] P. 131

150. — Damage to goods—Loss of merchantable character—Liability to pay freight—Marine insurance—Insurance of profit—Warranty against average—Concealment of material fact.

A vessel, on board which dates had been shipped under bills of lading making the freight payable on right delivery, was sunk during the course of the voyage, and subsequently raised. On arrival at the port of discharge it was found that although the dates still retained the appearance of dates, and although they were of considerable value for the purpose of distillation into spirit, they were so impregnated with sewage and in such a condition of fermentation as to be no longer merchantable as dates:—

Held, that freight was not payable in respect of them.

A ship having been chartered for a lump sum, the charterers put her up as a general ship, and goods were shipped on board under bills of lading at freights which in the aggregate exceeded the charter freight. The charterers insured their "profit on charter" by a policy which contained a warranty against average. On arrival of the ship part of the cargo was delivered, and freight was payable under the bills of lading for that portion; but owing to sea damage the remainder of the cargo had lost its merchantable character, and freight was not payable in respect of it; the result being that the total amount of the freights payable under the bills of lading was less than the charter freight, and the charterers' profit was consequently lost:—

Held, that there had been a total loss of the subject-matter of the insurance within the meaning of the warranty:

Held, also, that the fact that the charter freight was a lump sum and not a tonnage rate, although material, had been sufficiently disclosed by a reference to the charterparty, a clause for payment of a lump sum for freight being a usual clause in charterparties, and the obligation to specifically disclose the contents of a charter extending only to unusual clauses, the insertion of which the underwriters could not reasonably have anticipated.

E. shipped 1519 tons at 1*l.* 5*s.* A fire broke out which destroyed 1000 tons of this cargo and delayed the ship. E. refused to load more goods, and A. filled up the ship with other cargo:—

Held, that the space occupied by the burnt goods was taken out of the charterparty altogether, and that the freight received by A. for goods carried therein belonged to A. and ought not to be taken into account in reduction of damages:—

Held, further, that the fire only absolved E. from payment of the bill of lading freight on the goods burnt, and that after the fire E. was liable for 5600*l.* less 1*l.* 5*s.* per ton on the goods burnt, and not 5600*l.* less 1*l.* 17*s.* 6*d.* per ton on the goods burnt. *AITKEN, LILBURN & Co. v. The freight to be paid on right delivery of cargo, if discharged in the U. K.; in cash as customary . . . and if on the Continent in cash at the exchange of the day. . . ." The I. put into a port of distress, where a portion of the cargo was found to be so much damaged that on survey it was condemned as unfit for reshipment and sold by the master:—

Held, that the intention of the parties was to make an English contract, and the payment of freight being expressly dealt with in the charterparty, no freight was payable on the portion sold. THE "INDUSTRIE" - C. A. [1894] P. 58

There was no clear evidence as to how or where the missing bales had disappeared:—

Held, that there was nothing to displace the evidence supplied by the bills of lading that the

An alkali co. discharged a large quantity of water containing solid matter in suspension into a tidal brook which flowed into a navigable river. The solid matter was carried down and deposited in the river, but it was not alleged to tend to the obstruction of the navigation of the river:—

Held, that the co. were rightly convicted of casting, &c., rubbish, &c., "in any place or situation on shore where the same shall be liable to be washed into the sea, &c.," and that the words "so as to tend to the injury or obstruction of the navigation thereof" did not apply to this provision, but only to the earlier part of s. 11 of the Harbours Act, 1814 (54 Geo. 3, c. 159). *UNITED ALKALI Co. v. Jeune P. dismissed the action with costs to be taxed as between solicitor and client:—

Held, affirming the decision of the President, that the defts. were acting in pursuance of their public duties, so that s. 1 of the Public Authorities Protection Act, 1893, applied, and as that statute, dealing with procedure only, was retrospective the action was barred after the expiration of six months from the default complained of. THE "YDON"

The tug towing the leading vessel was so slow and inefficient that the respondents' vessel, which was the last in the line, was stranded on the ebb tide and damaged:—

Two yachts were entered by their respective owners for a club race, each owner undertaking with the club to be bound by the club sailing rules. By the rules the owner of any yacht disobeying any of the rules was to be liable for "all damages arising therefrom." One of the yachts in breach of a sailing rule, through improper navigation without the actual fault or privity of the owner, ran into and sank the other yacht:—

Held, that there was a contract between the owners upon which the owner of the damaged yacht could sue the owner of the other, and that upon the true construction of the rules the words "all damages" excluded the operation of s. 54 of the British Shipping Act Amendment Act, 1862, which limited the liability to 8*l.* per ton.

By s. 3, sub-s. 1, of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1894, ships not exceeding 15 "tons burden" employed solely in navigation on the rivers or coasts of the United Kingdom are exempted from registry. By s. 503, sub-s. 2 (a), the owners of a steamship shall not, where, without their actual fault or privity, any loss or damage is caused to any other vessel, by reason of the improper navigation of their steamship, be liable to damages beyond 8*l.* for each ton of the "gross tonnage" of the steamship:—

Held, by the C. A., affirming the decision of G. Barnes J., [1898] W. N. 164 (1); [1899] P. 45, that, under s. 3, a small tug—solely employed in the manner mentioned in the section—of the "gross tonnage," if measured in accordance with the Act, of 35.99 tons, was exempted from registry as the words "tons burden" referred to the net tonnage, and, therefore, under the rules laid down in the Act, involved the deduction from her "gross tonnage" of the allowances for engine-room and crew space, which reduced her tonnage to less than 15 "tons burden."

Secondly, that, as the vessel was properly exempted from registry, her owners were entitled, under s. 503, to limit their liability to 8*l.* for each ton of her gross tonnage ascertained by measuring her in accordance with the Act. THE "BRUNEL" — C. A. [1899] W. N. 227; [1900] P. 24

After a collision between a British and a German steamship, in the North Sea, the German vessel sank with her cargo, and a large number of her crew and passengers were drowned. The British vessel put into Rotterdam, and was there proceeded against by the owners of the German vessel and by two claimants interested in cargo. The British vessel having been found alone to blame, she was sold by order of the Court, and the net proceeds paid out rateably to the three claimants.

The owners of the British vessel, as plts., having obtained a decree in a limitation action in this country, under the Merchant Shipping Act, 1894 (57 & 58 Vict. c. 60), s. 503, paid into court an amount equal to 8*l.* per ton of their statutory liability with interest to date, and in respect of the life claims gave bail to pay the balance of 7*l.* per ton when required. On the question as to the right of those who had sued in Holland to participate in the distribution of this sum, and as to the allowance of interest on the 7*l.* per ton:—

Held, that the owners of the German vessel, and the claimant in respect of cargo (the other claimant not taking part in the proceedings), were not debarred from proving against the fund in court to the full extent of their loss, but, in ascertaining the proportion receivable by them, credit must be given for the sums they had respectively been paid out of the proceeds of the sale of the ship, and the plts. were entitled to take out of the fund a sum equal to the amounts received by the three claimants abroad. Also that, as part of the damages, 4 per cent. interest was payable on the sum representing 7*l.* per ton from the date of the collision until payment into court. THE "CRATHIE"

A free pass, obtained by an official of another ry. co., for himself and wife, from the London and South Western Ry. Co., for the journey from London to Jersey, referred, on the face of it, to the following condition printed on the back: "That it shall be taken as evidence of an agreement that the co. are relieved from all responsibility for any injury, delay, loss, or damage, however caused, that may be sustained by the person or persons using this pass." Through the negligence of the servants of the ry. co., and during the transit from Southampton to the Channel Islands, the steamer stranded, and the official was drowned. His own, and his wife's, luggage were also lost.

The widow on behalf of herself and infant children claimed, against the fund paid by the ry. co. into court in a limitation suit, for the loss of her husband and father of the children. The registrar disallowed the claim:—

Held, by G. Barnes J., affirming the decision of the registrar, that, in respect of the loss of life, as the widow and children could only claim under Lord Campbell's Act, where, if death had not ensued, the party injured would have been entitled to maintain an action for damages, the conditions on which the free pass was granted, and which the deceased must, from his official position, be taken to have known, included the sea passage as well as the land transit and barred the claim:

Held, also, that in respect of the claim by the widow, as administratrix of her husband, for the loss of his personal effects, and in her own right, for the loss of her luggage, the condition attaching to the pass equally precluded any claim, for the London and South Western Railway special Act of 1848—under ss. 47, 48, 49 of which (made perpetual by an Act of 1860) the co. is empowered to

The defts., owners of a steamship, transferred the possession of it to a Glasgow firm subject to conditions in a contract for sale, by which the defts. were to remain registered owners, and in effect to become mortgagees until payment of the purchase-money. The Glasgow firm appointed the plt. master, and he, whilst on a voyage to the River Plate on account of that firm, and not having notice of the contract of sale, drew two bills of exchange on the Glasgow firm for bunker coal supplied to the vessel at the time the bills were drawn, but in pursuance of a coaling contract previously made in this country between the Glasgow firm and the coal merchants. The bills were dishonoured at maturity, and, the Glasgow firm having suspended payment, the defts., as unpaid vendors, retook possession of the vessel. They then settled with the plt. an action in rem brought, in the name of the plt., by the coal merchants, under an irrevocable mandate, executed by the plt., authorizing them to exercise, in his name, the right of lien, which he claimed under s. 167 of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1894, against the vessel in respect of his liability as drawer of the two bills of which the coal merchants were the holders:—

Held, by G. Barnes J., that the settlement of the action was void as against the coal merchants to whom the plt. was liable on the bills, and this liability having been incurred by the plt. as master in the ordinary course of his employment on account of the ship, within the meaning of the statute, he had a valid maritime lien, which could be enforced against the vessel, though the coals were supplied on the credit of the Glasgow firm, and not of the defts., whose property the ship was. THE "RIFON CITY" G. Held, that the selling or letting intended by s. 341 was a selling or letting in a named ship of a passage to commence at a definite time for a specified voyage, and, therefore, that a person who agreed to procure a passage for another, no ship or time of sailing being named or specified, had not "acted as a passage broker" within the meaning of s. 342.

A British ship, without passengers, left Gaza in Asiatic Turkey with a cargo of barley, part of which was to be delivered at the port of Ipswich (a Trinity House outport district), and the remainder at the port of Leith in Scotland. She discharged at Ipswich the portion of cargo to be there delivered, and was proceeding down the river Orwell, within the limits of the port of Ipswich, on her voyage to Leith, when a collision occurred, for which her owners would be responsible if she was not compulsorily in charge of the Trinity House pilot on board:—

Held, that pilotage was compulsory, as the vessel was not at the time either employed in the coasting trade within the meaning of sub-s. 1, or trading from a port in Great Britain to a port in Europe north and east of Brest within the meaning of sub-s. 3 of s. 625 of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1894.

A collision took place in the London district where pilotage is compulsory under an Order in Council of May 1, 1855. The Court found that the collision was caused by the negligence of the pilot of the deft's vessel. The vessel was a foreign ship of 16 ft. draught, and the pilot, an “under book” pilot, not qualified to pilot a vessel of so great draught under ordinary circumstances:—

Held, that the plea of compulsory pilotage must be sustained, for on the construction of the Order in Council regulating pilotage in the district, the employment of an “under book” pilot was compulsory where no “upper book” pilot was available.

Seem, that an “upper book” pilot where available would have a right to supersede an “under book” pilot on a vessel of such draught, but the latter would be entitled to a fair proportion of the pilotage fees. Decision of Butt P., [1892] P. 132, affirmed. THE “CARL XV.”

In an action by the owners of the former, the owners of the latter pleaded, inter alia, that their vessel was at the time in charge of a Dutch pilot by compulsion of law, and that the negligence, if any, was solely that of the pilot.

The Court found that the collision was due to the negligent navigation of the Dutch vessel, and, after evidence had been given as to the Dutch law on the question of compulsory pilotage:—

Held, that, though the employment of the pilot was compulsory, the pilot acted as the adviser of the master who remained in charge, and, therefore, the owners of the Dutch vessel were liable for the damages sustained by the owners of the British vessel. THE “PRINS HENDRIK”

By s. 625 of the same Act a ship navigating within the limits of the port to which she belongs is exempt from compulsory pilotage in the London district “when not carrying passengers”:—

The Board has also power to fix an additional reasonable charge as “extra” remuneration (besides the charge per day for attendance whilst a vessel is necessarily lying in the river in the course of her navigation inward or outward) in the case of an inward-bound vessel taken by a pilot to a landing-stage to land passengers, baggage, and mails, before discharging the rest of her cargo in dock, including the case of vessels disembarking cattle and sheep at certain landing-stages in pursuance of the orders made under the provisions of the Diseases of Animals Act, 1894.

A British ship, laden with a cargo from the river Plate to Rotterdam and with cattle for London, discharged the cattle in London and proceeded with the cargo to Rotterdam:—

In an action in personam instituted in the City of London Court by the plts., the owners of a barge damaged by collision with the deft.'s steamship within the jurisdiction, the summons described the deft. as "George Smith, of 75, Bothwell Street, Glasgow, the owner of the steamship or vessel City of Agra, whose agents in England are Messrs. The Merchant Shipping (Mercantile Marine Fund) Act, 1898, Sched. I., gives a scale of the fees which are to be paid on the transfer of British ships "according to the gross tonnage represented by the ships or shares of ships transferred." Fifty-eight shares in a ship, each share being one-sixty-fourth, were transferred to a firm by twenty different bills of sale:—

Held, that the firm was liable to pay a separate fee, according to the scale, on the tonnage represented by the shares comprised in each bill of sale, and not merely to pay one fee upon the total of the tonnage represented by all the shares transferred. *HARROWING STEAMSHIP Co. v. 213. — Bond for safe return—Forfeiture—Jurisdiction—Discretion of Court—Co-ownership—Action of restraint.

By a bail bond, in an action of restraint, the sureties submitted themselves to the jurisdiction of the Court, and consented "that if the (named vessel) shall not safely return to the port of Liverpool, and the defts. (the owners of the vessel other than the plt.) shall not, in such case, pay to the plt. (the appraised value of his shares), execution may issue" against them.

The vessel which, at the time the bond was given, had been despatched by the defts. on a voyage from Hartlepool to Calcutta arrived at Dundee in Scotland, and left again on a voyage to New York there to load for Australian ports.

On motion by the plt., G. Barnes J. pronounced the bond forfeited, and ordered the amount to be paid into court with liberty to the sureties to shew cause.

Held, by C. A., that there was jurisdiction to make the order, and, assuming a discretion in the Court in respect of the enforcement of a security given to the Court, that discretion has been rightly exercised, as the condition of the bond for safe return was not limited to the case of the vessel being lost, but was broken by the ship, instead of returning to Liverpool, being taken to a port out of the jurisdiction of the English Admiralty Court, and then sent on another voyage. THE "CAWDOR" vessel, as vendors, handed over the possession of her to a Scottish firm under a contract of sale by which the firm were to become owners of the shares in the vessel in proportion to the instalments of the purchase-money paid. The firm paid a sum on account of the purchase-money against which eight shares in the vessel were transferred to them. These shares the firm mortgaged. In working the vessel the firm incurred liabilities which, in an action in rem by the master, were held to have created maritime liens on her (The Ripon City, [1897] P. 226), and, after entering into an onerous charter for the vessel, the firm became bankrupt. The vendors resumed possession of the vessel, gave bail in the above-mentioned action, paid the amount subsequently adjudged to be due, paid a sum to cancel the charter, repaired the vessel, settled with the minority owners, and, with the acquiescence of the mortgagees of the eight shares, sold her to a foreign purchaser. In an action by the mortgagees against the vendors in respect of the distribution of the proceeds of the sale:—

Held, that as against the mortgagees the vendors could not, before dividing the purchase-money, deduct a proportion of (1) the sum paid to clear off the maritime liens, as there had been no request from the mortgagees and they were not at the time of the payment in possession; (2) the sum paid to cancel the charter, as the mortgagees, not being in possession, were not liable for expenses connected with the working of the ship; (3) the cost of repairs, as it was not proved that they had been executed in pursuance of the agreement for the sale of the vessel to the foreign purchaser.

232. — Costs—Taxation—Practice—Consolidated actions—Attendance of country solicitor at trial in London.

In April, 1899, the barque Metropolis, belonging to the defts., whilst lying at anchor in the river Mersey, commenced to drag, and was rescued from a position of some peril by the steam tugs Knight of the Cross, Sea King, and Gipsy King. The owners, &c., of the first named tug issued a writ out of the Liverpool District Registry in a salvage action, and the owners, &c., of the two other tugs issued a writ in another action. These two actions were consolidated by order of the Liverpool District Registrar, and the general conduct given to the plts. in the first mentioned action, with liberty to the plts. in the action secondly mentioned to appear by one counsel at the trial. In May, at the hearing before G. Barnes J. assisted by two of the Elder Brethren of the Trinity House, the Knight of the Cross was awarded 1200*l.*, the Sea King 800*l.*, and the Gipsy King 400*l.*, and, on the ground that there was a possibility of some conflict between the two sets of salvors as to the value of their respective services, an order was made that the costs of two counsel for each set of salvors should be allowed. On taxation of the costs of the plts. in the second action, and on the ground that the attendance of the solicitor, to whom the conduct of the consolidated action had been given, was sufficient, the following items were disallowed by the Liverpool District Registrar, viz.: (1) Journey from Liverpool to London of the solicitor, (2) his expenses, (3) his railway fare, and (4) cabs and telegrams.

On appeal, by way of objection to the taxation, adjourned into court for the delivery of judgment:—

Held, on the authority of Bell v. Aitkin, (1868) L. R. 3 C. P. 320; In re Storer, (1884) 26 Ch. D. 189, and The Soto, [1893] P. 73, that, though the allowance, as between party and party, of the costs of the attendance of the country solicitor at the trial in London, was a matter for the discretion of the taxing master, that discretion had been, in this case, wrongly exercised, for it was reasonably necessary for counsel in the second action to be instructed during the hearing, by the solicitor of the plts. in that action, as the solicitor who had the conduct of the consolidated action was not in a position to do full justice to both sets of plts. Appeal allowed. THE "METROPOLIS" - Bucknill J. Although there is no rule entitling the salvors of a derelict vessel, as of right, to a moiety, or other specific proportion, of the value of the property salvaged, and the award is to be assessed upon the same principles as in other cases of salvage, still there are usually present, in the case of a derelict, at least three special elements which tend to enhance the award, namely, the high degree of danger to which the property to be salvaged is exposed, the difficulty of approaching the derelict vessel without any aid in boarding her, and the necessity, when taking her in tow, of supplying men to steer her, thereby exposing some of the salvors to additional risk, and rendering the salvaging vessel short-handed. THE "JANET COURT" - Jeune P. Held, that the tender must be rejected, and a salvage award made in respect of the services prior to the agreement, as the owner and crew of the salvaging vessel had acquired vested rights which the master of the salvaging vessel had no authority to bargain away, but that the amount fixed by the agreement must stand in respect of the subsequent services. THE "INCHMAREE"

A charterparty provided (clause 2) that the shipowner should maintain the chartered vessel (the steamship Pocklington) in a thoroughly efficient state for and during the service. Clause 6 provided that if any damage prevented the working of the vessel for more than twenty-four hours the hire should cease. By clause 13 the vessel had liberty to tow and assist vessels in distress, and to deviate for the purpose of saving life or property. By clause 20 all derelicts and salvage were to be "for owners' and charterers' equal benefit." The shipowners obtained an award in the Admiralty Court for a large sum for salvage services rendered by the Pocklington in towing another vessel in distress. Through performing those services the hull, engines, and towing gear of the Pocklington were strained and damaged, and she incurred expenses and losses attributable to the salvage services in respect of repairs, the costs of gear used in towage, loss of hire for several days whilst she was under repair, and other matters. In an action by the charterers against the shipowners to recover a moiety of the salvage earned by the Pocklington:—

Held, that the debts were entitled to be deducted from the amount awarded by the Admiralty Court all such losses and expenses incurred by them (including loss of hire) as were attributable to the salvage services, and that the balance only ought to be divided between themselves and the plts. *BOOKER & CO. v. A British steamship, belonging to the plts., with cargo from and to a Continental port, was in the English Channel, in distress, for want of fuel, twenty miles off the coast. A British steam-tug towed her into Plymouth, and, at the request of the master of the tug, the defts., receiver of wreck at that port, detained the plts.' vessel two days pending the production of satisfactory bail to answer a claim for salvage.

In an action for damages for the illegal arrest of the vessel :—

Held, affirming the decision of G. Barnes J., [1898] P. 206, that the deft. was entitled to judgment in his favour, for the words in s. 552, "salvage . . . due under this Act," mean "salvage recoverable under this Act," and are not limited by s. 546 in respect of the place where the vessel was in distress; so that a dispute as to salvage having arisen, to be determined by a court recognised by the Act, the defts., as receiver, had jurisdiction to detain the property which was in his district, and liable for salvage.

The defts.' steamship, three days out from Montreal for Liverpool, stranded on the coast of Labrador. The master landed his passengers and crew, provided them with food and accommodation, and the same day intercepted a passing steamer, which, at the request of the master, conveyed the passengers to their destination.

The following day a steamer passing in the opposite direction, at the like request, took off the greater part of the crew, conveyed them to Quebec, and, on the way, telegraphed for assistance to be sent.

By the contract with the passengers the defts. were "not liable for loss or delay from the act of God . . . perils of the seas, rivers, or navigation . . . or the wrongful act or default" of their servants. The defts.' vessel became a total loss, materials to the value of 335*l.* only being saved.

Held, that the tender must be upheld, as the passengers and crew were not in any danger, so that no life salvage was claimable; and, as the defts. were under no obligation to forward the passengers to their destination, the master, in transhipping them, acted as the agent of the passengers, and not of the defts. THE "MARIPOSA" — G. A British steam-trawler whilst on a fishing voyage in the North Sea, and about ninety miles north-east of the Spurn, fell in with a water-logged Norwegian barque. After some difficulty the trawler rescued the crew of the barque, and the next day landed them at Hull. The barque was subsequently saved by other salvors, and brought into Grimsby. In an action for life salvage by the owners, master, and crew of the trawler, it was contended by the defts., the owners of the barque and of her cargo, that there was no jurisdiction under the statute to make an award :—

Held, that the plts. were entitled to life salvage, as the saving vessel, in the course of effecting the salvage service, was within British waters, and, therefore, the services were rendered "in part within British waters" within the meaning of the statute. THE "PACIFIC"

243. — Misconduct (alleged) of salvors—Refusal to put crew back on board salvaged vessel—Award.

In an action of salvage the owners of the Elise submitted that the misconduct of the plts. disentitled them to any award :—

Held, that, though the master and crew of the Elise had a legal right to return to their vessel, the Court will not lay down any general rule, but will be guided by the circumstances of each case, and here the master of the Northumbria was justified in refusing to put them on board :

Held, also, that, as the salvage services were very meritorious, the award to the Northumbria would be 6000*l.*, apportioned as follows: to the owners 2500*l.*, to the master 1000*l.*, and to the crew 2500*l.* according to their rating, with double shares to those who went on board the Elise. THE "ELISE" — G. On a claim for salvage the salvaged vessel counter-claimed for injuries sustained by bad and negligent navigation of the salvaging vessel, and asked not for forfeiture of the award, but for allowance on account of the damage sustained:—

Held, that such want of skill in manœuvring the salvaging vessel as had been proved went to diminish the award of salvage, and the award must be reduced by one-half. An apportionment of the actual damage was refused. THE "DWINA" — — Butt P. [1892] P. 53

246. — Negligence—Towage—Stranding—Control of tug by tow—Contributory negligence—Inevitable agreement.

A barque, with a cargo of wheat from San Francisco, put into Falmouth for orders and left that port for Hull in tow under a contract to pay the tug a fixed sum. The tug set the courses without interference from the tow, but the latter regularly took soundings. When nearing the entrance to the Humber the weather became thick and, a sounding indicating shallower water, the master of the barque was about to signal to the tug, when his vessel took the ground, the wind at the time being light and the sea smooth. A second tug then came up, and, as her master would not take less, the master of the barque agreed to pay 500*l.* if she would assist the first tug in an endeavour to tow the vessel off that tide. The efforts of the two tugs proved unsuccessful, and the second tug, having been sent to Grimsby for more tugs, returned with two others, whilst men from the shore assisted the crew in jettisoning some of the cargo. The four tugs then took hold of the vessel and she came off, and was subsequently safely docked at Hull. The owners, masters, and crews of all four tugs claimed salvage. The defts., the owners of ship, cargo, and freight, alleged that the stranding was due to the negligence of the first tug, and counter-claimed against her for the loss of cargo and for any salvage they might have to pay the other salvors. They further submitted that the agreement with the second tug should be set aside as unreasonable and made under duress:—

Held, that the first tug was responsible for the direction of the course, and, having been negligent in respect of it and in not taking soundings, her claim for salvage must be dismissed, but that, on the authority of Smith v. St. Lawrence Tow Boat Co., (1873) L. R. 5 P. C. 308, the counter-claim of the defts. must also be dismissed, as their master was guilty of contributory negligence in allowing the tug to run on instead of ordering her to haul off when approaching a difficult port in foggy weather. As the second tug incurred no risk, the agreement with her must be set aside as unfair, and a reasonable sum for the whole of her salvage services awarded. As the two other tugs rendered their services at request, they were entitled to salvage, though the vessel could have been got off without their assistance. The three last-mentioned tugs were

Defts.'s solicitors signed, without qualification, a notice, under Order xxxix., r. 12, of the R. S. C., 1883, by which they undertook to enter an appearance and give bail in a sum not exceeding the value of ship, cargo, and freight; but the plts.—notwithstanding the caveat which on the filing of the above notice in the registry had been thereupon entered—took out, under rule 18 of the same order, a warrant for the arrest of the defts.' vessel in a salvage action:—

Held, that the defts.' solicitors, by signing the undertaking without qualification, rendered themselves personally responsible, and the plts. might have taken a reasonable time to make inquiry whether the undertaking was satisfactory; but as, instead of doing so, they had insisted upon the security of the ship, the plts. had failed to shew "good and sufficient reason" within the meaning of rule 18 of the same order, for arresting the vessel, and must, therefore, be condemned in damages and costs. THE "CRIMDON" — — G. The plts. brought an action against the owners of an English ship for salvage services performed abroad, and leave was given to serve notice of the writ on the owners of the cargo, who were foreigners residing out of the jurisdiction. On application to set aside the service:—

was anticipated, and some of the underwriters in the meantime became insolvent. In an action of salvage brought by the plts. against the defts. as owners of the vessel:—

Held, that the contract with the underwriters, which was not dependent on success, precluded the plts. from asserting a maritime lien on the vessel, and claiming salvage remuneration from her owners. THE "SOLWAY PRINCE"

251. — Towage—Construction of contract—Complete performance prevented by a misfortune beyond the control of either party—Subsequent salvage.

The plts., tug-owners, contracted to tow the deft.'s vessel from Kingroad in the river Severn to Sharpness Dock for a fixed sum, but when near their destination, owing to a fog and without anybody being in fault, the vessel stranded on a rock, and could not be got off:—

Held, that the contract was indivisible, and, not having been fulfilled, the plts. were not entitled to recover on a quantum meruit for any portion of the towage.

After the stranding and failure of the attempt to get the vessel off, the tugs were ordered by the master of the vessel to keep her where she was so as to prevent her drifting up the river and sinking in deep water or doing damage. These orders the tugs obeyed; and in the result the vessel was sold where she lay, but the greater part of the cargo of timber being taken off in lighters, the freight was earned by the shipowner:—

Held, that this was a salvage service, and on a total value of 272*l.* the owners, masters, and crews of the three tugs engaged were awarded 370*l.* THE "MADRAS" Jeune P. [1898] P. 90

A tug, under a contract to tow a vessel into port, was able to save the ship from a danger resulting from a mishap to another tug:—

In s. 56 of the Harbours, Docks, and Piers Clauses Act, 1847, "owner" does not mean a person who was owner of the ship at the time it became an obstruction, but who abandoned her before the expenses of removal were incurred. The C. came into collision and sank near a harbour, where she became an obstruction to the navigation. Her owners gave the underwriters notice of abandonment as a total loss, and also gave the harbour authority notice of abandon-

A seaman was engaged at a foreign port, in which there was a British Consul, and was paid a sum exceeding one month's wages, under an advance note, conditionally on his going to sea. In proceedings to recover wages the master claimed to deduct the whole amount paid under the advance note.

Upon the discharge abroad of a British seaman, the consul, acting under clause (d), fixed a sum which he deemed sufficient to defray the expenses of the seaman's passage home, and the master deposited this sum with the consul, who provided the seaman with a voucher for a passage. Held, that s. 7 of 8 Geo. 1, c. 24, did not apply to the terms upon which a seaman was engaged where his engagement took place in a foreign port, nor prevent a master from engaging a seaman in a foreign port on the terms that he should be paid a sum down on joining the ship and the remainder of his wages at the end of the voyage:

Also, that if the enactment did apply, the seaman could not recover again as unpaid wages the sum advanced to him in excess of the moiety allowed by the statute.

Upon engaging a seaman in a foreign port the master agreed to advance to him a sum on account of wages; the seaman signed a document giving a third person authority to receive that sum, and the master paid it to the third person with the authority of the seaman to make such payment:

Held, that s. 163 of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1894, did not apply to make this transaction void, and that the seaman was not entitled to recover from the master the sum so advanced and paid. ROWLANDS v. MILLER — — — Div. Ct.

The plaintiffs instituted an Admiralty action in a county court for damages for breach of contract in relation to the use or hire of a ship “in the sum of 30*l.* and costs.” The defendants paid into court 17*l.* 10*s.* “in satisfaction of the whole of the plaintiffs' claim herein” together with a denial of liability. The plaintiffs accepted the 17*l.* 10*s.* in satisfaction of the claim in respect of which it was paid in, but their application for taxation, and payment by the defendants, of the costs of the action was refused without leave to appeal:—

Held, first, that the order refusing the plaintiffs their costs was a final order within the meaning of s. 26 of the County Courts Admiralty Jurisdiction Act, 1868, and, therefore, no leave to appeal was required; secondly, that this being an Admiralty action the special Admiralty rules of the county court, and not the general common law rules, applied, so that the sum paid into court by the defendants was to be treated as by way of “tender” under rule 48 of Order XXXIX. 2. — Public-house—Hotel—Domestic servant—Shop Hours Act, 1892 (55 & 56 Vict. c. 62).

By the Shop Hours Act, 1892, provision is made as to the number of hours in any one week during which young persons under eighteen years of age may be employed in or about a shop, and by s. 9 “shop” means retail and wholesale shops, markets, stalls, and warehouses in which assistants are employed for hire, and includes licensed public-houses and refreshment houses of any kind.

A building which is used solely as a hotel and restaurant for the accommodation of guests, and which has no bar or counter for the sale of intoxicating liquors, and is not in the ordinary sense of the term a public-house, but which is licensed as an inn under 9 Geo. 4, c. 64, for the sale of intoxicating liquors by retail, is a “shop” within the meaning of the above Act.

A page-boy in a hotel, who sleeps on the premises, and who is principally employed as a messenger, but partly also in assisting to dust the reception-rooms, is not within the exemption in s. 10 in favour of “any person wholly employed as a domestic servant.” *SAVOY HOTEL CO. v. 3. — Work partly away from the premises—Shop Hours Act, 1892 (55 & 56 Vict. c. 62), s. 3—Employment “in or about a shop.”

By the Shop Hours Act, 1892, s. 3, “No young person shall be employed in or about a shop for a longer period than seventy-four hours, including meal times, in any one week.” A newsagent, occupying a shop for the purposes of his business, employed a boy whose work was done partly inside the shop, and partly away from the shop in fetching newspapers and delivering them to the customers:—

Held, that the whole employment was “in or about” the shop within the meaning of the Act. COLLMAN v. ROBERTS Div. Ct. [1896] 1 Q. B. 457

A contract by a person to communicate information on terms of getting a share of any property that may thereby be recovered by the person to whom the information is to be given, and nothing more, is not void for champerty. But if the contract be not merely that information shall be given, but also that the person who gives it and who is to share in what may be recovered shall himself recover the property, or actively assist in the recovery of it, then the contract is against the policy of the law and void, even if the property is in the hands of trustees, or in court, and no hostile action may be necessary to recover it.

A. died intestate having considerable real estate and leaving B. and C. his co-heiresses-at-law, both of whom were advanced in years, illiterate, and of a very humble rank in life. D., having ascertained the heirship of B. and C., induced them to sign an agreement whereby, in consideration of his revealing to them the existence of the property and their title to it (of both which circumstances they were wholly unaware), they agreed to give him one-half of the net amount of the property.

Held, that the agreement was in the nature of champerty and void; that the agreement must be set aside as an improvident bargain which D. had obtained by taking an unfair advantage of his position; and that there had been no ratifica-

8. — Assignment of judgment debt—"Purchaser for value without notice"—Solicitors Act, 1860 (23 & 24 Vict. c. 127), s. 28.

The provision in s. 28 of the Solicitors Act, 1860, avoiding conveyances made to defeat a charging order, "unless made to a bona fide purchaser for value without notice," means without notice of the solicitor's right to a lien, and not without notice of the existence of a charging order. B. was solicitor to C., the plt. in an action which was compromised on terms as to payment by instalments, judgment being given for C. C. assigned the money so payable to R. (a witness in the action). It was not proved that R. had express notice of B.'s claim:—

Held, that R., knowing of the action and of B.'s employment as solicitor, must be taken to have had notice of B.'s right to a lien, and therefore was not a "purchaser for value without notice" within the section, and B. was entitled to a charging order.

9. — Assignment of sum recovered—Notice—Solicitors Act, 1860 (23 & 24 Vict. c. 127) s. 28.

An action of damage by collision was compromised on the terms that the defts., the owners of the steamship Paris, should pay to the plt. 50 per cent. of the damages sustained by the plt.'s vessel, each party to bear their own costs of the action, and the amount of the damages to be ascertained by an arbitrator. Prior to the commencement of the action the defts.' solicitors had been pressing the plt. for a settlement of claims of clients of theirs against him, and for their own costs when acting for him; and the plt., after the compromise of the action but before the arbitrator made his award, wrote to the defts.' solicitors that he agreed to their settling the amount due to themselves and to certain named clients of theirs "out of the money coming in from Paris s.s."

By his award the arbitrator fixed the sum due from the defts. to the plt., which, with the agreed costs of the reference, made a total of 405*l.* 1*1s.* 8*d.*, and the defts.' solicitors forwarded to the plt.'s solicitors a cheque for a small amount as being the balance out of the above total sum after paying the named clients and themselves. The plt.'s solicitors took out a summons under s. 28 of the Solicitors Act, 1860, for a charging order. It was admitted that there was no collusion, and it was agreed that the award should be treated as a decree:—

Held, by Sir F. H. Jeune P., that the plt.'s

solicitors in the action were entitled to an order charging the sum recovered with the plt.'s costs to be taxed as between solicitor and client, on the ground that the fund recovered by the exertions of the plt.'s solicitors was fixed, though not worked out, at the date of the compromise, and that the subsequent assignment of the fund was void under the statute as being an act done operating to defeat the right of the solicitors to a lien for costs—of which right, by reason of the fund being a sum recovered in the action, the deft.'s solicitors, and their clients through them, were affected with notice. THE "PARIS"

10. — Fund in court—Property recovered for company—Application after winding-up—Delay—Discretion—Lien—Solicitors Act, 1860 (23 & 24 Vict. c. 127), s. 28.

Delay by a solicitor in applying under s. 28 of the Solicitors Act, 1860, for an order charging his costs on property recovered by him is no ground for refusing the order unless other rights in respect of the property have arisen in the meantime.

Solicitors employed by a limited co. recovered a claim against an estate in course of administration by the Court. The co. was subsequently wound up by the Court. Shortly after the winding-up order was made, the solicitors applied for an order charging their costs on the company's share of the fund in court to the credit of the administration action:—

Held, that, as the charging order in this case conferred no new right, but was only a cheap and speedy mode of enforcing the common law lien on the co.'s share of the fund in court, which lien existed prior to the winding-up, the Court, in the exercise of its discretion under the statute, would make the order. *In re BORN. To bring a case within s. 28 of the Solicitors Act, 1860, property must be recovered or preserved in a proceeding in a court of justice.

The appellants were the solicitors to the trustee of a bankrupt's estate. The bankrupt had sold his stock-in-trade, and gone with the proceeds of the sale to Australia. He was arrested there, and brought back to this country on a charge of offences against the Debtors Act, 1869, preferred by order of a Court of bankruptcy made under s. 16 of that Act upon the application of the appellants on behalf of the trustee. On the bankrupt's arrest a sum of money, the proceeds of the before-mentioned sale, was found upon him and taken possession of by the Australian police. Under a power of attorney prepared by the appellants, as solicitors to the trustee, this money was handed over by the police and remitted to the appellants in this country:—

covered or preserved in the bankruptcy proceedings, or any other legal proceeding within the meaning of s. 28 of the Solicitors Act, 1860, and therefore that an order could not be made under that section charging the appellants' costs upon it.

The power given by the section is discretionary; and, semble, the cases in which it ought to be exercised by a Court of bankruptcy must be rare. In re HUMPHREYS. Ex parte LLOYD-GEORGE & GEORGE C. A. [1898] 1 Q. B. 520

12. — Property recovered or preserved—Property of persons not employing solicitor—Charge for costs—Probate action—Practice—Solicitors Act, 1860 (23 & 24 Vict. c. 127), s. 28.

A testator by his will, after bequeathing his household furniture and effects to his wife, devised and bequeathed the residue of his real and personal estate to his wife for life, and, after her decease, to his two daughters, of whom one was his legitimate daughter by a former wife and the other was illegitimate, in equal shares. Probate of the will being opposed by the testator's daughters, the executor brought a probate action against them to establish its validity, with the result that probate of the will was decreed. The bulk of the estate was realty:—

Held, that the solicitor who acted for the executor was entitled under the Solicitors Act, 1860, s. 28, to a charge for his costs in the action upon the property devised and bequeathed by the will as property preserved through his instrumentality. Ex parte TWEED C. A. [1899] 2 Q. B. 167

Kekewich J. having refused an application by a solicitor, under s. 28 of the Solicitors Act, 1860, for a charging order in respect of his costs, charges, and expenses upon property recovered or preserved in an action through his instrumentality, the solicitor appealed:—

Held, that the solicitor was entitled to a charge for his costs, &c., properly incurred, and that the charge must include the solicitor's costs as between solicitor and client of his application to the Court below and of the appeal. WATERLAND v. SERLE C. A. [1897] W. N. 163 (9)

An agreement fixing the amount to be paid as costs must not only be fair (i.e., understood by the client) but also reasonable, i.e., in amount, having regard to the work done, or it may be set aside under s. 9 of the Solicitors Act, 1870. In re STUART. Ex parte CATHCART

An agreement allowing a fixed sum for costs is a good agreement under s. 8 of the Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881, if it be signed by the client only. To impeach such an agreement as unfair or unreasonable it is not necessary to bring an action to set it aside, nor to have obtained a previous order for taxation, but on a summons for taxation such an agreement may be referred to the taxing master to certify whether it be fair and reasonable.

Under Sched. II. of the Solicitors Remuneration Act, 1881, the taxing master has discretion in a case which is not an "ordinary" one, i.e., which is more or less difficult than an average case, to increase or diminish the fee for attendance. The discretion must be exercised for "special reasons," but the taxing master need not state them till his decision is impeached.

Per North J., an attendance by a solicitor or his clerk for a merely formal purpose, such as delivering briefs or papers at counsel's chambers, is not an attendance within Sched. II., and the practice of the taxing master to allow only 3*s*. 4*d*. is correct.

Statute-barred costs are, under the common order to tax, subject to taxation, since the Statute of Limitations does not bar the debt but only the remedy; and such costs are recoverable from the client by reason of his usual submission to pay what shall appear to be "due" on the taxation. If the client desires to raise the question whether certain items are statute-barred, he should do so by applying for a special order to tax.

A grant of a new easement is not a “conveyance of property” within the meaning of Sched. Held, that it was necessary to consider what was the position of a lessee at common law with reference to the costs of a lease, and then how far, if at all, that position was altered by reason of a third party order to tax having been obtained, and upon the first point, having considered the authorities, the Court held that if the lessor in this case had paid his solicitor's bill and then sued the lessee, he could not have recovered anything antecedent to the instructions for the lease, and in particular could not have recovered the fees paid to the mining engineer. With reference to the second point, the true view appeared to be that the third party order did not alter the nature or enlarge the scope of the liability upon the existence of which the order was based: this view was supported by In re Negus, [1895] 1 Ch. 73, the governing idea of which appeared to be that even on a third party taxation the Court was bound to look at the nature of the items, and to consider whether, apart from the order, the applicant was under any liability to pay them. Although the solicitor might put in one bill as against his own client a series of items, some of which might go beyond the liability of the third party, the third party did not, by obtaining an order to tax, render himself liable to the whole bill. Where a lease is granted in consideration of a fine or premium as well as of a rent, the lessor's solicitor is not entitled to charge a further fee for negotiating in addition to the scale fee in respect of rent chargeable under Part II. of Sched. I. to the General Order under the Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881, and the deducting fee chargeable on the premium under rule 5 of the rules to Part II., Sched. I. In the absence of a prior written agreement, costs must be taxed according to scale where the scale applies, notwithstanding that an item bill has been delivered. The delivery of an item bill does not preclude a solicitor from consenting to have his bill taxed according to scale. An agreement for three years under hand which operates as a present demise is a "lease" within Sched. I., Part II., of the General Order of 1882, and the scale fee applies, although an item bill had been previously delivered. The scale fee also applies to a document on which the parties intend to rely, without having a formal lease executed. In estimating costs payable by the lessee to the lessor's solicitor, the cost of the counterpart must be deducted from the scale fee. In re NEGUS

A solicitor delivered to his clients seven bills of costs, relating to seven different matters in which he had acted for them, together with a cash account which shewed that the seven bills amounted to 261*l.* 15*s.*, and that the solicitor had received 160*l.* on account, leaving a balance of 101*l.* 15*s.* due to him. The clients then paid him a further sum of 50*l.* on account of the balance, he giving a written undertaking “to return to you any sum that may be found due from me on taxation of my bills delivered.” The next day the solicitor wrote to the clients that he accepted the 50*l.* in full discharge of all claims by him against them, and asked them to treat the 50*l.* as the balance due on the cash account, and not the 101*l.* 15*s.*

The clients were dissatisfied with one of the bills, which was for 172*l.* 18*s.* 10*d.*, and obtained an order of course for the taxation of that bill alone. After this the clients' new solicitor wrote to the solicitor saying that all the other bills were agreed to and paid, so that this was the only bill outstanding. On a motion by the solicitor to discharge the order for irregularity:—

Held, by North J., that inasmuch as the solicitor had admitted that nothing was due to him, and he could therefore have no lien on the clients' documents, the only question being whether he had been overpaid, the order was not irregular.

Solicitors kept a running account with a client crediting him with moneys received and debiting him with disbursements and costs for professional business. No bills were delivered, but the accounts were periodically balanced and signed by the client as settled and approved. The last was in 1886. In 1890 the client sued for an account and the solicitors then delivered a bill of costs. There was no evidence of fraud or pressure and no gross overcharge. At the trial the client dropped his claim for an account, but claimed as of right an order for taxation:—

Held, affirming the decision of Chitty J., that retainer by a solicitor of a sum for costs is not payment of his bill within the meaning of the Solicitors Act, 1843, and does not affect the right to taxation, although the sums from time to time retained for costs have been entered in accounts settled and approved by the clients:—

Held, further, that where a verbal agreement had been made that the solicitor should be paid for his costs in obtaining loans a certain percentage on the amounts borrowed, such expressions as "costs as agreed," designating the sums charged in the accounts for costs, which accounts were settled and signed by the client, were referable to the verbal agreement, and could not, as in In re Frape, [1893] 2 Ch. 284, be construed as meaning "costs which are hereby agreed at the amount of," and that there was, therefore, no written agreement signed by the client entitling the solicitor to those sums as his remuneration:—

Held, further, that the delivery of the bills of costs under the order of the Court would not make the retainer amount to payment within the principle of Ex parte Hemming, (1856) 28 L. T. The solicitor was also a trustee under a deed of 1890 by which the power had been created. He explained the effect of the deed of 1891 to the plt., and also suggested that she should consult an independent solicitor; but he did not inform her that she was under no obligation to execute the deed, and that it was so adverse to her interest that she ought not to execute it without having independent advice, and she executed the deed without having that advice:—

89. — Company—Authority to defend action in name of company—Revocation of authority—Notice of revocation—Payment by solicitor of plaintiff's costs of abortive action—Dissolution pendente lite—Judgment against dissolved company—Jurisdiction—Principal and agent—Warrant of authority.

A solicitor had originally authority to defend an action in the name of a co., but his authority was revoked by the dissolution of the co. shortly before the trial. The trial of the action was delayed owing partly to the state of the business of the Court and partly to the pleadings being amended. The action was tried on the assumption that the co. was in existence, and judgment was given for the plt. Neither the solicitor nor the plt. knew till after the trial that the co. had been dissolved; but on the day of the trial the solicitor was informed that the co. had held its final meeting, and he took no steps to ascertain whether or not it had been dissolved. Upon motion by the plt. that the solicitor might be ordered to pay his costs of the action as from the date of the dissolution of the co.:

Held, (1.) that the judgment was not valid against the co.; (2.) that the solicitor having originally authority to represent the co. was not liable for acting on that authority after it had been revoked by the dissolution of the co. until he knew or, by the exercise of due diligence, might have known of the dissolution; (3.) that on the day of the trial the solicitor did not use due diligence in ascertaining whether or not the co. had been dissolved, and that he ought to pay the plt.'s costs of the action after that date as between solicitor and client.

The reasoning of Whiteley Exerciser, Ltd. v. Gamage, [1898] 2 Ch. 405, which proceeded on principle "Actus curiae nemini facit injuriam," does not apply to a case where the delay in the trial of the action is partly attributable to the conduct of the parties.

The principle of Smout v. Ilbery (1842) 10 W. 1, applies to a solicitor representing a co. in an action, and it applies to a revocation of authority by the dissolution of a co. as well as the death of an individual. SALTON v. NEW PARTNERSHIP CYCLE CO. — Stirling J.

Lien.

97. — Administration action—Documents in solicitor's possession before action—Third parties—Right to production.

A solicitor having a lien on documents in his possession belonging to his client, party to an action, may not embarrass proceedings taken in the action by a third party by refusing to produce the documents if wanted by that third party for the purpose of his proceedings, even though the documents may have come into the solicitor's possession before the commencement of the action.

At the time of the death of a testator his solicitor, C., had in his possession certain documents belonging to the deceased and on which he, C., had the ordinary solicitor's lien. Subsequently the executors of the deceased employed C. to institute an action for the administration of the estate, and the usual administration judgment was pronounced. The action after judgment not being prosecuted with due diligence, conduct of the proceedings was, by order, given to a creditor, the estate being insolvent. The executors however remained parties and C. continued to act for them :—

Held, that, notwithstanding his lien, C. was bound to produce to the creditor the documents in his, C.'s, possession, to enable the creditor to take steps for getting in a mortgage debt due to the estate.

— Charging order.

See Cases under SOLICITOR—Charging Order.

99. — Compromise—Action—Infants—Judgment—Lien.

At the hearing of the appeal in this case the solicitor withdrew his claim to a charging order under the Solicitors Act, and relied only on his common law lien upon the interests of his clients, the infant plts., in the trust funds. The question thus raised was whether a solicitor in assenting to a judgment compromise on behalf of infants thereby lost his right to the ordinary lien he would have had for his costs if the parties to the compromise had been sui juris :—

Held, that there was nothing in the judgment to deprive the solicitor of his ordinary common law lien for costs. The result of the compromise being sanctioned by the Court on behalf of the infants was to place them in the same position, as regarded their solicitor's lien for his costs, as if the compromise had been entered into by persons who were sui juris. It was unnecessary to insert in the judgment any express reservation to the solicitor of the lien to which he was by law entitled; he could not be deprived of that lien without his express consent. There must be a declaration that the solicitor had a lien upon the shares and interests of the plts. in the trust funds. The solicitor's costs on appeal and below would be added to his lien. Appeal allowed. In re WRIGHT'S SETTLEMENT. WRIGHT v. SANDERSON. In re SANDERSON'S SETTLEMENT. WRIGHT v. SANDERSON - C. A. [1900] W. N. 261

Parties to litigation are at liberty to compromise without the intervention of their solicitors, provided they do so honestly and without any intention to cheat the solicitors of their costs.

P. having retained M. as his solicitor for the taxation of his bill of costs delivered by J., P.'s former solicitor, obtained the common order for taxation. Before the taxation was completed, J., without M.'s knowledge, and with the intention of stopping the taxation and so defeating M.'s lien for his costs, paid P., who was in distressed circumstances, a small sum in settlement of the taxation, which consequently dropped :—

Held, that M. was entitled to an order against J. for taxation and payment of the costs incurred by P. to him, M., up to the time when the taxation against J. dropped.

102. — Extent of lien — Waiver — Taking security.

A solicitor's lien only extends to disbursements such as taxable costs, charges, and expenses which the taxing master can moderate, but does not include ordinary advances on account of income which the solicitor is receiving for the client. The question whether a solicitor waives his lien by taking a security depends on the intention of the parties to be gathered from the circumstances of the case. But prima facie where a solicitor takes from his client security for costs without explaining that he intended to reserve his lien the lien is waived.

It is not within the scope of the implied authority of a solicitor carrying on business in partnership to constitute himself a constructive trustee, and thereby to subject his partner to liability in that character, the partner being ignorant of the dealings by which the constructive trust is established. It having been held by North J. that a solicitor had constituted himself a constructive trustee, and that both he and his partner in business were liable to make good a loss which had resulted from improper investments of the trust funds:—

Held (reversing the decision of North J., [1895] 2 Ch. 69), upon the evidence, that in the matters in question the solicitor had acted only in the character of solicitor to the trustees, and that consequently neither he nor his partner were liable as constructive trustees. MARA v. BROWNE

130. — Profit costs—Partnership.

A solicitor mortgagee cannot, in the absence of express agreement, charge the mortgagor with any profit costs, either in respect of work done in connection with the mortgaged estate as solicitor to the mortgagor, or of collecting, &c., the income for the mortgagor where the mortgage is of a life interest; but semble, a partner of the solicitor mortgagee may receive remuneration for his trouble. A covenant in a mortgage of a life estate to a solicitor mortgagee for payment "of every other sum of money which may hereafter be advanced or paid by the mortgagee to or on account of or become owing to the mortgagee by the mortgagor," does not include profit costs either as solicitor to the mortgagor or as his agent for collecting, &c., the income. For such a covenant is as to profit costs void as clogging the equity of redemption. The Court will allow the mortgagor to surcharge and falsify settled accounts so far as regards such costs, unless the mortgagee can prove that the mortgagor was fully acquainted

133. — Professional charges—Opening settled account.

S. & S., a firm of solicitors, were trustees and executors of a will, under which they were authorized to charge for professional services. They sent an account to the five residuary legatees, and stated that if the legatees would call at their office they would give any explanation they might require. Two items of the account were "to S. & Co. for costs relating to obtaining probate," and "paid S. & S. costs relating to executorship and counsels' fees and payments made by them." S. & S. did not inform the legatees that they were entitled to have a bill of costs delivered, and to have it taxed. The legatees signed a memorandum at the foot of the account, "we have examined and approve of the foregoing account," and executed a release discharging the executors. Nine years after, three of the residuary legatees brought an action to declare the release not binding, and to have a bill of costs delivered and taxed:—

Held, that, although it was the duty of S. & S. to have informed the legatees that they had a right to have a bill of costs, and to have it taxed, the omission to do so was not a sufficient ground to open a settled account; in order to do so it was necessary to shew that injustice would be done by allowing the account to stand; that excessive charges would be a ground for re-opening; but that no error either of omission or charge having been shewn the action had been rightly dismissed. *In re WEBB. 4. — Delay—Sale of reversion—Equitable interest—Vendor and purchaser.

S., in April, 1886, contracted to sell to K. the equitable reversion in a sum of Consols vested in trustees, the purchase to be completed on June 25, when an assignment was to be executed containing a covenant by the purchaser to pay succession duty and indemnify the vendor and his estate against it. The purchaser was to pay a deposit; and if the purchase was not completed on June 25, he was to pay interest on the balance of his purchase-money. The deposit was paid and the title investigated; when it appeared that the reversion was subject, along with other property, to heavy incumbrances which the vendor could not discharge, and from which the incumbrancers declined to release the reversion. In Jan. 1888, S. became bankrupt, and his property was sold, under which sale R. claimed title to the reversion. K.'s interest under the contract for sale became vested in B. In 1890 S. died. In 1895 the reversion fell into possession. No active step to enforce the contract for sale was taken till March 5, 1896, when B. obtained leave to attend proceedings in an action in which the estate of S. was being administered. He then took out a summons claiming the Consols, upon which summons an order of May 11, 1896, was made directing an inquiry who was entitled to them, with a provision that the applicant's claim was to be treated as if he had commenced an action for specific performance on March 5, 1896. The master found that R. was entitled, and Stirling J. affirmed his decision:—

Held, that, although the interest to which the contract related was purely equitable, so that the complete property in it could pass without a formal conveyance, B. could only obtain relief on the ground of specific performance; that the proviso in the order of May 11, 1896, was therefore right; that he was barred from relief by delay; and that the appeal ought to be dismissed.

Held, (1) that the statutory price for the undertaking was an amount of irredeemable stock; (2) that the corporation were not by implication authorized to issue irredeemable stock for the purpose of purchasing the undertaking; (3) that, therefore, the power to purchase compulsorily was in abeyance so long as the corporation had no power to issue irredeemable stock. *SHEFFIELD CORPORATION v. Lands in the parish of St. Pancras were purchased as a burial ground for the parish of Bloomsbury under 9 Anne, c. 22, and 10 Anne, c. 11, and on consecration became part of the latter parish. By Order in Council burials were discontinued in the burial ground, and the parish of St. Pancras applied to the county council, under s. 57 of the Local Government Act, 1888, for an order retransferring the burial ground to St. Pancras. The council gave notice of their intention to hold an inquiry. The parish of Bloomsbury applied for a prohibition:—

Held, that the section gives a county council power to amend any part of a public and general Act, which is of a local and personal nature, that the clauses of the statute of Anne relating to the burial ground were local and personal, and that the council had power to make an order. *REG. v. Where one section of a statute provides that "all ordinances made by the comms." shall be laid before both Houses of Parliament, a power given to the Comms. to do an act affecting both public and private interests by another section which is silent as to the sanction of Parliament does not give an absolute power, unless the section plainly states that the exercise of the power shall not be subject to review. *MEDCALFE v. Where the promoters of a public undertaking have statutory authority to interfere with private property on certain terms, any person whose property is interfered with has a right to require that the promoters shall comply with the letter of the enactment in his behalf. No Court can remodel arrangements sanctioned, or relax conditions imposed by Act of Parliament. 5. — Defaulter—Official assignee—Assignment of assets—Set-off—Rules and regulations of Stock Exchange.

It is provided by the rules and regulations of the Stock Exchange that two or more members shall be appointed annually by the committee to act as official assignees, whose duty it shall be to obtain from a defaulter on the Stock Exchange his books of account and a statement of the sums owing to and by him and to manage the estate in conformity with the rules, regulations, and usages of the Stock Exchange; and by rule 176 "the assignees shall collect and pay the assets to the credit of their joint account at a banker's, and shall distribute the same as soon as possible":—

Held, that the term "the assets" in the above-mentioned rule means all the assets of the defaulter; and that, when the rule is brought into operation, the effect is to create an assignment of the assets of the defaulter to the official assignee.

A member of the Stock Exchange was indebted to the debts. He became a defaulter on the Stock Exchange, and the liquidation of his affairs was undertaken by the plt., as official assignee, under the above-mentioned rules. For the purposes of the liquidation he was authorized by the plt. to sell, and accordingly sold, certain shares standing in his name to the debts, who were not members of the Stock Exchange, but who knew his position and that of the plt. as official assignee. The plt. having sued the debts for the price of the shares:—

Held, that the action was maintainable, and that the debts were not entitled to a set off in respect of their debt. RICHARDSON v. STORMONT, TODD & Co. C. A. [1900] 1 Q. B. 701

In such transactions securities deposited by one of the parties with the other to secure the payment of “differences” are not deposited “to abide the event” within the meaning of s. 18, and are recoverable by action.

The plt. bought stocks, shares, and bonds through a broker, the broker lending the plt. money to “carry over” when necessary. The broker borrowed money of a bank to pay for the stocks, shares, and bonds, depositing them with the bank as security. Such stocks as required registration were transferred to and registered in the name of trustees for the bank, sometimes by the vendors and sometimes by the plt. himself, for a nominal consideration:—

Held, that the plt. could not redeem because (1) the plt. in view of the “contango” system, which was common on the Stock Exchange, had not discharged the onus of shewing that the broker had exceeded his authority; (2) that as to certain “bonds payable to bearer,” which were negotiable securities, there was nothing to put the bank on inquiry; (3) that as to the stocks transferred by the vendors the bank had the legal estate and could not be deprived of it; and (4) as to the stock transferred by the plt. he was estopped from denying the bank's title. *BENTINCK v. 10. — Principal and agent—Broker lumping several orders in one contract—Liability of principal to jobber on default of broker—Stock Exchange Rules, r. 177.

Deft. employed a firm of brokers on the Stock Exchange to purchase for him shares in a certain undertaking, and instructed them to “carry over” 210 of these shares to the next account. The brokers, having orders from other clients for shares in the same undertaking, purchased by a single contract in their own name 360 of these shares for the next account from the plt., who were jobbers on the Stock Exchange, and they apportioned in their books 210 of these shares to the deft. Before the next settling day the brokers were declared defaulters on the Stock Exchange, and, in accordance with the rules of that body, their transaction with the plt. was closed by the official assignee, the price of the shares being fixed at the price then current. Plts., having ascertained that the brokers were acting for deft. as regarded the 210 shares, tendered those shares to him, and, on his refusal to take them, sold them on the settling day and claimed from deft. the difference between the contract price and the selling price:—

Held, that, since the brokers had lumped deft.'s order with the orders of other clients, and had contracted in a single transaction with plts. for the purchase of a larger number of shares than they were authorized to purchase for deft., no such contractual relation existed between plts. and deft. as would support the action.

The broker, in accordance with the regulations of the Stock Exchange, purchased the shares in his own name from the plts., who were jobbers on the Stock Exchange, and afterwards carried over with them the same shares. The deft.'s name was not disclosed. Before the next settling day the broker was declared a defaulter on the Stock Exchange, and in accordance with the rules of that body his contract with the plts. was closed, and the plts. took back the shares at a price fixed by the official assignee of the Stock Exchange and known as the "hammer price." The plts. having ascertained that the broker was acting for the deft. in this transaction called upon him to take up the shares. He declined to accept any responsibility for them; and the plts. thereupon at once sold the shares for the best price then obtainable, and sued the deft. for the difference between the price at which the shares had been carried over and that at which they had sold them:—

Held, that the deft. was liable for this amount, and not merely for the difference between the price at which the shares were carried over and the "hammer price."

When a broker or other agent entrusted with the possession and apparent ownership of money pays it away in the ordinary course of business for onerous consideration, a transaction which is fraudulent as between the agent and his employer will bind the latter unless he can shew that the recipient of the money did not act in good faith. Trustees of bank shares instructed a stockbroker to sell them and deposit the proceeds in certain colonial banks. He sold the shares to another stockbroker, and received in the ordinary course a cheque for the price drawn in his own favour. This cheque he paid into his own bank account, then overdrawn. The Public Health Act, 1875, which by s. 149 vests certain streets in the urban authority, does not vest the subsoil.

Therefore where a local Act authorized the urban authority to erect and maintain "in any street or public place, or on land belonging to them or under their control," lavatories for the use of the public:—

In laying down what is the "front main wall" of a house or building with a view of fixing the building line, under s. 3 of the Public Health (Buildings in Streets) Act, 1888, the building must be looked at as a whole—its character, its position, its distance from any house which is being erected or brought forward in alleged contravention of the Act, and a particular wing or projection must not be selected as the front main wall. Two buildings are not necessarily in the same street within s. 3, because one faces the same road or street, or a continuation thereof as the other. ATT.-GEN. v. EDWARDS

3. — Building line—Taking down house—Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 155.

The owner of a house took out the front wall of the ground and first floor in order to turn the two lower floors into one shop. The second floor was undisturbed, but was shored up; the shoring was replaced by girders and brick piers. After the piers and girders had been erected, the urban authority prescribed a building line, under s. 155 of the Public Health Act, 1875, and brought an action to restrain the owner from building in front of it:—

Held, by Kekewich J., that the house had been substantially taken down, but that the fixing of the building line was too late:

Held, by the C. A., that neither the house nor its front had been taken down within the section, and that the power to fix a building line had not arisen. ATT.-GEN. v. HATCH C. A. [1893] 3 Ch. 36

A by-law of a sanitary authority, made under s. 157 of the Public Health Act, 1875, requiring persons intending to build to deposit plans of the intended building, is broken if any substantial alteration is made in the plans. A local authority, empowered to make by-laws for the regulation of buildings within its jurisdiction, has no power to sanction plans in contravention of by-laws properly made.

An “approved” plan is a plan which has been lawfully approved by a local authority, and not one which has merely received their approval in fact. YABBICOM v. KING

8. — New buildings—Erection of—By-laws—Validity—Local authority.

The appellant was convicted under a by-law, made under the Leeds Improvement Acts by the council of the city of Leeds, by which any person erecting any new building without giving twenty-one days' notice in writing of his intention to the corporation, or without having the plans approved of by the corporation, or in anywise contrary to plans and sections which had been approved by the corporation, was made liable to a penalty. It was not shewn whether or not the buildings erected by the appellant complied with the Leeds Improvement Acts. These Acts gave a right of appeal to quarter sessions from any determination of the corporation under the Acts:—

Held, that, having regard to the special provisions of the Acts, the by-law was reasonable and valid, and the appellant was rightly convicted. COOK v. HAINSWORTH

A local Act passed in 1871 gave power to the corporation of a municipal borough to order that in any street (whether or not a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large) footways should be made by the frontagers of such form, size, and materials as the corporation should direct, and provided that if the frontagers made default in the execution of the work the corporation might cause the work to be executed and recover the expense incurred in respect thereof from the frontagers:—

Held, that where the municipal borough had, by virtue of the Local Government Act, 1888, become a county borough, the provisions of s. 11 of that Act had not the effect of repealing the provisions of the local Act as regards streets which were main roads within the meaning of the Highways and Locomotives (Amendment) Act, 1878. *LODGE v. An action was brought to restrain the deft., who claimed as owner of the subsoil of half the roadway of a street vested in the p'ts., from interfering with his poles and electric wires:—

Held, that assuming the deft. was owner of half the soil, yet the road being a “street” within s. 141 of the Public Health Act, 1875, the local board were entitled to more than the surface, and had further an “area of user” necessary for the exercise of their statutory powers, e.g., of lighting their district. The restrictions in the sections subsequent to s. 161 as to lighting by other means than gas are only intended to prevent an urban authority from invading the regulated monopoly of any gas co. in its district. *FAREHAM LOCAL BOARD AND FAREHAM ELECTRIC LIGHT CO. v. 14. — Lighting rates—Brickfield—"Land"—"Buildings and property other than land"—Lighting and Watching Act, 1833 (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 90), s. 33.

By 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 90, s. 33, "owners and occupiers of houses, buildings, and property (other than land) rateable to the relief of the poor in any such parish shall be rated at and pay a rate in the pound three times greater than that at which the owners and occupiers of land shall be rated at and pay for the purposes of this Act" (lighting and watching).

The respondents occupied land, with engine-houses and other buildings upon it, for the purposes of a brickfield, the brick earth being dug from a portion of the land and manufactured into bricks on other portions. All the land and buildings were used exclusively for the business of brickmaking :—

Held, that—assuming that the buildings or any of them could not be rated apart from the land as being capable of being put to some other than their present use—the whole property was properly rated as "land" at the lower rate specified in the Act, and not at the higher rate as "buildings" or "property other than land."

Under their Act, a corporation were empowered to make certain street works, and had power to take compulsorily "for the purpose of the street works, the lands shewn on the deposited plans in connection therewith and which they may require for the purposes thereof respectively" :—

Held, upon the construction of the Act, that certain lands fronting the new line of street which the corporation desired to take being required, not for the construction of the street works, but merely for the purpose of resale at a profit so as to reduce the cost of the street works, could not be taken compulsorily by the corporation under their statutory powers.

19. — Width of street—Local authority—"New street"—Towns Improvement Clauses Act, 1847 (10 & 11 Vict. c. 34), s. 63.

Held, that the decision of the House of Lords in Robinson v. Barton-Eccles Local Board, (1883) 8 App. Cas. 798, as to the meaning of the term "new streets" in s. 157 of the Public Health Act, 1875, governs the construction of the same term in s. 63 of the Towns Improvement Clauses Act, 1847.

A country lane in the neighbourhood of a town, and situate within the district of the urban district council of that town, was defined for the greater part of its length (581 yards) by hedges. On one side of it were buildings, extending for 485 feet along the lane, belonging to brickmakers, who were proposing to erect on the other side of the lane, opposite to their existing buildings, new buildings, which would extend for 233 feet along the lane :—

Held, that by the erection of these new buildings the lane between them and the old buildings opposite would become a "new street" within the meaning of s. 63 of the Towns Improvement Clauses Act, 1847, and subject to the provisions of that section as to width.

An interlocutory injunction was accordingly granted to restrain the defendants (the brick-makers) from building so as to make or lay out the lane as a new street less than thirty feet wide. ATT.-GEN. v. RUFFORD & CO.

Where a resolution has been passed by an urban authority under s. 6, sub-s. 1, of the Private Street Works Act, 1892, approving the plans, sections, estimates, and provisional apportionments for making up the whole of a street, and the resolution has been published and copies thereof have been served on the frontagers under sub-s. 3, the justices have, on the hearing of an objection by a frontager under s. 7 that part of the street is repairable by the inhabitants at large, jurisdiction under s. 8, sub-s. 1, to amend the resolution, plans, &c., by limiting the scheme to the remaining portion of the street; and the urban authority can then carry out the amended scheme without it being necessary for them to begin their proceedings de novo or to pass a resolution approving the amended scheme.

Where, on the hearing of an objection to the original scheme, the justices have decided upon amending the scheme, the question whether or not, under s. 8, sub-s. 1, they shall adjourn the hearing and direct any further notices to be given, is a matter entirely within their discretion; but where the amendment is of a material character, it is desirable, though not obligatory upon them, that they should adjourn the hearing and direct further notices to be given in order that persons affected by the amended scheme may have an opportunity of being heard.

Two frontagers gave notice of their objection to the claim of a local authority for apportioned expenses of paving, under s. 150 of the Public Health Act, 1875.

(A) One raised the question of the cost, and the objection appeared to be based on that rather than the apportionment:—

Held, that arbitration was necessary before the expenses became a debt due to the local authority, as the corporation, whatever may have been their rights, had in fact treated the notice as a notice of objection to the apportionment, and not merely as an objection to the costs of the works. FOLKESTONE CORPORATION v. BROOKS authority did the work, and a sum was apportioned on the owner by their surveyor. He gave no notice under s. 257 of the Act to dispute the apportionment. On a complaint before justices it appeared that the carriageway of the road was repairable by the inhabitants at large, but that the footpath was not :—

Under s. 6 of the School Sites Act, 1841, a piece of land was conveyed, in the form given in s. 10, to trustees for ever for the purposes of the Act, as a site for a national school, "and for no other purpose whatever"; and a national school was afterwards erected upon it. The local authority, under s. 150 of the Public Health Act, 1875, made up a street on part of which the school premises abutted, and served the trustees with notice under that Act to pay the apportioned expenses :—

Held (affirming Kekewich J.), that the trustees were liable for those expenses as "owners" within the Public Health Act, 1875, and that therefore the expenses were, until recovery thereof, a "charge" upon the premises under s. 257; but (reversing Kekewich J.) that the local authority could not enforce the charge by an order for sale of the school premises, since such an order would be in contravention of the School Sites Act, 1841.

Under s. 6 of the School Sites Act, 1841, a piece of land was conveyed to trustees for ever for the purposes of the Act as a site for a national school, "and for no other purpose whatever" :—

Held, that the trustees were "owners" of the school premises within the definition in s. 4 of the Public Health Act, 1875, and as such liable, under s. 257, for the apportioned expenses incurred by the local authority for making up an adjoining road: also that, until payment, such expenses were, under the same section, a "charge" upon the premises, though, as to the mode of enforcing the charge, quære.

An urban local authority served notice under s. 150 of the Public Health Act, 1875, to sewer and make up a private street. Under this notice, if the frontagers did not do the work within a limited time, the local authority had a right to do it themselves, and charge the frontagers with the expense, to be apportioned as provided by the above section. The frontagers having made default, the local authority took steps towards doing the work; but before it had been commenced they adopted the Private Street Works Act, 1892, which by s. 25 provides that from its adoption in any district, s. 150 of the Public Health Act, 1875, shall not apply to that district. The work was subsequently done by the local authority, and the expense apportioned according to the Act of 1875:—

Held, that s. 25 of the Act of 1892 did not affect the validity or effect of the notice given while s. 150 was in force in the district, though after the adoption of the Act of 1892 no fresh notice could be given under s. 150, and that if there would otherwise have been any doubt on the point, it was removed by s. 38, sub-s. 2, of the Interpretation Act, 1889, which saves everything duly done under a repealed enactment before its repeal, and every right, obligation, or liability acquired, accrued, or incurred under it before the repeal, and that the subsequent proceedings of the local authority under the notice were effectual.

The amount of the apportioned expenses of private street works executed under the Private Street Works Act, 1892, become a charge on the premises in respect of which they are apportioned as from the date of the completion of the works, and not merely as from the date of the final apportionment.

If, therefore, the premises are sold free from incumbrances after the completion of the works, but before the date of the final apportionment, the vendor must indemnify the purchaser against

A local board acting as an urban sanitary authority, resolved, under the Private Street Works Act, 1892, to execute works in a private street having houses only on the north side; part of the land on the south side was owned by the local board. The work partly consisted of flagging a footway on the north side. There was no footway on the south side:—

Held, that the expenses of the footpath were properly apportionable among the owners of premises fronting, adjoining, or abutting on both sides of the street. CLACTON LOCAL BOARD v. YOUNG & SONS

36. — Proposed works—Objections—“Insufficient or unreasonable” construction of—Private Street Works Act, 1892 (55 & 56 Vict. c. 57), ss. 7, 8.

An objection was taken to works of paving, levelling, sewerage, and lighting a street proposed by an urban authority to be done under the Private Street Works Act, 1892, the ground of objection being that the proposed works were “insufficient” and “unreasonable” within the meaning of s. 7 (d). On the hearing of the objection before a court of summary jurisdiction it was proved that the works were necessary and proper in order that the street might be safely and conveniently used as a street; but the justices allowed the objections, holding that the works were insufficient, and therefore unreasonable, because the street at one point was too narrow, and the urban authority did not propose to take any steps to have it widened:—

Held, that the expression “insufficient” in s. 7 (d) limited the jurisdiction of the court of summary jurisdiction to determining whether or not the works were insufficient to effect the purpose proposed to be effected by them, and therefore that the justices’ decision, being founded upon considerations which they ought not to have entertained, was wrong. MANSFIELD CORPORATION v. 37. — “Street”—Sewering—Local authority—Powers—“Highway repairable by the inhabitants at large”—Private Street Works Act, 1892 (55 & 56 Vict. c. 57), ss. 5, 6.

The definition of “street” in the Private Street Works Act, 1892, s. 5, excludes “a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large.”

By s. 6 an urban authority is empowered, with respect to streets, to do certain sewerage works.

An urban authority proposed to do sewerage works in a certain place in their borough. The place in question (which was called a street) was formed before 1816, and had always been open at both ends into highways, and the place and buildings had existed in the same condition for seventy years, and since its formation the way had been used by foot-passengers without interruption. Neither public nor private repairs were proved.

On a case stated on the hearing and determination by justices of objections to the proposed works:—

Held, that the place in question was not a "street" within the meaning of the Act, being a footway repairable by the inhabitants at large, and therefore the urban authority had no power to execute the proposed works. RISHTON v. HASLINGDEN CORPORATION

Held, that the by-law was invalid, since even if the words "or on land adjacent thereto," which were clearly too wide, were struck out, it was still unreasonable, because it did not contain any words importing that the acts must be done so as to cause annoyance. STRICKLAND v. HAYES

Whether, if deft. had asked to be heard, the commrs. could refuse to hear him, quære.

The plt. was the owner of land with houses on it. The adjoining land belonged to the defts., a gas co. incorporated by special Act, with power to purchase land by agreement only, and subject to the provisions of the Gasworks Clauses Acts, 1847 and 1871. Under their statutory powers the defts. proceeded to excavate their land for the purpose of erecting a gasometer. In so doing they penetrated an underground stratum of quicksand, or sand loaded with stagnant water, geologically known as “running silt,” which extended under the plt.’s land as well as their own, the silt or sand largely preponderating over the water. In draining their excavation the defts. withdrew a large quantity of the running silt from under the plt.'s land and thus caused a subsidence of the surface with consequent structural injury to his houses. The liability of the defts. to proceedings for any "nuisance" caused by them in the execution of their works was preserved by s. 9 of the Gasworks Clauses Act, 1871:—

Held, by C. A., that the defts. had no statutory authority so to construct their works as to occasion a nuisance, the fact that s. 9 of the Gasworks Clauses Act, 1871, expressly preserved their liability for any nuisance distinguishing the case from London, Brighton and South Coast Ry. Co. v. Truman, (1885) 11 App. Cas. 45:

Held, also, by Lindley M.R. and Rigby L.J., that, on their view of the facts, the plt.'s land was supported, not by a stratum of water, but by a bed of wet sand or running silt; and that, as the defts. had caused the subsidence of the plt.'s land by withdrawing this support they had committed an actionable nuisance at common law entitling the plaintiff to damages: the decision in Popplewell v. Hodgkinson, (1869) L. R. 4 Ex. 248, being inapplicable as dealing only with support by water:

But held, by V. Williams L.J., that no nuisance giving a right of action had been proved, because, upon his view of the facts, the subsidence had been caused merely by the withdrawal, through the defts.' draining operations on their own land, of subterranean water-support of the plt.'s land; and that, on principle as well as on the authority of Popplewell v. Hodgkinson, the withdrawal of subterranean water-support from a neighbour's land in the course of draining one's own land, even though it damages the neighbour's land, gives him no cause of action.

Decision of North J., [1898] 2 Ch. 614, affirmed.

The right of support for the surface of land by subterranean water, quicksand, or water-logged soil, discussed.

It being proved that the proposed gasometer would obstruct ancient lights in the plt.'s houses:—

Held, by C. A., that the plt. was entitled to an injunction to restrain the threatened infringement of his legal right, since it would not be adequately protected or vindicated by damages: Martin v. Price, [1894] 1 Ch. 276; Shelfer v. City of London Electric Lighting Co., [1895] 1 Ch. 287.

*Popplewell v. Held, that there was no contract. The final telegram was not the acceptance of an offer to sell, as there was no offer to sell, only an offer to buy, the acceptance to which must be express. HARVEY v. FACEY — P. C. [1893] A. C. 552

Parliament, and using the best known system of electrical traction, caused electrical disturbance in the wires of a telephone co. acting under licence from the Postmaster-General:—

Held, that the tramway co. were not liable for nuisance caused by exercise of their statutory authority to use electricity. NATIONAL TELEPHONE CO. v. BAKER

Kekewich J. [1893] 2 Ch. 186

2. — Illegal stretching of telephone wires across public streets—Powers of local authority—Removal of wires—Law of Guernsey.

In a suit by a telephone co. against the local authority to recover damages for cutting down and removing telephone wires stretched across a public street, it appeared that the co. was not authorized by statute so to place their wires:—

Held, that the action failed. The removal was within the legal powers of the defts., and there was no allegation of any unnecessary damage having been caused by the cutting. NATIONAL TELEPHONE CO. v. CONSTABLES OF ST. PETER PORT — — P. C. [1900] A. C. 317

3. — Notice determining tenancy of wire — Acceptance of rent—Waiver of notice.

In 1889 the N. Co. supplied a telephone wire and apparatus to K. for three years at a rent payable quarterly; upon the expiration of the term the parties continued the agreement by mutual consent. On Dec. 30, 1893, the last day of a quarter, the N. Co. gave notice terminating the agreement forthwith, and demanded rent up to Dec. 31, being one day beyond the quarter. The rent was paid and accepted by the N. Co. On motion to restrain the N. Co. from cutting the wire:—

Held, that the agreement created the relation of landlord and tenant between the N. Co. and K., and therefore the acceptance of rent for a day beyond the notice determining the tenancy acted as a waiver of that notice. An injunction granted restraining the N. Co. from interfering with the wire and apparatus.

A telephone co., acting under a licence from the Postmaster-General pursuant to the Telegraph Acts, 1863, 1878, and 1892, need not obtain the previous consent of a tramway co. before proceeding to break open a street or public road on which tramway lines are laid for the purpose of laying telephone wires, even though the tramway co. is liable for the repair of that street or public road. BRISTOL TRAMWAYS AND CARRIAGE CO. v. A tenant by the curtesy purported to grant a building lease as absolute owner without any reference to the Settled Land Acts. There were no trustees for the purposes of the Acts, and consequently no notices were given as required by s. 45 of the Act of 1882:—

THAMES.*Conservancy and Navigation.

By the Thames Conservancy Act, 1894 (57 & 58 Vict. c. clxxxvii.), the whole of the public and local Acts relating to conservancy and navigation were consolidated, and the constitution and powers of the Conservators were amended.

See No. 12, below.

1. — Collision — Anchor not stock awash by order of compulsory pilot—Contributory negligence—Thames Navigation By-laws, 1872, r. 20.

A tug negligently managed came into collision with a ship and was damaged by her anchor, which, by the order of a compulsory pilot, was in a position contrary to Thames by-law No. 20. Those on the tug knew of the anchor's position, but there was no time for those in the ship, when the collision appeared imminent, to remove the anchor:—

Held, (1) that the owners of the ship were not responsible for the breach of the by-law by the pilot's orders; (2) that the tug by ordinary care

might have avoided the collision. The Thames By-laws differ from the Collision Regs. in that breach of the latter involves liability when the contravening vessel can prove that the breach could not possibly have caused the collision, whereas under the former it must be shewn that the breach contributed to the collision. THE "MONTE ROSA" — G. Barnes J. [1893] P. 23

2. — Collision—Barges in tow—Thames by-laws, 1898, r. 11—Anchor ring awash.

The plts.' and the defts.' barges, in tow of a tug in the river Thames, came into collision, owing to the defts.' barge being affected by the wind and tide whilst the tug was temporarily brought up, and the anchor hanging, ring awash, from the bows of the defts.' barge pierced the quarter of the plts.' barge doing damage:—

Held, that the plts. were entitled to recover, for though, by rule 11 of the Thames By-laws, the anchor must be as low as ring awash, it may—according to the interpretation put upon the rule in The J. R. Hinde, [1892] P. 231—be as much lower as is thought proper, and those in charge of the defts.' barge were negligent in not having it sufficiently low in the water to avoid danger to other barges in case of contact in the course of the ordinary incidents of navigation in the river. THE SIX SISTERS

3. — Election—Returning officer—Proxy—Judicial act—Thames Conservancy Act, 1894 (57 & 58 Vict. c. clxxxvii.), ss. 22, 23, 25.

At an election of conservators by shipowners, the returning officer received and counted proxies given by bodies corporate to electors not being their shareholders or officers:—

Held, that the only way in which a corporation could vote by proxy was by a shareholder or officer, and therefore the proxies were wrongly received, but that under s. 23 of the Thames Conservancy Act, 1894, the returning officer had acted judicially and the return was conclusive:—

Held, also, that the wrong reception of the proxies was an "error or irregularity" within s. 25, and therefore could not invalidate the election. REG. v. SAMUEL

A person duly bound apprentice to a freeman of the watermen's co. or to a registered barge-owner in pursuance of the Watermen's and Lightermen's Act, 1859, is from and after the commencement of his apprenticeship a qualified apprentice and entitled to act as a lighterman, and is also a sufficient second hand to assist in the navigation of a craft of 50 tons burden to satisfy by-law 16 of the Thames Conservancy By-laws, 1872. GOSLING v. By-law 99, which requires that a proper look-out should be kept from the bow of any steamer navigating the Thames, is not repealed by by-law 36 made under the Thames Conservancy Act, 1864, which merely requires that a "proper look-out" should be kept. GOSLING v. GREEN

The Thames Conservancy Act, 1864, was repealed, and other provision made by the Thames Conservancy Act, 1894 (57 & 58 Vict. c. clxxxvii.)

6. — Nuisance on foreshore of Thames—Liability to abate.

Under their Acts the Thames Conservancy are owners of the soil and sub-soil of the river for certain specified purposes only, and are not owners for the purposes of s. 4 of the Public Health (London) Act, 1891. THAMES CONSERVANCY v. LONDON PORT SANITARY AUTHORITY

7. — Sand—Right to take—Conservators—Rights of owner of shore—"Bed"—"Shore"—Thames Conservancy Act, 1894 (57 & 58 Vict. c. clxxxvii.), ss. 3, 87.

Sect. 87 of the Thames Conservancy Act, 1894, makes it unlawful for any person other than the Conservators, their agents, &c., to dredge or raise sand from the bed of the Thames, except with the licence of the Conservators. The appellant raised sand, without such licence, from a place between high and low water-mark of the Thames, within the district of the Conservators. He claimed to take the sand under a licence from a lessee, holding under a lease, which demised the right to take sand from the place in question:—

Held, that the place was part of the "shore" of the river, within the meaning of s. 3, not of the "bed," within the meaning of s. 87, that the Act did not interfere with the right of the lessee to license the appellant to take sand, and therefore the appellant could not be convicted of an offence against the Act. PEARCE v. BUNTING. REG. v. WEDD. Ex parte PEARCE

Disapproved of by C. A. Thames Conservators v. Smeed, Dean & Co., [1897] 2 Q. B. 334. See next case.

8. — Sand—Right to take—Rights of owner of shore—"Bed of the Thames"—"Bed of river"—Conservators—Thames Conservancy Act, 1894 (57 & 58 Vict. c. clxxxvii.), ss. 87, 238.

Sect. 87 of the Thames Conservancy Act, 1894, makes it unlawful for any person other than the conservators, their agents, &c., to dredge or raise any gravel, sand, ballast, or other substance from "the bed of the Thames" except with the licence of the conservators:—

Held, that the expression "bed of the Thames" in the section, as applied to the tidal portion of the river, means the soil between the ordinary high water-mark on one side and the ordinary high water-mark on the other side; and that the right of the owner of the soil to take gravel, &c.,

between high and low water-mark is not preserved by s. 238 of the Act.

Semble, the conservators can only exercise their powers of dredging and granting licences for dredging for the purposes of the Act, i.e., for the maintenance and improvement of the navigation.

Ordinary meaning of "bed of river" defined.

9. — Sea-shore—Foreshore—Tidal and navigable waters—Right to fix moorings as incident to navigation—Immemorial user to fix moorings in foreshore—Presumption of legal origin—Immemorial user in river Thames.

An immemorial user of the foreshore in tidal and navigable waters, by the owners of fishing-boats and other craft, by fixing moorings in the soil, for the purpose of attaching their boats to them, may be supported either as an ordinary incident of the navigation of such waters, or on a presumption of a legal origin by grant from the Crown of the foreshore subject to such user, or by concession by a former owner of the foreshore to all persons navigating the waters to use it for fixing moorings.

Such an immemorial user in the river Thames may be supported on the presumption of regulations prescribed by the port authority of the port of London (per Rigby L.J.). ATTORNEY-GENERAL v. WRIGHT - - C. A. [1897] 2 Q. B. 318

A steam-vessel which throws herself athwart the navigable channel and stops her way is "not under command" within art. 18 of the Thames By-laws, 1887, and must sound her whistle as prescribed by that article. A steam-vessel must take in her side light as soon as she rides to her anchor, and if over 150 ft. long must, under art. 7 (c) of the By-laws of 1892, exhibit a second riding light. THE "WEGA"

By s. 80 of the Watermen's and Lightermen's Amendment Act, 1859, power is given to the Court of the Watermen's Co. to make by-laws for the government of the co., for the government and regulation of lightermen and watermen, and for carrying into effect the purposes of the Act and the several powers and authorities thereby vested in the co.

By s. 66 of the Act, no barge, lighter, boat, or other like craft for the carrying of goods, wares, or merchandise is to be worked or navigated within the limits of the Act, unless there be in charge of such craft a licensed lighterman or qualified apprentice, under a penalty not exceeding 5*l.*

By by-law 60 of the Watermen's Co., made under the above Act, "Every steamboat navigated on the river within the limits of this Act in the towing of barges, lighters, vessels, or craft shall have one licensed waterman on board such steamboat for the purpose of assisting in the management and navigation thereof, and if any such steamboat shall be navigated in contravention of this section (sic) the owner thereof, or the master in charge of the same, shall incur a penalty not exceeding 40*s.*" :—

Held, that the by-law was not a by-law made for carrying into effect the purposes of the Act, and was not authorized by the provisions of s. 66 of the Act, and that it was therefore ultra vires and bad. KENNAIRD v. CORY & SON

After the value of the charge was ascertained, B. sought to recover a proportionate part of the same from one of the other purchasers:—

Held, that the hop-ground only was chargeable under the Act of 1886, and that the deft. was consequently not liable to pay any portion of the charge. SIMMONDS v. HEATH

The landowner allowed the amounts so paid to be deducted from the rent, and he now sought to deduct the amount so allowed from the next payment of tithe:—

Held, that he could not make any deduction, because s. 6 of the Tithe Act, 1891, had taken from the occupiers all liability for rates on tithes and had put it on the titheowner. The payments of the occupiers were therefore voluntary payments which they were not entitled to deduct

1. — Prescriptive right—Extinguishment of old franchise by statute.

A municipal corporation having a prescriptive right to take certain customary tolls for the passage of carriages, cattle, &c., over a bridge belonging to them, obtained in 1734 a local Act which, after reciting their right to take the customary tolls, enacted that the said customary tolls should be and remain vested in them, and empowered them to take the said tolls, with a variation as to the exemption of freemen of the borough. In 1819 the corporation obtained another local Act which repealed the former Act and empowered them to take down the old bridge and build a new one and to take tolls which varied from the old tolls in amount and subject-matter. This Act was temporary and had expired:—

Held, that the prescriptive right to take tolls had been merged in and extinguished by the statutory right given in 1734, and neither had nor could have been revived by the later Act, and that the right to take tolls expired with the later Act.

The defts. were the owners of a canal, but not of the water therein, and were bound by their statutes to apply all water that might be required for the purposes of navigation, to allow so much as was wanted for the particular use of certain mill-owners, and to discharge the waste water into the B. Canal. By virtue of an Act passed in 1885, the plts., having acquired the B. Canal, were under a statutory obligation to maintain and keep the same and the approaches thereto in good condition and preserve the supplies of water thereto so that the same might at all times be kept open and navigable for the use of all persons desirous to navigate and use the same without any unnecessary hindrance. The defts. had for many years unlawfully abstracted from their own canal large quantities of water which they sold to persons who were not mill-owners entitled to the use of the same. The plts. brought an action for an injunction restraining the illegal abstraction of water (which was granted), and an account of profits or damages, and claimed the right to waive the tort, and elect to affirm what had been done, and take the profits made by the defts. in lieu of damages:—

Held, that, the defts.' canal being a public highway and the abstraction of water being a wrong against the public and against other carriers besides the plts., and the plts. being under statutory obligations in respect of the B. Canal, the plts. could not affirm the wrongful act and take profits in lieu of damages. MANCHESTER SHIP CANAL CO. v. ROCHDALE CANAL PROPRIETORS Byrne J. [1899] W. N. 24 (11)

As a general rule a trader may sell at any price whatsoever any goods, including goods of another's manufacture, which he either has in stock or expects to acquire, and may offer the same for sale by advertisement, although he thereby damages the trade of the manufacturer; and his motives for so doing cannot be inquired into.

The deft., a retail dealer, advertised for sale in a newspaper a new piano of the plts.' manufacture of a specified character at the price at which the plts. supplied the same to the trade, and thereby caused other dealers to give up dealing with the plts.; and he continued the advertisement after he ceased to have in stock any pianos of the plts.' manufacture, and after the plts. had refused to supply him, in the expectation of being able to acquire pianos of the plts. from other dealers:—

Held, (1.) that, apart from any question of misrepresentation, the deft. had a legal right to issue the advertisement; (2.) that, though the advertisement amounted to an implied representation that the deft. had in his possession a piano of the advertised description, such misrepresentation was not the cause of the damage to the plts.' trade, and consequently gave no right of action. AJELLO v. Deft. sold to the plt. co. his business as existing on Dec. 31, 1887, with the goodwill, stock-in-trade, and "all book and other debts due to the vendor in connection with the said business, and the full benefit of all securities for such debts." On Jan. 1, 1888, deft. had in his possession cheques and bills of exchange, given for trade

Action for an injunction to restrain the defendants from infringing the plaintiffs' registered trade-mark, and from passing off their goods as those of the plaintiffs:—

Held, on the facts, that there had been no infringement or passing off, so that it was unnecessary to go into the question of law. The judgment concluded as follows:—

The circumstances under which the word "patent" was used here were certainly peculiar; but if the question had really called for decision, I do not think that it would have been possible to avoid an examination of the authorities cited, which cannot, it seems to me, be easily reconciled under one general rule. As I do not propose carefully to examine them, it is better not to notice them at all; but I desire to take the opportunity of making one remark on my own decision in Lewis v. Goodbody, (1892) 67 L. T. 194. It had occurred to me, before the argument of the case in hand, to doubt whether my statement respecting the use of the words "trade mark" was not too general, and reflection for the purposes of this case has converted that doubt into certainty. I cannot recall the facts sufficiently to say whether the explanation suggested by Stirling J. in Sen Sen Co. v. Britten, [1899] 1 Ch. 696, is correct; but, be that as it may, I adopt his view of the law. HUBBUCK & SON, LD. v. BROWN Kekewich J. [1899] W. N. 250

By the Merchandise Marks Act, 1887, s. 2, sub-s. 2, a person who sells goods, to which a false trade description is applied, is guilty of an offence, unless he proves certain facts, "or that otherwise he acted innocently."

By s. 3, sub-s. 1, "A false trade description" means a trade description which is false in a material respect as regards the goods to which it is applied."

The respondents were charged with selling cigarettes, to which a false trade description, namely, "guaranteed hand-made," was applied. The cigarettes were in fact machine-made, but were of equally good quality with hand-made cigarettes.

The magistrate held that there was no intention to deceive the buyer, but only to save expense by using up a stock of old labels, and that the description, though untrue in fact, was not a false trade description in any material respect, as regarded the cigarettes sold, within the meaning of s. 3, and dismissed the information.

On a case stated:—

Held, that the fact that the cigarettes sold as hand-made were of as good quality as hand-made cigarettes afforded no defence; that the description was false in a material respect, and that the respondents, having knowingly applied the false description, had not acted innocently, and were guilty of an offence against the Act. *KIRSHENBOIM v. 5. — False trade description—"Applied to goods"—Representation implied from conduct—Merchandise Marks Act, 1887 (50 & 51 Vict. c. 28).

The appellant went into the respondents' shop and asked for two half-pounds of tea. The respondents' salesman handed him two packets of tea for which he paid. The packets respectively contained less than half-a-pound weight of tea:—

Held, that the mere handing of the packets to the appellant in response to his demand did not constitute an "application" to the goods of a false trade description of their weight within the meaning of s. 2, sub-s. 2, of the Merchandise Marks Act, 1887. LANGLEY v. BOMBAY TEA CO.

The provisions of s. 2, sub-s. 2, of the Merchandise Marks Act, 1887, which make it an offence to sell goods to which a false trade description is applied, do not apply where the description is entirely oral.

The respondent asked a salesman in the appellant's shop for a small English ham; the salesman pointed to some American hams on a shelf, and said, "These are Scotch hams"; the respondent chose one, which was weighed, and an invoice which did not contain the word "Scotch" was handed to the respondent by another assistant. The respondent told the assistant to put the word "Scotch" on the invoice, as he had bought the ham as such; the assistant did so, and handed the invoice to the respondent, who then paid the amount:—

Held, that the description in the invoice was

In an invoice delivered with beer the casks were described as "barrels." One cask contained less than a "barrel" of beer should contain, namely, thirty-four instead of thirty-six gallons. The justices dismissed the case on the ground that the mere delivery of an invoice was not an application of a false trade description to the cask:—

Held, that the description of the cask in the invoice was not the less applied to the cask within the meaning of s. 2, sub-s. 1 (d) of the Merchandise Marks Act, 1887, because the invoice was not physically attached to the cask. Case remitted. BUDD v. LUCAS

Sec. 2, sub-s. 2, of the Merchandise Marks Act, 1887, provides that a person selling goods to which a forged trade-mark is applied is guilty of an offence against the Act unless he proves that, having taken all reasonable precautions, he had no reason to suspect the genuineness of the trade-mark "or that otherwise he had acted innocently":—

Held, that a person who had reason to suspect the genuineness of the trade-mark might nevertheless have acted innocently in selling goods to which the trade-mark was applied, and might, therefore, be exonerated under this subsection. CHRISTIE, MANSON & WOODS v. COOPER

9. — "Trade description"—Unintelligible writing explained by oral statement—Merchandise Marks Act, 1887 (50 & 51 Vict. c. 28), s. 3.

Although upon a sale of goods a purely oral indication of the country of their production will not amount to a trade description within the meaning of the Merchandise Marks Act, 1887, any writing or mark, however unintelligible without explanation, will, if orally explained by the vendor at the time of sale to be intended to indicate a particular country as the country in which the goods were produced, constitute a sufficient trade description for the purposes of the Act.

The appellant went into the shop of the respondent, a dealer in foreign meat, and asked for a leg of New Zealand mutton. The respondent handed him a leg of mutton, at the same time stating that it was New Zealand meat. The respondent also handed him an invoice in which the meat was described simply as a leg of mutton. The appellant then asked the respondent to mark on the invoice that it was New Zealand meat; whereupon the respondent wrote on it the letters "N. M.," intending thereby to represent that the mutton was New Zealand mutton. No evidence was given that those letters bore that meaning according to any custom of the trade:—

Held, that under the circumstances the letters "N. M." amounted to a trade description of the meat within s. 3 of the Merchandise Marks Act, 1887, notwithstanding the absence of any trade custom as to their meaning. CAMERON v. WIGGINS Div. Ct. [1900] W. N. 253; see [1901] 1 Q. B. 1 10. — Appeal—Service—Essential particulars—Trade Marks Rules, 1890, r. 23.

The applicants sought to register, as a trade-mark for extract of meat, a label which had on it a photograph of Baron Liebig and printed words. The application stated the essential particulars to be "the name and signature of 'Extract of Meat (Baron Liebig) Photograph Brand, Ltd.' in conjunction with the photograph as reproduced on the above label." The comptroller refused to register on the ground that the trade-mark proposed for registration did not consist of any of the essential particulars required as a condition of the registration of a new trade-mark. The applicants appealed to the Bd. of Trade. The Bd. of Trade referred the appeal to the Chancery Div. of the High Court, and directed the applicants to serve the Comptroller-General and a co. called Liebig's Extract of Meat Co. The applicants applied by summons for the determination of the question raised by the appeal without serving Liebig's Extract of Meat Co. The judge in chambers directed the applicants to bring the matter on by way of motion, and serve the parties directed by the Bd. of Trade, leaving it to the judge to deal with any question of costs should he be of opinion that the parties served ought not to have appeared in the proceedings.

The applicants now moved that their appeal should be heard and determined by the Court, "and that the order (if any) made by the judge in chambers on Nov. 13, 1899, directing notice of this application to be served on Liebig's Extract of Meat Co. may be discharged." The motion was argued on the preliminary objection that the applicants had not followed the direction to serve Liebig's Extract of Meat Co.

Cozens-Hardy J. allowed the preliminary objection. Ex parte EXTRACT OF MEAT (BARON LIEBIG) PHOTOGRAPH BRAND, LTD.

The Court cannot amend an application under s. 69 of the Act of 1883, by directing the comptroller to proceed with the registration of the essential part of a proposed trade-mark. An "old mark" to be registered must be the whole mark used prior to Aug. 13, 1875. An originally defective or wrongful application cannot be corrected by subsequent disclaimer.

If application for registration of an old trade-mark has to be made under sub-s. 2 of s. 64 of the Patents, &c., Act, 1883, as amended by the Act of 1888, there is no distinction in reference to disclaimer between new marks and old marks.

Where, under s. 62, sub-s. 2, application is made to register a trade-mark which was used by the applicant or his predecessors in business before August 13, 1875, it is not necessary in the application to state the names of the members of the firm for the time being since the alleged first user, nor even to insert the words "and their predecessors in business, members of the firm for the time being." In re WRIGHT, CROSSLEY & CO.'S APPLICATION AND ROYAL BAKING POWDER COMPANY OF NEW YORK Byrne J. [1900] W. The best known of the articles sold under this mark was a fluid extract of beef which was issued under the name of "Fluid Beef, Brand Bovril," but the article being extensively sold, and called by the public "Bovril," the company adopted this name and described it as "Bovril" in their advertisements. In 1896 a rival trader applied to expunge the word from the Register of Trade Marks on the ground that

Sec. 103 of the Patents, &c., Act, 1883, as amended by the Patents, &c., Act, 1885, authorizes the registration of a trade-mark, application for registration of which has been made in a foreign country, only in cases where the trade-mark is within the definition of a trade-mark in s. 64. In re CARTER MEDICINE Co.'s TRADE-MARK — North J. Marks were used previously to 1887 with a fraudulent addition implying that the goods were made at H., when they were in fact made in M.:—

Held, that such user disentitled the applicant for registration to have them registered as new marks, minus the fraudulent addition. In re FUENTE'S TRADE-MARKS. Romer J. [1891] 2 Ch. 166

An American co. registered three trade-marks: (1.) a magnolia flower without words; (2.) the flower with the words "Magnolia antifriction metal"; the exclusive right to the words "antifriction metal" being disclaimed; (3.) the word "Magnolia" alone. Marks (1.) and (2.) were registered in class (6) for "Antifriction metal bearings," Mark (3.) was registered in class (5) for "unwrought and partly wrought metals used in manufacture." The "Magnolia" metal was a compound metal originally made under a secret process, but for which afterwards a patent was taken out:—

Held, by Kekewich J., that marks (2.) and (3.) must be expunged, because the word "Magnolia" referred to the character or quality of the goods:

Held, by C. A., that they must be expunged, because as a general rule, where an article is made under a secret process or under a patent, the manufacturer cannot, after the secret process has been discovered or the patent has expired, claim a monopoly in name which does not distinguish the article as being of his manufacture:

Held, further, by C. A., that mark (2.) had reference to the character and quality of the goods, and might have been expunged on that ground, but that mark (3.) had no such reference and was not liable to be expunged on that ground:

Held, by Kekewich J. and by C. A., that "Magnolia" was not "a geographical name" within the meaning of the Act, for that a word whose primary signification is not geographical does not become such because some obscure place has been called by it, unless the name be given to the manufactured articles with reference to the locality; and that marks (2.) and (3.) were not liable to be expunged on that ground:

Held, by Kekewich J. and C. A., that it was no objection to the registration of mark (1.) that the flower was the equivalent of a word which was not a good trade-mark:

Held, therefore, that mark (1.) was a good trade-mark.

In 1896 the American co. transferred its goodwill and assets to the appellant co. The American co. had sold a large amount of the metal in England under an agreement between them and an English firm, styled their agents, by which they agreed to supply the agents with the metal, to be paid for by the agents, who were to resell it for their own profit. The agents were to be at liberty to trade under the name of "The Magnolia Antifriction Metal Co. of Great Britain" during the existence of the agreement, but not afterwards, and the co. reserved a right in the nature of a reversion in the business carried on by the agents under the agreement. The firm caused bearings to be made and sold them on their own account, but it did not appear that the American co. had sold any bearings in England. The metal sent to England was stamped with trade-mark No. 1, but it did not appear that the bearings were so stamped:

Held, by Kekewich J., that, though at the date of the assignment the American co. had a goodwill in a business in England concerned with the metal, they had no goodwill in a business in England concerned with metal bearings; that the assignment was therefore invalid under s. 70 of the Patents, &c., Act, 1883, and that mark (1.) must be expunged:

Held, by C. A., that the American co. had a goodwill in a business in England concerned with metal bearings, and that the assignment was valid, and mark (1.) must remain on the register. In re MAGNOLIA METAL CO.'S TRADE-MARKS — C. A. [1897] 2 Ch. 371 — International copyright.

Held (reversing the decision of the Vice-Chancellor of the County Palatine), that the Comptroller-General of Patents, Designs, and Trade Marks was justified in refusing to register a trade-mark containing as an essential part of it words amounting to a verbal description of a mark already on the register, on the ground that their use would be calculated to deceive, though the words were in the Burmese language and character, which are little known out of Burma.

Held, by the Vice-Chancellor of the County Palatine, that the comptroller was not justified in refusing to register words in an oriental character as part of a trade-mark for cotton goods. On appeal this point was left open.

The holder of the trade-mark containing a picture of the object referred to by the words in question consented to the application for registration:—

Held, by C. A., that this was important only as evidence that the use of the words was not calculated to deceive, and did not preclude the comptroller from deciding otherwise.

Under s. 62, sub-ss. 4 and 5 of the Act of 1883, the Court can order the registration of a trade-mark subject to any conditions. The applicants were willing to accept a registration subject to a condition that the mark should only be put on goods sent to Burma, there being evidence that in Burma the use of the words would not be calculated to deceive:—

A firm consisting of five partners was dissolved by a deed which provided that the business should in future be carried on by two separate firms comprised of various members of the old firm; that all the partners should be entitled to use the trade-marks formerly used by the old firm; and that neither of the new firms should be exclusively entitled to the goodwill of the old business. The new firms applied simultaneously for the registration in their respective names of the marks which had been used by the old firm, some of which were registered in the name of the old firm and one of which was not registered in this country. The new firms mutually consented to each other's application:—

There is no positive rule binding upon the Court or the Bd. of Trade prohibiting the registration of a trade-mark containing the representation of a Crown. The instructions issued by the Comptroller-General of Trade Marks to applicants for registration, containing a regulation that "representations of the Royal Crown" will not be registered as trade-marks or as prominent parts of trade-marks unless the marks have been used before Aug. 13, 1875, do not prohibit every form of crown, but only representations of the Crown as it appears on the Royal Arms, namely, a circlet surmounted by two arches.

The use by a trader on his goods of the words "trade mark" in connection with a particular mark which he has used as a trade-mark but for which he has not obtained registration, does not necessarily imply that the trade-mark is registered so as to constitute an offence under s. 105 of the Patents, &c., Act, 1883, and apart from s. 105 is not of itself such a misrepresentation as to disentitle him to relief in an action to restrain the imitation of the get-up of his goods.

3. — Descriptive name—Interdict.

The appellants, an English co., claimed to have invented, or at least to have put upon the market, a fabric suitable for shirtings and underwear woven in a particular manner; and alleged that they had for the last ten years described this fabric in their advertisements as made in a certain way; and that they had marked it and invoiced it under the name of "cellular cloth" largely in England and, to some extent, in Scotland. The name had not been registered. The respondents were a wholesale firm in Edinburgh who sold cotton and woollen goods which they had recently described as "cellular."

Held, affirming the decision of the First Div. of Ct. of Sess., (1898) 25 R. 1098, that the appellants were not entitled to relief on the grounds—(1.) that the word "cellular" was an ordinary English word which appropriately and conveniently described the cloth of which the goods sold by the respondents were manufactured; and (2.) that the term had not been proved to have acquired a secondary or special meaning so as to denote only the goods of the appellants.

7. — Injunction—Trade-mark—Rival traders—Passing off—Deception—Intent to deceive—Evidence of intent—Admissibility—Account of profits, form of.

The principle that "nobody has any right to represent his goods as the goods of somebody else," Reddaway v. Banham, [1896] A. C. 199, 204, has no limit as regards name, origin, honesty of manufacture or sale, or otherwise. Thus, a trader whose goods have acquired a reputation under a particular name can restrain the user of that name in any way whatever by a rival trader in connection with the latter's own goods, even though that reputation has been acquired by the exertions or enterprise of the rival trader as an importer and vendor on behalf of the plt.

In an action for an injunction to restrain the use of a trade name; if the deft.'s goods, on the face of them and having regard to surrounding circumstances, are calculated to deceive, evidence to prove the intention to deceive is inadmissible as being unnecessary, the rule being that a man must be taken to have intended the reasonable and natural consequences of his own acts; but if, on the other hand, a mere comparison of the goods, having regard to surrounding circumstances, is not sufficient, then evidence of intention to deceive is admissible, and this evidence may be supplied by admissions, oral or in writing, or by inference from conduct.

10. — Name indicating manufacturer—Common law right—True description of article sold—Imitation—Tendency to deceive—Fraud.

A trader is not entitled to pass off his goods as the goods of another trader by selling them under a name which is likely to deceive purchasers (whether immediate or ultimate) into the belief that they are buying the goods of that other trader, although in its primary meaning the name is merely a true description of the goods.

The plt. had for some years made belting and sold it as "Camel Hair Belting," a name which had come to mean in the trade the plt.'s belting and nothing else. The defts. began to sell belting made of the yarn of camel's hair, and stamped it "Camel Hair Belting" so as to be likely to mislead purchasers into the belief that it was the plt.'s belting, endeavouring thus to pass off his goods as the plt.'s:—

Held, that the plt. was entitled to an injunction restraining the deft. from using the words "camel hair" as descriptive of or in connection with belting made or sold or offered for sale by him and not manufactured by the plt. without clearly distinguishing such belting from the plt.'s belting.

A society was registered under the Trade Union Acts, 1871 and 1876, to raise funds, by means of weekly contributions to defend and support its members in obtaining and maintaining reasonable remuneration for their labour. There were two classes of members—printers and transferrers—and by the rules of the society the printers subscribed twice as much as the transferrers, and were entitled to receive twice as much strike or lock-out pay; the scale of payments also varied with the length of time a member had belonged to the society. No provision was made by the rules for the distribution of the funds of the society on a dissolution. At the time of its dissolution the society consisted of 201 members, and its unexpended funds amounted to 1000*l.*, and the question now arose how this sum was to be distributed. The Att.-Gen. having been served, and making no claim to the fund as bona vacantia:—

Per Lindley M.R. and Chitty L.J.: To watch or beset a man's house, with a view to compel him to do or not to do that which it is lawful for him not to do or to do, is, unless some reasonable justification for it is consistent with the evidence, a wrongful act: (1.) because it is an offence within s. 7 of the Conspiracy and Protection of Property Act, 1875; and (2.) because it is a nuisance at common law for which an action on the case would lie; for such conduct seriously interferes with the ordinary comfort of human existence and the ordinary enjoyment of the house beset: Bamford v. Turnley, (1860) 3 B. & S. 62; Broder v. Saillard, (1876) 2 Ch. D. 692, 701; Walter v. Selfe, (1851) 4 De G. & Sm. 315; Crump v. Lambert, (1867) L. R. 3 Eq. 409.

Proof that the nuisance was caused by an attempt "peaceably to persuade other people" would afford no defence to such an action; though persons may be peaceably persuaded provided the method employed is not a nuisance.

In the expression at the beginning of s. 7 "with a view to compel," the word "view" does not import motive—it imports purpose.

Per V. Williams L.J.: the words "wrongfully and without legal authority" in s. 7 of the Act of 1875 mean unwarranted by law.

According to the true meaning of s. 7 all watching and besetting is unlawful except such as is merely for the purpose of obtaining or communicating information; but the fact that a

The picketing of the works or place of business of an employer, for the purpose of persuading people, whether masters or men, not to work for him, is a "watching or besetting" with a view wrongfully and illegally to compel persons to abstain from doing a lawful act, within the meaning of s. 7, sub-s. 4, of the Conspiracy and Protection of Property Act, 1875.

The defts., officers of a trade union, ordered a strike against the plt. manufacturers, and also against S., a person who made goods for the plts. only; and their pickets by their direction watched and beset the works of the plts. and of S., for the purpose of persuading workpeople to abstain from working for the plts.

The C. A. In an action under s. 7 of the Conspiracy, and Protection of Property Act, 1875, brought by several members of an association of master builders at H., where there was a strike, against the officials of various trade unions there, the plts., by their statement of claim alleged that the defts., with the intention of compelling the plts. and other members of the association to accept the terms of the unions, combined and conspired together to watch railway stations and other places where workmen imported by the association to replace the men on strike might happen to be, for the purpose of persuading those workmen not to work for the plts. or any of them, or any other member of the association, and in furtherance of the said combination and conspiracy wrongfully did a series of overt acts therein specified for the purpose of persuading the workmen as aforesaid, by reason whereof the plts. suffered damage:—

Held, (1.) that the allegations in the statement of claim disclosed a joint cause of action, and that, even if it were not established that all the defendants had committed the acts complained of, judgment might be recovered against some or one of them; (2.) that the plts. could properly combine in bringing the action, inasmuch as the right to the relief claimed arose out of the same series of transactions, and there was a common question of fact as well as law whether all the acts complained of were done in pursuance of a combination so as to render the defts. jointly liable in respect of them.

The proper construction of s. 43 of the Tramways Act, 1870, is that the valuation should be made on the principle of assessing what it would cost to lay down the tramways, with an allowance for depreciation, and that past profits or rental value must not be taken into consideration. Tramway held for this purpose to mean the line of rails, and not the power of making rails or the co.'s undertaking or business.

2. — Compulsory purchase—Undertaking—Tramways Act, 1870 (33 & 34 Vict. c. 78), s. 43.

In s. 43 of the Tramways Act, 1870, the word “undertaking” means the special tramway which the promoters are empowered to construct by any special Act or provisional order; therefore where a tramway co. had constructed a number of lines under special Acts passed in different years, a local authority may (subject to the leave of the Bd. of Trade) purchase so much of any one line as is in its district at the expiration of twenty-one years from the time when the promoters were authorized to construct it; notwithstanding that each special Act subsequent to the first defines “undertaking” as the undertaking authorized by that and the preceding special Acts. *NORTH METROPOLITAN TRAMWAYS CO. v. Holders of debentures issued by a tramway co., governed by the Tramways Act, 1870 (whether the co. be incorporated under the Companies Act, 1862, or by a special Act), by which debentures the undertaking of the co. and all its property present and future, including uncalled capital, are charged are, in the event of default by the co., entitled only to the appointment of a receiver of the undertaking of the co. and the net earnings thereof; they are not entitled to an order for the sale of the undertaking nor to the appointment of a manager. The promoters cannot give the debenture-holders a right to exercise the power of sale under s. 44, nor a right to a judicial sale under the order of the Court in an action to enforce the security. *MARSHALL v. ## 2. — Action against public officers in their official capacity—Agent of executive government—Liability of servants of the Crown—Prerogative—Jurisdiction—Amendment.

Alleged authority of an executive department is no justification for a trespass, but only those who commit or in fact authorize the trespass are liable.

The head of a Government Department is not liable for wrongful acts of officials in the Department, unless it can be shown that the act complained of was substantially the act of the head of the Department himself.

The plts. commenced an action against the Lords of the Admiralty with the object of establishing as against them that they were not entitled to enter upon, or acquire by way of compulsory purchase, certain land, the property of the plts. for the purpose of erecting thereon a training college for naval cadets, and claiming damages for alleged trespass and an injunction to restrain further trespass:—

Held, that though the plts. could sue any of the defts. individually for trespasses committed, or threatened by them, they could not sue them as an official body, and that as the action was a claim against the defts. in their official capacity, it was misconceived and would not lie; leave to amend, by suing the defts. in their individual capacity, and by adding as defts. the persons who had actually trespassed on the land, was also refused, and the action was dismissed with costs. The defts. having trespassed on the plts.’ land by tipping spoil thereon from their colliery:—

Held (decision of Chitty J., [1896] 1 Ch. 894, affirmed), that the amount of damages was not to be assessed by ascertaining merely the diminution in value of the plts.’ land, but that the principle of the way-leave cases, (1839) Martin v. Porter, 5 M. & W. 351; Jegon v. Vivian, (1871) L. R. 6 Ch. 742; and Phillips v. Homfray, (1871) L. R. 6 Ch. 770, applied: namely, that if one person without leave of another uses the other’s land for his own purposes he ought to pay for such user; and that therefore, as to so much of the land as was covered with spoil, the value of the land for the purpose for which it was used by the wrongdoers ought to be taken into account, and that as to the rest of the land the measure of damages was the diminution of the value thereof to the pits, by reason of the wrongful acts of the defts. WHITTHAM v. WESTMINSTER BRYMBO COAL AND COKE CO. C. A. [1896] 2 Ch. 538

Held, (1.) that the landlord's common law right of entry was not suspended by the issuing of the possession warrant; (2.) that the removal of the tiles did not amount to a forcible entry, and the tenant had no cause of action. JONES v. FOLEY — Div. Ct. [1891] 1 Q. B. 730

N. pledged with the plts. as security for an advance eighteen hogsheads of tobacco which were in the custody of the defts. as warehousemen. He subsequently repaid the advance on one of the hogsheads, and presented to the plts. for their signature a delivery order on the defts. On the order the place for the quantity was left blank. The plts. signed the order, and N., having filled in the blank space with the words "eighteen hogsheads," obtained delivery of them all from the defts., and then disposed of them. In an action against the defts. for the conversion of the seventeen hogsheads :—

Held, that the plts. could not succeed, since they had impliedly given N. authority to fill up the blank in the delivery order, and were now estopped from shewing that that authority was limited.

In the second action it appeared that N. had pledged with the plts. two separate consignments of tobacco. He paid off the advance on one consignment, and presented to the plts. a properly drawn delivery order in respect of it. They signed it, and N. subsequently added above their signature the description and distinguishing marks of the other consignment, and thus obtained from the defts. delivery of both consignments :—

Held, that an action for conversion would lie against the defts., since the plts. had not been guilty of any negligence which was the proximate cause of the wrongful delivery.

In the third action it appeared that N., after fraudulently obtaining the tobacco as above stated, had pledged it with the defts. bank as security for an advance, and before the fraud was discovered had repaid the advance and recovered possession of the tobacco :—

6. — Conversion of document — Damages — Measure of — Non-negotiable instrument — Money had and received.

The plts. received from a co., which was indebted to them, an order addressed to the co.'s bankers for the payment of the amount of their debt. The order was not a cheque within the meaning of the Bills of Exchange Act, 1882, because the payment was made conditional upon signature of a receipt appended to the order. The order was stolen from the plts., the receipt being then unsigned. It was subsequently handed to the defts., a banking co., with a forged indorsement and receipt thereon, for collection on behalf of a customer of theirs whom they credited with the amount of it. It did not appear that the customer knew that the order had been stolen. The order was presented by the defts. to the bank to which it was addressed, and the amount specified therein was thereupon paid by that bank to them. Subsequently, the plts. gave notice to the defts. that the order was stolen from them, and claimed the amount received by the defts. upon it. Nothing had in the meantime taken place to debar the defts. from cancelling the credit given to their customer as before mentioned :—

Held, that the plts. were entitled to recover the amount received by the defts. upon the order as money received for the plt.'s use.

Query, whether they were entitled to recover that amount as damages for the conversion of the document. BAVINS, JUNR. & SIMS v. LONDON AND SOUTH WESTERN BANK

The plt.'s servant wrongfully sold goods of his master to the deft., who knew that the servant was improperly dealing with them, and the servant paid the proceeds of the sale into his account at his bank. The plt. brought an action against the servant and the bank, claiming as against the servant damages for conversion of the goods, and in the alternative for money had and received, and as against the servant and the bank an injunction to restrain them respectively until the trial of the action from drawing out or parting with the sum of 1500*l.* then standing to the servant's credit at the bank. The plt. applied for an interim injunction as above upon an affidavit that 1500*l.* at the least could be specifically traced to the servant's account as being moneys paid by the deft. for the goods wrongfully sold. An interim injunction was granted, but no further steps in the action were taken, an agreement being arrived at between the plt. and the servant that 1125*l.* out of the 1500*l.* then at the bank should be paid to the plt. in full settlement of all claims against the servant, without prejudice to the plt.'s claim against the deft. This agreement was embodied in a judge's order, but no judgment was signed. Before the agreement was made the plt. had brought an action against the deft. claiming damages for the conversion of the goods:—

Held, that the plt. had not, by his proceedings in the former action and by his dealings with the servant therein, elected to affirm the sale and to waive the tort, and the action against the deft. was maintainable. RICE v. REED.

A trust to accumulate income in order to improve lands, so long as the improvements come under the words “maintain in good habitable repair houses and tenements on property,” is outside the Thellusson Act. Money laid out in building houses would be within the Act.

A will contained a trust for the investment of the clear surplus of the income of the residue in augmentation of the general trust fund, subject to a proviso as to any insufficiency in the insurance moneys received on the destruction by fire of any building and rebuilding or substantially repairing any building.

Held, (1) that the will amounted to an express direction for the accumulation of income; and (2) that, upon the principle of Vine v. Raleigh, [1891] 2 Ch. 13, see preceding Case above, the trust for accumulation was valid, so far as it was a bona fide provision for the performance of the trusts for rebuilding, repairing, and reinstating the buildings; but that, subject to the due performance of such trusts, the trust for investment of the surplus income, after answering the purposes specified in the will, was invalid as from the expiration of twenty-one years from the testator's death. *In re MASON. A gale in the Forest of Dean was held in trust for A.'s children, of whom B. was one. Neither the trustees, the cestuis que trust, nor A. were free miners. If the gale became forfeited, only a free miner could apply for a grant of the gale. A. and B. arranged for a free miner to obtain a grant and transfer it to them:—

Held, that A. and B. were not constructive trustees of the gale, and that the Statute of Frauds could be pleaded in an action to enforce the alleged trust:

Held, also, that an arrangement between A. and B., after obtaining the gale, to hold it on trust for persons, some of whom, but not all, were the original cestuis que trust, did not constitute a trust enforceable after the gale had been sold by the survivor of A. and B. HOLMES v. WILLIAMS

By a voluntary settlement in 1880, E., who was contingently entitled in expectancy as one of the next of kin of a lunatic, assigned her possible share in his personal estate to trustees, upon trust to pay certain capital sums to certain named persons, amongst them being 500*l.* to K., and then to hold the residue for the plaintiff. K. predeceased the lunatic, who died in 1894 intestate and a bachelor. In April, 1895, E. wrote to the administrator of the lunatic requesting him to pay and transfer her share to the trustees of the settlement, and the question now raised was, who was entitled to the 500*l.* settled on K. It was admitted that the assignment of a mere expectancy in 1880 was inoperative, and that there was no effectual assignment till the letter of confirmation in April 1895:—

Held, that the settlement could not operate in favour of K., who was dead at the time of its confirmation in 1895, which had no retrospective effect; that the 500*l.* did not fall into residue, but that there was a resulting trust in favour of E., the settlor. *In re TILT. A gift by will, for a particular purpose only, gives rise to a resulting trust of any surplus not required for that purpose, but a gift, subject to the performance of a particular purpose gives the donee a beneficial interest subject to that purpose.

Gift by will to donees upon trust for sale and upon trust out of the moneys to arise from such sale to pay funeral and testamentary expenses, debts, and legacies, with clauses for indemnity and reimbursement of the "said trustees." No other trusts were declared, and there was no residuary gift. The property not being exhausted by the above trusts:—

Held, that the donees did not take the surplus beneficially, but that there was a resulting trust.

TRUSTEE (Accounts)—continued.*(b)—Carrying back account—Statutes of Limitations.

The effect of s. 8 of the Trustee Act, 1888, is that except in the three following cases, fraud by the trustee, retention of trust property by him, or receipt by him and conversion of it to his own use, a trustee who has committed a breach of trust is entitled to the protection of the several Statutes of Limitation as if actions or proceedings for breaches of trust were enumerated in them.

Under a will, the plt., on the expiration of a term of fourteen years from the death of the testatrix (who died on May 20, 1875), became entitled to an annuity for her life. During the term it was the duty of the deft., as trustee under the will, to receive the rents of certain devised estates, and after payment of some immediate annuities, to accumulate the surplus rents and invest the accumulations in the purchase of lands. The plt.'s annuity was charged upon the accumulations and the lands to be purchased therewith, as well as upon the devised estates. Without any fraudulent intent the deft., instead of accumulating the surplus rents, applied them in keeping down interest on incumbrances and in necessary repairs.

The term expired on May 20, 1889, the plt.'s annuity fell into arrear in Nov. 1894, and on Aug. 9, 1895, she brought this action for an account.

The deft. had no trust moneys in his hands at the issue of the writ, and had never converted any trust moneys to his own use; and he relied on s. 8 of the Trustee Act, 1888, but admitted that within six years before the issue of the writ he had rents in his hands which he ought to have accumulated and invested:—

Held, (1) that the plt. was entitled to an account of the moneys in the hands of the deft. six years before the issue of the writ and liable to the trust for accumulation, and also to an account of the rents which ought afterwards to have been accumulated, but not to an account from the death of the testatrix; and (2) that the case fell either within clause (a) or clause (b) of s. 8 of the Act of 1888, but (per Rigby L.J.) preferably within clause (a); and that whichever clause was applicable, the deft. was protected from demands more than six years before the issue of the writ.

5. — Absence from the jurisdiction—Trustee Act, 1893 (56 & 57 Vict. c. 53) s. 10, sub-s. 1.

Originating summons to determine who were the present trustees of the will of J. Walker.

Prior to June, 1900, the existing trustees of the will were the plt. and the deft. Mrs. Walker.

On June 1, 1900, Mrs. Walker purported, in exercise of the power of appointing new trustees conferred by s. 10 of the Trustee Act 1893, to appoint the deft. Barrow to be a trustee of the will in the place of the plt., on the ground that the plt. had remained out of the jurisdiction for more than twelve months. It appeared that the plt. went to reside abroad in the spring of 1899, and that he had remained abroad for upwards of a year prior to June 1, 1900, except for a week in Nov. 1899, when he came to London and did some business in connection with the trust.

The Court held that it was unable to find as a fact that the plt. remained out of the jurisdiction for twelve months before June 1, 1900. The plt. and Mrs. Walker were, therefore, the present trustees of the will. In re WALKER. SUMMERS v. BARROW Farwell J. [1900] W. N. 275

The Trustee Acts do not authorise the appointment of a trustee to discharge duties which belong not to the office of a trustee but only to that of an executor. Held, that as there was no person able and willing to act as nominor of trustees, and as there was no contrary intention within the meaning of s. 10 (5) of the Act of 1893, that the surviving trustee had power to appoint under s. 10 (1) of the Act.

Where, therefore, by a marriage settlement the husband and wife, or the survivor of them, were empowered to appoint new trustees in certain specified events, including the event of a trustee becoming incapable, but not the event of a trustee becoming unfit, and one of the trustees became unfit but not incapable:—

Held, that the appointment of a new trustee ought to be made not by the surviving husband as the person nominated in the settlement, but by the continuing trustees under the provisions of the Act. In re WHEELER AND DE ROCHOW

Section 31 of the Conveyancing Act, 1881, does not authorize an appointment of trustees in continuation to himself by a sole surviving trustee by his will. The persons in possession of a general grant of probate of the will of a surviving trustee are his "personal representatives" within s. 31 of the Conveyancing Act, 1881, and their deed of appointment of new trustees is valid, notwithstanding the appointment of special executors in that behalf and their subsequently obtaining a limited grant of probate. In re PARKER'S TRUSTS Kekewich J. [1894] 1 Ch. 707

13. — Power to appoint new trustees—"Bare trustees"—"Acting trustees"—Land Transfer Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 87), s. 48.

The surviving trustee of a trust for sale died intestate leaving co-heiresses. The co-heiresses did not receive the rents of the estate; but, on being called upon to do so, executed a deed purporting to appoint new trustees and to vest the trust estate in them:—

Held, that the appointment was good, for they were trustees because they could have exercised the power of sale, and they were "acting trustees" because they had acted in making the appointment:—

Held, also, that the intestate was not a "bare trustee" within s. 48 of the Land Transfer Act, 1875, and that the trust estate did not vest in his personal representative. In re CUNNINGHAM AND FRAYLING - - Stirling J. [1891] 2 Ch. 567

14. — Power to appoint new trustees—Trustee predeceasing testator—Conveyancing Act, 1881 (44 & 45 Vict. c. 41), s. 31.

15. — Power to appoint new trustees of will—Tenant for life donee of power—Trustee "abroad"—Old trustee executor—New trustee solicitor for tenant for life.

Under a will containing a settlement of real and personal estate the power to appoint new trustees became exercisable in case (inter alia) either of the trustees should "be abroad." There were three trustees, and they were also the executors of the will. P., one of them, after acting with his co-trustees for ten years, in 1893 went to reside in Normandy, taking a five years' lease of a house there, and coming occasionally to England upon the trust business. In 1895 the tenant for life, who was the donee of the power, appointed T. W., her own solicitor, to be a new trustee in the place of P. Upon a summons taken out by P. and the other two original trustees, asking the opinion of the Court whether the appointment was valid:—

Held, (1) that P. was "abroad" within the meaning of the power; (2) that as, upon the facts, no part of the testator's estate remained vested in P. as executor virtute officii, his position was merely that of a trustee; and (3) that although the appointment of the solicitor of the tenant for life as trustee of the settlement was not one which the Court itself would have either made or sanctioned, yet, as T. W. was in other respects a fit and proper person, as none of the beneficiaries objected, and as the tenant for life did not appear to have acted capriciously, the Court could not treat the appointment as invalid, though it would give P. liberty to apply, so that his right of indemnity as legal personal representative should not be prejudiced in case it should turn out that any liability on his part still existed.

A testator gave the proceeds of his residuary estate upon trust as to one undivided sixth to pay the income to his eldest son for life, and after his death to pay the capital to his children, and as to the remaining five-sixths upon similar trusts for the testator's four other sons and his daughter and their children, and he empowered his trustees to pay over a portion of the capital of the settled shares to any of his six children absolutely, notwithstanding the previous trusts. In 1881 the then trustees paid to each of the five sons one-half of his share, and to the daughter one-sixth of her share absolutely; and they also set aside for the daughter and her children a sum of stock sufficient at its then value to make up with the sum advanced to her one-half of her share. The income of the stock was paid to the daughter till her death in 1896:—

The principle established in Wolmershausen v. Gullick, [1893] 2 Ch. 514, that the Statute of Limitations does not begin to run against a surety suing a co-surety for contribution until the liability of the surety is established, applies equally to the case of a trustee claiming contribution against his co-trustee in respect of a liability incurred from loss occasioned to the trust estate by their joint default. In such a case, therefore, time does not begin to run as between the co-trustees until the claim of the cestui que trust has been established against one of them.

The plt., who was trustee of a marriage settlement, allowed the trust-fund to be in the hands of the deft., his co-trustee, for investment. The deft. entrusted the whole fund to an "outside" stockbroker, who applied a portion of it to his own uses. In an action by the plt. and infant cestui que trust under the settlement, the deft. denied his liability and claimed contribution against the plt. trustee:—

Held, (1.) that the deft., not having exercised proper care in the selection of a broker, and having improperly left the whole amount of the trust fund in the broker's hands, was liable for the loss which had occurred; (2.) that the plt. was in pari delicto with the deft., and that the deft. was therefore entitled to contribution from the plt.; and (3.) that as between the two trustees time did not begin to run under the Statutes of Limitation until the date of the judgment in the action. ROBINSON v. HARKIN

22. — Contribution—Co-trustees—Trustee Beneficiary—Loss to trust estate, Liability for—Contribution between co-trustees—Advance of trust-money —Repayment of private debt of trustee out of advance—Following trust funds.

The rule as to the right of a trustee to contribution from his co-trustee for loss occasioned to the trust estate by a breach of trust for which both are equally to blame does not apply where one of the trustees is also a cestui que trust and has received, as between himself and his co-trustee, an exclusive benefit by the breach of trust: in that case the rule to be applied is that under which the share or interest of a cestui que trust who has assented to and profited by a breach of trust has to bear the whole loss; and the trustee who is a cestui que trust must therefore indemnify his co-trustee to the extent of his share or interest in the trust estate, and not merely to the extent of the benefit he has received.

The plt. and deft., the trustees of a will, invested certain trust funds, part of the trust estate, in securities of a description authorized by the will. The plt., while a trustee, became also entitled as a beneficiary to a share of the trust estate. The investments, some of which were made before and others after the plt. became a beneficiary, turned out insufficient, and the plt. and deft. were declared jointly and severally liable to make good the loss to the trust estate. The whole of the loss was made good out of the plt.'s share of the trust estate, which share exceeded the amount of the loss:—

Held, by C. A., affirming North J., [1895] W. N. 132 (17), that the plt. had no right of contribution from the deft. in respect of any part of the loss.

The extent of the liability of a trustee beneficiary for a breach of trust in which he is implicated, discussed.

The fact of a borrower of trust-money from trustees repaying out of the money so borrowed a debt due from him to one of the trustees, is not, of itself, sufficient to render the trustee so accepting repayment liable for breach of trust, the borrower of the trust-money being under no restriction as to its application. *CHILLINGWORTH v. During the five years' administration of a testator's estate by the Court, the executors, who knew that large sums were necessary for the payment of debts, disbursements, and other administration purposes, paid various sums from time to time to their solicitors in reliance on their statements that these sums were in each case required for those purposes, to which they were in fact in great part applied. Shortly before the close of the administration the solicitors became bankrupt, and the total amount paid to them being substantially in excess of the amount required and applied for administration purposes, the balance was lost to the estate:—

Held, under the special circumstances, that the executors had acted honestly and reasonably, and ought fairly to be excused for making the payments in reliance on their solicitors' statements, and ought to be relieved from personal liability in respect of the balance lost.

Section 3 of the Judicial Trustees Act, 1896, applies to the case of an executor who has committed a devastavit, but in construing that section the Court is bound to remember the provisions of 22 & 23 Vict. c. 35, s. 29, and to see that there has been no undue delay in advertising for claims.

A testator, who died in June, 1894, leaving assets amounting to 22,000*l.*, and debts, as then ascertained, of about 100*l.*, gave an immediate legacy of 300*l.* to his widow; the executor paid this legacy and allowed the widow to receive the income arising from the estate for the support of herself and family. In Aug. following a claim for rents received by the testator as an agent, and not accounted for, was sent in; in Nov. the usual advertisements for creditors were issued; in Dec. an action claiming an account on the footing of wilful default by the testator was commenced. The executor, without going to the Court for directions, defended the action, and continued to allow the widow to receive the income till judgment in April 1896, which resulted in some 26,000*l.* being found due from the testators' estate to the plts.

Held, that though there had been undue delay in issuing the advertisements for claims, the executor had acted reasonably under all the circumstances in paying the 300*l.* legacy and such further sums on account of income as were necessary to maintain the widow and family up to the issue of the writ, but not after, and to this extent he might be relieved from personal liability. *In re KAY. The estate comprised a debt of 166*l.* due upon a promissory note payable upon demand; the executors, believing the debtor to be a man of good credit, neither called in, nor applied to the Court for directions as to this debt; the debtor died insolvent eighteen months after the testator; and the estate suffered a loss:—

Held, that, having regard to the terms of the will and the amount of the debt, the executors might reasonably have thought they were not bound either to call in the debt or to apply for directions, and that, under the circumstances, having acted honestly and reasonably, they ought to be relieved, under s. 3 of the Judicial Trustees Act, 1896, from their breach of trust and from personal liability for the same.

In A.'s settlement was included the above sum of dock stock which A. joined in transferring to the trustees; but in the opinion of the Court it appeared from the evidence that A. did not know the origin of the dock stock, nor that it was a fund in which he had an interest; and it appeared that all the negotiations for A.'s settlement had gone on the footing that C. was settling money of his own:—

Held, (reversing the decision of North J., [1895] 2 Ch. 853), that in a suit by the representatives of C.'s children to have the funds of the settlement of 1832 replaced, A. was not to be treated as having received the dock stock so as pro tanto to reduce the claim of C.'s children to have the trust funds replaced. *CRICHTON v. The executors by their defences admitted the breach of trust, but alleged that it was committed at the instigation and request and consent in writing of the tenant for life, and claimed that her life interest ought to be impounded under s. 45 of the Trustees Act, 1893, by way of indemnity to the estates of the deceased trustee. No notice was given by the executors to the tenant for life under Order XVI., r. 55, that they claimed contribution or indemnity against her. The power to relieve a trustee from personal liability for a breach of trust given by s. 3 of the Judicial Trustees Act, 1896, is meant to be acted on freely and fairly in the exercise of judicial discretion, but the Court must, before exercising the power, be satisfied by sufficient evidence that the trustee acted reasonably as well as honestly.

No general rules or principles can be laid down as those to be acted upon in carrying out the section; each case depends on its own circumstances.

Where two trustees appointed by a testatrix, one being a solicitor and the other a linendraper, invested trust money on a mortgage which was an improper investment both as to its nature and as to its value, the Court refused to excuse the linendraper when it was not satisfied that he had acted with the care which he would probably have taken if the money had been his own, but found that he had relied on the solicitor. The equity of a trustee who commits a breach at the request and for the benefit of a beneficiary (and consequently thus affecting an assignee of the interest of a beneficiary) is not merely statutory since the passing of the Trustee Acts, 1888 and 1893, but is the same now as it was before those Acts, which enlarge the judicial discretion of the Court in such cases. Such equity is not waived where the trustee at the time of the breach declines to take a mortgage of the beneficiary's interest by way of security for the breach. It is the duty of a trustee to protect a married woman, restrained from anticipation against herself, when she asks him to commit a breach of trust. On failure of such duty the Court will be slow to exercise its discretion under s. 45 of the Act of 1893 in order to remove the restraint on anticipation in order that her life interest may be impounded to recoup him. BOLTON v. The C. In July, 1876, B., who had previously obtained from C. & Co. two advances of 20,000*l.* and 25,000*l.* on the security of his own estates in Cumberland, had obtained from them 20,000*l.* more, and signed this memorandum: "Messrs. If required by you at any time, I undertake by way of further security to execute to you a valid charge on my Ceylon estates." In July, 1879, by a memorandum indorsed on this memorandum, B. stated to C. & Co. that he had directed his agent to execute to them, in pursuance of the former memorandum, a formal charge on the D. and D. estates (two of the estates to which R. afterwards established his title) for 35,000*l.*, the balance then due from him to C. & Co. A mortgage in Ceylon was executed accordingly. C. & Co. never resorted to the D. and D. estates. The official referee in taking the accounts charged B. with 20,000*l.* as money received by him in respect of a mortgage on part of the trust estate. Kekewich J. struck out this sum altogether:—

Held, on appeal, that as B. had received 20,000*l.* on a charge on the Cumberland estates, and a promise to give a charge on the D. and D. estates, which promise was afterwards followed by an actual charge, he must be treated as having raised that sum rateably out of the Cumberland estates and the D. and D. estates according to their respective values after deducting the prior incumbrances upon them, and must be debited with the share attributable to the D. and D. estates. ROCHEFOUCAULD v. 38. — Retiring trustees, Liability of, for breach of trust—Unauthorized investments—Order against trustees—Trustees taking over securities—New trustees—Cestui que trust—Infant—Claim against co-trustee—Indemnity—Solicitor—Third party notice.

To make a retiring trustee liable for a breach of trust committed by his successor, it must be proved that the very breach of trust which was in fact committed was not merely the outcome of or rendered easy by the retirement and new appointment, but was contemplated by the former trustee when the retirement and appointment took place.

Where one of two trustees by whom a breach of trust is committed is a solicitor, he cannot, merely because he is a solicitor, be required to indemnify his co-trustee where that co-trustee has himself been an active participator in the breach of trust and has not participated in it merely in consequence of the advice and control of the solicitor.

The rule of equity that trustees who have caused a loss by investing trust funds on an unauthorized security cannot be required by the cestui que trust to make good the loss without having the security transferred to themselves, does not apply where the cestui que trust is an infant; he being entitled to have the trust fund made good by the trustees notwithstanding the security cannot be transferred to them.

Trustees acting under the advice of their solicitors invested 3000*l.* part of the trust fund, upon the security of a contributory mortgage for 6000*l.*, the remaining 3000*l.* being advanced by the solicitors themselves. The legal estate in the mortgaged property was not vested in the trustees, the mortgage being taken in the names of one of them and of a stranger to the trust. The mortgagees executed a contemporaneous declaration of trust declaring that their names should stand in the mortgage as to the sum of 3000*l.*, part of the said sum of 6000*l.* and the interest thereof in trust for the trustees, and as to the further sum of 3000*l.* "residue of the said sum of 6000*l.* and the residue of the interest to become due and payable" under the mortgage, in trust for the solicitors. By another contemporaneous document the solicitors guaranteed to the trustees the sufficiency of the security for the sum of

Held, that the trustees were not entitled to priority for their 3000*l.* as against the assignees of the solicitors. STOKES v. PRANCE

A tenant for life consented in writing to an investment by trustees of the trust fund on a mortgage. The security was insufficient, and some of the trust fund was lost:—

Held, by C. A. (1) (reversing Kekewich J.) that the trustees were not entitled under s. 6 of the Trustee Act, 1888, to have the life interest in the whole trust fund impounded by way of indemnity to them against their liability to the infant remaindermen, as the evidence did not shew that the tenant for life instigated, requested, or agreed in writing to a breach of trust; (2) affirming Kekewich J. that, as between the tenant for life and the trustees, the breach of trust was committed in 1878, when the investment was made, and not in 1890, when the interest on the mortgage ceased to be paid, and therefore the tenant for life's remedy against the trustees was barred by the statute; (3) that payment of interest on the mortgage was not an acknowledgment which would take the case out of the Statute of Limitations. A summons for administration having been taken out by beneficiaries under a will against the trustees, in answer to an inquiry the master had certified that the trust estate had suffered a loss owing to improper investments for which the trustees were liable. No application was made to vary the certificate, but, upon the case coming on for further consideration, the trustees claimed relief under s. 3 of the Judicial Trustees Act, 1896. The inquiry was directed and the certificate made before the passing of the Act:—

Held, that under the circumstances the application for relief was not too late, and that the Court would hear evidence as to whether the trustees had "acted honestly and reasonably, and ought to be excused."

The onus is on a trustee who applies under s. 3 of the Judicial Trustees Act, 1896, to be relieved from the consequences of a breach of trust, to prove that he acted honestly and reasonably; and where the breach of trust consists in investing the trust funds upon sufficient securities, prima facie the requirements of s. 4 of the Trustee Act, 1888, and s. 8 of the Trustee Act, 1893, constitute a standard by which reasonable conduct is to be judged, although non-compliance with those requirements is not necessarily a fatal obstacle to an application for relief; it is also a matter for consideration whether the trustee would have acted in the same way if he had been lending money of his own.

A trustee (1.) acted on a valuation which stated merely the amount for which the property was a good security without stating the value of the property, and (2.) advanced more than two-thirds of the value stated in the valuation. In each case the valuer was employed by a solicitor who acted for the mortgagor also, and the trustee did not allege that he reasonably believed the valuer to be employed independently of any owner of the property:—

Held, that he was not entitled to relief. In re STUART. SMITH v. STUART

The accountant of court, Scotland, who as to this matter, fills a similar position to that of a Master in Chancery under the Judicial Trustee Rules, 1897, has no power to approve of an improper investment.

By s. 3, sub-s. 10, of the Trusts (Scotland) Amendment Act, 1884, trustees, including judicial factors and curators bonis, are authorized to lend trust money in loans on real or heritable security; and by sub-s. 12, in loans on debentures secured on rates or taxes levied under statutory power by municipal corporations.

A curator bonis invested his ward's money on a bond of the Greenock Harbour Trustees, a corporation consisting of the magistrates, the council, and elected trustees. As security the trustees assigned to the curator bonis the "rates and duties and other revenues of the harbour," but no right of obtaining possession of the works on default of payment was given. The accounts of the curator bonis was audited by the accountant of court and passed without comment. The harbour trustees made default in payment of interest:—

Held, (1) that the investment was not a real or heritable security; (2) that it was not a debenture created by a municipal corporation; (3) that, looking to the previous statement of accounts of the harbour trust, it was not a security a prudent trustee ought to have invested his ward's money in; and (4) that the annual audit of the accountant of court did not exonerate the curator bonis from liability. *HUTTON v. and trustees are under an absolute duty, without exercising any judgment of their own in the matter, to call in the securities within twelve months from the death (unless realization is required for payment of debts, funeral and testamentary expenses, and legacies), even though some of the securities may be of a risky nature, as where, owing to agricultural depression, they apparently become insufficient to satisfy the mortgage debts:—

Nor is there any rule that trustees retaining a security authorized by their trust are liable to make good a loss sustained through the fall in value of the security, provided that in so doing they have acted honestly and prudently in the belief that they have taken the best course for all parties interested in the trust estate.

A testator gave his residuary estate to trustees upon trust to invest "in such stocks, funds, and securities as they should think fit." The trustees invested a portion of the trust estate in 3000*l.* debentures, constituting a floating security on the undertaking and assets of a limited co. One of the trustees received a commission or bribe of 300*l.* for making this investment. The other trustee, since deceased, who was tenant for life of two-thirds of the residue, made the investment in the bona fide belief that it was a good one, and with the desire of increasing his income. In an action by beneficiaries seeking to make the surviving trustee and the estate of the deceased trustee jointly and severally liable to make good any loss to the trust estate occasioned by the investment:—

Held, that the words "shall think fit" must be read as meaning "shall honestly think fit"; that in the absence of evidence that the deceased trustee did not act honestly in making the investment his estate could not be made liable; but that the other trustee, having received a bribe, could not have honestly thought fit to make the investment, and was therefore liable to make good the loss:—

Held further, that, in addition to making good the loss, the surviving trustee was liable to refund the 300*l.* as being money received by him, at the time when the investment was made, on behalf of the trust estate, and that his position was not altered by the fact that he was subsequently held liable to make good the loss occasioned by the investment. *In re SMITH. A person interested in an estate is not entitled as of right to the appointment of a judicial trustee under the Judicial Trustees Act, 1896, but the appointment is, under s. 1, sub-s. 1, a matter entirely within the discretion of the Court.

Thus where the reversioner under a will applied under the Act for the appointment of a judicial trustee to act either alone or jointly with the testator's widow, who was sole executrix and also tenant for life (there being no trustee appointed by the will), the Court refused the application, as it was opposed to her wish and to the testator's manifest intention, which was that she should have the sole control of his estate, there being, moreover, no ground of complaint against her; nor was the fact that the applicant offered that the remuneration of the judicial trustee, when appointed, should come out of capital and not out of income held to justify the application.

Under s. 1, sub-s. 2, of the Act the administration of the property of a deceased person is a "trust" and the executor is a "trustee": so that, under sub-s. 1, the Court can, in a proper case, remove the executor and appoint a judicial trustee in his place, to whom, under sub-s. 4, it can give directions as to the administration of the trust. In re RATOLIFFE

Upon an application for the appointment of a judicial trustee in place of a retiring judicial trustee, if the Court is not satisfied of the fitness of the person nominated by the applicant, there is jurisdiction to appoint a person suggested by the retiring trustee as his successor, and the Court is not in such a case bound by sub-s. 3 of s. 1 of the Judicial Trustees Act, 1896, to appoint only an official trustee. 74. — Practice—Pleading—Judicial Trustees Act, 1896 (59 & 60 Vict. c. 35), s. 3.

In this case the C. A., reversing a decision of the Vice-Chancellor of the County Palatine of Lancaster, held that the defts., who were trustees against whom the plt. sought relief for alleged breaches of trust, had, upon the evidence, not been guilty of any breach of trust, but that, if they had been, they had "acted honestly and reasonably and ought fairly to be excused for the breach of trust," within s. 3 of the Judicial Trustees Act, 1896, and were, therefore, entitled to be relieved from liability.

Lindley M.R. and Romer L.J. were of opinion that trustees seeking the relief of the Act were not bound specially to plead it, for, the Act being a general one, there was no reason why, in a proper case, a trustee should not avail himself of its provisions when the action came on for trial.

Sir F. H. Jeune P. also held, though with some hesitation, that it was not necessary for trustees to plead the Act specially. He thought it better that they should do so in order that the parties might come prepared with evidence at the trial. SINGLEHURST v. TAPSCOTT STEAMSHIP CO. — — — C. A. [1899] W. N. 133

the judicial trustee of the will of the testator to act jointly with the existing trustee. All the beneficiaries other than the applicant were opposed to the appointment of a judicial trustee, and wished that no change should be made in the appointment of trustee. The registrar made an order appointing his chief clerk judicial trustee jointly with the existing trustee. This order had not been drawn up. The existing trustee appealed to the judge. There was no charge against the character of the trustee, and he made no objection to another private trustee being associated with him:—

Held, that the union of a judicial trustee and a private or gratuitous trustee is not desirable, and, having regard to the opposition of the majority of the beneficiaries to the appointment of a judicial trustee and the cost to which the estate would be put by his appointment, the Court would not sanction it. The Court was always averse to a sole trustee, and if the summons had been referred to it by the registrar an additional private trustee might have been appointed. As no order had been drawn up, the summons could still be referred to the judge as an original matter. The better course would be for it to stand over, and the parties to attend before the registrar, and ask him to refer it to the judge. In re MARTIN — Kekewich J. [1900] W. N. 129

Trustees and executors instead of selling residuary personally as directed by their testator, who died in 1872, allowed his widow and children to occupy the testator's farm, and carried such farm on for the benefit of the family until 1882, when X., one of the testator's sons, attained twenty-one, and certain portions of the property became divisible among him and his brothers. In 1890 X. and one of his brothers sued T., the surviving exor. and trustee, for not sooner selling the residuary personally, and for carrying on the farm with the testator's assets:—

Held, that the action was brought not to recover a legacy to which 37 & 38 Vict. c. 57, s. 8, could be pleaded, but against a trustee to recover money in respect of a breach of trust, and was “one to which no existing statute of limitations applied” when the Trustee Act, 1888, was passed, and that more than six years having elapsed, the action failed under s. 8 of that Act. In re SWAIN. 104. — Deceased mortgagee—Uncertainty as to personal representative—Disputed will—Mortgage debt paid—Trustee Act, 1893 (56 & 57 Vict. c. 53), s. 29 (e).

A mortgagee of freehold land died, having made a will by which he appointed executors. The validity of the will was disputed, and an action to establish the will had been commenced in the P. Div. but had not yet been tried. The mortgage debt had been paid:—

Held, that it was, within the meaning of s. 29 (e) of the Trustee Act, 1893, uncertain who was the personal representative of the deceased mortgagee, and that the Court had jurisdiction to make an order vesting the mortgaged land in the mortgagor on being satisfied that the mortgage debt was paid. In re COOK'S MORTGAGE

The order in such a case should not (as in Seton on Judgments, 5th ed. vol. ii. p. 1067, Form No. 21) contain a reference to the mode of conveyance under the Fines and Recoveries Act, but should simply vest the land for such estate as the infant, if of full age, could convey. *In re MONTAGU. A petition was presented under the Trustee Act, 1893, by all the beneficiaries under a settlement for the appointment of a new trustee in substitution for an existing trustee who had become incapable of acting, and for a vesting order. The medical evidence was to the effect that the trustee was suffering from heart disease, old age (eighty), and consequent impairment of mental faculties, and that it would endanger his life to mention any matter of business to him.

Held, (1.) following In re Green, (1875) L. R. 10 Ch. 272, that service on the trustee might be dispensed with; (2.) following In re Barber, (1888) 39 Ch. D. 187, and distinguishing In re Martin, (1886) 34 Ch. the said university, with the consent of the University Court of St. Andrews, and also of the said college, with the object, inter alia, of establishing a fully equipped conjoint University School of Medicine. . . .” By s. 15, sub-s. 3, “The University Court, or any college which under this Act shall have been affiliated to the university, may respectively at any time thereafter resolve that such college shall cease to be affiliated to such university. . . .” By s. 21, “After the expiration of the powers of the commrs., the University Court of each university shall have power to make such ordinances as they think fit with the approval of Her Majesty in Council. . . .” (2.) with respect to “Altering or revoking any of the ordinances affecting such university which have been or may be framed and passed under the Universities (Scotland) Act, 1858, or this Act, and making new ordinances.”

An agreement purporting to be the consent required by s. 16 of the Act of 1889 contained, inter alia, a stipulation that the said union should, as regards duration, be permanent, and dissoluble only by Act of Parliament:—

Held, that the stipulation was not ultra vires, for ss. 15 and 21 give no power to revoke an affiliation of the nature of an incorporation which had the effect of merging the college into the university with a joint object:

Held, also, differing from the decision of the Second Division of the Court of Session, (1896) 23 R. 559, that that Court had jurisdiction to decide the legal question notwithstanding the fact that the consent sought to be set aside was before the Universities Committee of the Privy Council in respect to a pending ordinance. Held, that a power given to the commrs. to do an act affecting both public and private interests by another section which is silent as to the sanction of Parl. does not give an absolute power, unless the section plainly states that the exercise of the power shall not be subject to review.

The justices who, upon information that a child under fourteen has not been successfully vaccinated and that notice to procure its being vaccinated has been disregarded, signs a summons under s. 31 of the Vaccination Act, 1867, to the parent to appear with the child before him, need not be one of the justices hearing the summons, nor need he sign the order made at the hearing. A person was convicted of being a rogue and vagabond, for that she did unlawfully pretend to tell fortunes. The information alleged that the deft. did pretend or profess to tell fortunes. The justices were satisfied on the evidence that the deft. had unlawfully pretended to tell fortunes to deceive and impose upon certain of Her Majesty's subjects.

On the argument of an order nisi for a certiorari to remove and quash the conviction:—

3. — Agreement by vendor to pay commission to purchaser's agent—Non-disclosure of agreement by vendor—Right of purchaser to recover commission from vendor.

The plt., who was the owner of a mine, agreed with a person who was in fact, though the plt. did not then know it, a director of and agent for the defts., a co., that the director should have an option of finding a purchaser for the property, and should, if successful, be paid as commission 10 per cent. of the price obtained. The director arranged a sale to the defts., but before the contract was entered into, or the commission had become payable, the plt. became aware of the director's position with regard to the defts.:—

Held, that the plt. having completed the contract without disclosing to the defts., as purchasers, the agreement to pay commission to their agent, any part of the agreed commission

Per Collins L.J.: The money could be recovered from the plt. as money had and received to the defts.' use.

By a second agreement between the plt. and the director, made before the commission became due, an immediate payment of a sum less than that originally agreed on was substituted. The defts. subsequently discovered the existence of the two agreements as to commission, and the payment to the director, and they demanded of and received from him, in satisfaction of all claims against him, the amount he had received from the plaintiff:—

Held, that the defts. were not bound by the agreement as to the reduction of the amount of commission, and that, notwithstanding that agreement and their receipt from the director of the reduced amount of the commission, they were entitled to recover the balance from the plt. GRANT v. Conditions of Sale.

4. — Annulling sale, Vendor's power of—Title—Conveyance—Requisitions—Outstanding estate, Getting in—Contract—Rescission—Defective title—No title.

A condition of sale empowering the vendor to annul the sale if the purchaser makes any objection or requisition "as to the title, particulars, conditions, or any other matter or thing relating or incidental to the sale," which the vendor is unable or unwilling to comply with, extends to a matter of conveyance as well as of title.

Thus, where a vendor-mortgagee of leaseholds who, having contracted to sell the entire term, turned out, on the investigation of the title by the purchaser, to hold by a sub-demise the bare legal estate in which was outstanding, and expressed himself as unable or unwilling to comply with a requisition by the purchaser that the person having the legal estate should join in the conveyance; it was held by the C. A. that the vendor was entitled, under a condition in the above form, to annul the sale.

Decision of Kekewich J. reversed.

The ordinary condition of sale giving the vendor a power of rescission applies only where he has some title, not where he has none.

Bowman v. Hyland, (1878) 8 Ch. D. 588, explained. In re DEIGHTON and HARRIS'S CONTRACT C. A. [1898] 1 Ch. 458

5. — Assumption of fact on which the root of the title depends—Misleading conditions of sale.

A condition requiring the purchaser to assume a certain fact, e.g., the death of A., intestate and without heirs, is not misleading if the vendor really believes the fact, although the fact to be assumed is absolutely necessary to the vendor's title. Nor is it necessary to explain in the condition the particular defect which the condition is intended to cover. In re SANDBACH AND EDMONDSON'S CONTRACT C. A. [1891] 1 Ch. 99

See also In re Scott and Alvarez's Contract. C. A. [1895] 2 Ch. 603. No. 8, below.

6. — Compensation conditions—Clause excluding compensation—Misedescription—Specific performance—Possessory title.

The defts. sold by auction to the plt. a freehold property described in the particulars of sale as containing 5A. 0R. 26P., and as bordering on a lake on S. Common, the sale being subject to conditions of sale, one of which was as follows: "The property is believed and shall be taken to be correctly described in the particulars as to quantity and otherwise . . . and if any error, misstatement, or omission in the particulars be discovered, the same shall not annul the sale, nor shall any compensation be allowed by the vendors to the purchaser in respect thereof."

The only part of the property to which a good title was shewn contained 4A. 3R. Another part of the property offered for sale bordered on the lake, and as to this the only title offered was what purported to be a title by possession for less than forty years.

The plt. claimed rescission of the contract and a return of the deposit paid by him, and the defts. counter-claimed for specific performance:—

Held, that even if the defts. had established a possessory title to the border land for twelve years, that would not have been sufficient, as the contract, so far as it related to that land, was an open one, in which case a forty years' title by possession was required; that the defts. were not entitled to specific performance in respect of the part of the property to which a good title had been shewn; and that the plt. was entitled to rescission of the contract and the return of his deposit.

The authorities as to compensation conditions reviewed. JACOBS v. REVELL

A purchaser bought property under a strict condition of sale that he should not make any objection as to the intermediate title between a certain lease and the assignment of it, but should assume that the assignment vested a good title in the assignees. It was afterwards discovered by the purchaser that there was a vital defect in the intermediate title, and that the assignees had no title to the property:—

Held, (1.) (reversing the decision of Kekewich J., [1895] 1 Ch. 596) that the purchaser was bound at law by the condition, and therefore could not recover his deposit; but (2.), affirming the

The conditions of sale of freehold property appointed a time and place for completion, and provided (condition 10) that—

"On payment by the purchaser of the balance of his purchase-money at the time and place aforesaid, he shall be entitled to a proper assurance of the property purchased by him from the vendor and all other necessary parties (if any), such assurance and every other instrument required for getting in or releasing any outstanding estate, right, or interest, or for completing or perfecting the vendor's title, or for any other purpose, to be prepared by and at the expense of the purchaser."

It appeared on the examination of the title that the property was subject to a mortgage—a fact which was not disclosed by the particulars or conditions. The mortgagees joined in the conveyance, the vendor paying their costs without prejudice to the question how they should be borne as between vendor and purchaser.

Farwell J.: In re Willett and Argenti, [1889] W. N. 66; 60 L. T. 735, the contract provided that the vendor and all other necessary parties (if any) should make and execute to the purchaser a proper assurance of the premises, such assurance and every other assurance, act, and thing required by the purchaser for perfecting or completing the vendor's title or otherwise to be prepared, obtained, made and done by and at the expense of the purchaser. That provision was held to throw the expense of procuring the concurrence of the mortgagees on the purchaser.

The present condition merely requires the assurance or other instrument to be prepared by and at the expense of the purchaser. The expense of procuring the concurrence of the mortgagees is not provided for, and, according to the ordinary rule as stated in Dart on Vendors and Purchasers, 6th ed. pp. 176, 798, it falls on the vendor. In re SANDER and WALFORD'S CONTRACT Farwell J. 10. — "Holding title"—Purchaser's right to rescind and recover deposit.

A mortgagee selling under a power of sale furnished an abstract of title which shewed a defect in the mortgagor's title. After the time limited by the conditions of sale the purchaser refused to complete the sale, and claimed the return of the deposit. The mortgagee then shewed he was at the time of the mortgage ignorant of the defect, and had a good holding title:—

Held, by Romer J., that, as he had not disclosed his holding title until the plt. was in a position to rescind and claim the return of the deposit, he was too late. But, held by C. A., that there was no defect in the title, and so the purchaser could not rescind. Decision of Romer J., [1891] W. N. 4, reversed. SAXBY v. THOMAS

By conditions of sale of land within the metropolis the date fixed for completion was May 8, all outgoing up to that day being cleared by the vendor. Before May 8 a magistrate made an order to take down dangerous structures on the land. This order was not complied with, and after May 8 the county council took down the structures, and demanded and received from the purchaser the expenses of so doing:—

Held, that, the liability having been incurred before May 8, the expenses were "outgoings," within the meaning of the conditions, which the purchaser was entitled to recover from the vendor.

Conditions of sale of leasehold houses provided that the purchase should be completed on Aug. 11, 1898, and that "a purchaser paying his purchase-money is, as from that day, to be let into possession or receipt of rents and profits, and up to that date all rents, rates, taxes, and outgoing are (if necessary) to be apportioned, and each apportioned rent shall be paid on completion by each purchaser to the vendor. If, from any cause whatever, other than wilful default on the part of the vendor, the completion of the purchase is delayed beyond the before-mentioned day, the remainder of the purchase-money is to bear interest at the rate of 6l. per cent. per annum from that day to the day of actual payment thereof, or, at the option of the vendor, he may receive the rents and profits up to the day of the actual completion of the purchase. The property shall, as from the day of sale, be at the sole risk of the purchaser, and the vendor shall not incur any liability by reason of its then or subsequently becoming or remaining untenanted, uninsured, or deteriorated." Through default of the plt., who had purchased one of the lots, his purchase was not completed on Aug. 11, although the title had then been accepted, and the deft., the vendor, remained in possession. In Nov., 1898, notices were served on the deft. as "owner" by the vestry under the Public Health (London) Act, 1891 (51 & 55 Vict. c. 76), to abate nuisances on the property, and the cost of making the abatement, about 24*l.*, was paid by the deft. In Feb., 1899, the plt. was ready to complete, and offered to pay interest at 6 per cent. on the balance of the purchase-money from Aug. 11 on receiving the rents and profits from that date, and in that case to repay the 24*l.*, but he insisted that if the deft. retained the rents and profits he ought to bear the cost of the abatement:—

Held, that, the 24*l.* being an outgoing (Tubbs v. Wynne, [1897] 1 Q. B. 74) which from the time when a good title was shewn must clearly be borne by the purchaser in the absence of express stipulation, the plt. would as from Aug. 11 have been entitled to the rents and profits and liable to pay the 24*l.*, if the conditions had not given the vendor the option to keep the rents and profits in lieu of interest, but that there was nothing to relieve the plaintiff from the obligation to pay the outgoing, and that he could only obtain specific performance on paying the 24*l.* and the balance of his purchase-money. *BARSH v. In Aug., 1895, plt. offered deft. H. 1500*l.* for a freehold house called The Wray. The offer was refused; but on Nov. 7, 1895, deft. in writing told plt. that he would take 2000*l.* On the following day plt. replied in writing: "I have decided to accept Mr. H.'s offer, and will give the 2000*l.* he asks for the freehold of the Wray property. I should like to know from what time Mr. H. wishes the purchase to date":—

Held, that the last sentence did not impose a fresh term, but was merely a courteous way of asking the vendor when he desired completion of the sale to take place; that there was therefore an unconditional acceptance of the deft.'s offer, and a binding contract of sale. *SIMPSON v. adverse claims which are not idle and frivolous. A. sold a warehouse to B., who signed the contract without notice that there was a claim to the sole ownership of one wall thereof. A. claimed a declaration that B. was not entitled to insist on a release of the adverse claim:—

Held, that as A. had not made out that the claim was clearly unfounded, he ought to have given notice of it, and the purchaser was entitled to insist on the release. In re HARRIS AND RAWLINGS' CONTRACT Chitty J. [1894] W. N. 19 — Agent—Vendor's name—Reference to formal contract.

Held, that "machinery" included everything which by its action produces or assists in production, and "plant" that without which production could not go on; it was dead stock, it did not itself act, but was that by means of which such action took place, as brewers' pipes, vats, and the like, and did not include (1) a chimney-shaft disconnected from the boiler-house; (2) a partition which prevented the dust from the malt mills getting into the brewing vessels; (3) staging shaped to the brewing vessels which gave access to them. In re NUTLEY AND FINN

The plt. agreed to purchase from the deft. the lease of a public-house on which there was a subsisting mortgage, on condition that the consent of the mortgagee should be obtained to the same amount of money remaining on mortgage as was then due. A date was fixed for completion and a deposit paid, which was to be forfeited if the sale went off through the default of the plt. At an interview between the plt., the deft., and the mortgagee, the latter would only agree to a lesser amount remaining on mortgage. The plt. thereupon treated the contract as at an end. Subsequently, and before the date fixed for completion, the deft. obtained the consent of the mortgagee to the full amount of the mortgage debt remaining on mortgage, but the plt. refused to proceed with the purchase. In an action to recover the deposit:—

Held, that, in the absence of circumstances which would justify the plt. in treating the refusal of the mortgagee as final, or of an agreement express or implied that it should be so treated, the deft. had until the date fixed for the completion of the contract in which to perform the condition by obtaining the consent of the mortgagee; that the contract had therefore gone off through the default of the plt.; and that he could not recover the deposit. *SMITH v. The rule laid down by the C. A. in Reeve v. Berridge, (1888) 20 Q. B. D. 523, that it is prima facie the duty of a vendor to disclose all that is necessary to protect himself, and not the duty of a purchaser to demand inspection of the vendor's title-deed before entering into a contract, is not confined to sales by private contract, but is equally applicable to sales by auction. Where, therefore, on a sale of leaseholds by auction the particulars and conditions of sale contained no statement as to the nature of the covenants in the lease (which were in fact onerous), nor any notice that the lease might be inspected at the office of the vendor's solicitors or elsewhere:—

Held, that the purchaser was not affected with constructive notice of the covenants; that he had not had a fair opportunity of inspecting the lease, and was therefore not bound to complete the contract. In re WHITE AND SMITH'S CONTRACT

A vendor agreed with a purchaser for the sale of a leasehold hotel, subject to the consent of the lessor being obtained to the assignment of the lease, and the purchaser paid a deposit on his purchase-money. The vendor died without having completed his contract, and the purchaser then brought an action against his legal personal representative for specific performance. The deft., being desirous of freeing the vendor's estate from the action, induced the lessor to refuse his consent to the assignment, which the lessor accordingly did, and the purchaser thus lost his bargain. Thereupon the purchaser amended his action by claiming damages and return of the deposit:—

Held, that the plt. was entitled, not only to the return of his deposit, with interest and costs of investigating title, but also to the damages he had sustained by the loss of his bargain, through the omission of the deft. to obtain the lessor's consent.

Held, that the words "if any" could not be

The parcels being deficient, the purchasers sued on the covenant. The vendor alleged mutual mistake, and alternatively unilateral mistake on his own part, and counter-claimed for rectification of the conveyance:—

Held, that, the written contract and conveyance being unambiguous, parol evidence of mistake was inadmissible after completion either as a defence to the action, to which it afforded no answer: *Cato v. A contract for the sale and purchase of a licensed public-house, not containing any special undertaking by the vendor that the licence shall be renewed at the Brewster Sessions, or that he will obtain from the magistrates a transfer of the licence to the purchaser's nominee at the next special sessions, or interim authority for that nominee to use the licence between the date fixed for completion and the next special sessions, does not bind the vendor to free the purchaser from risks in respect of any of the above-mentioned matters. The vendor is bound only to have a valid and effectual licence existing at the date fixed for completion which he can indorse in the usual way, and upon or in respect of which the purchaser can apply at once for interim protection under s. 1 of 5 & 6 Vict. c. 44, at the next special sessions.

The statement in Dart's Vendors and Purchasers, 6th ed. vol. i. p. 483, that “if the vendor cannot, by the day appointed for the completion of the purchase, procure a transfer of the licence under the Licensing Act, the purchaser may repudiate the contract,” is too wide.

The deft. in Aug., 1892, agreed to sell some land to the plt. for 150*l.*, of which 40*l.* was paid at the time, and the balance was to be paid by twelve equal quarterly instalments of 9*l.* 3*s.* 4*d.* each. In case of default for thirty days in the payment of any instalment, the whole of the unpaid instalments were to become immediately due and payable, and, in the event of default for thirty days in payment, the vendor was to be at liberty to resell the land, and to retain out of the proceeds of sale the unpaid instalments with interest, and was to pay the balance to the purchaser.

The purchaser went into possession under the contract, and retained possession for a considerable time, and, though generally in arrear with the instalments, he had by Aug., 1895, paid them all except the last. The last instalment became due on Sept. 29, 1895, but it was never paid. Correspondence took place, in which the vendor called on the purchaser to pay, but he never gave him notice that, if payment was not made within a specified time, he should treat the contract as abandoned. In Oct., 1896, the purchaser went away, and the vendor was unable to find him. The vendor resumed possession of the land and endeavoured to sell it, but without success, and in March, 1898, he agreed to let it for three years to a tenant, who took possession. In June, 1898, the purchaser reappeared, and wrote to the vendor that he was prepared to pay the final instalment. In July, 1898, the purchaser commenced an action against the vendor, claiming specific performance of the agreement of Aug., 1892, and damages in lieu of or in addition to specific performance:—

Held, that the plt.'s conduct did not amount to a repudiation of his contract, and that the vendor was not justified in treating the contract

In 1896 the deft., the owner of building land, sold and conveyed part of it, as “beneficial owner,” without any express general words, to the plt. The conveyance included a house on the land conveyed which had been built by the deft. with windows overlooking the land retained by him and referred to in the conveyance and the plan thereon as “building land,” but the conveyance contained no express reservation to the deft. of any right to build on that land. The defendant subsequently built on that land a house so close to the plt.’s as to interfere with the access of light to his windows:—

Held, that by s. 6, sub-s. 2, of the Conveyancing Act, 1881, the conveyance included all lights enjoyed with the house, and that the reference in the conveyance and plan to the adjoining land as “building land” was insufficient to shew a “contrary intention” within sub-s. 4; and that, on the principle that a grantor cannot derogate from his own grant, the plt. had prima facie an unrestricted right to light as against the deft., and the burden of setting limits to that right lay on the deft. And on proof by the deft. that this prima facie right was restricted by the plt.’s own admission that he would have been satisfied if the deft.’s house had been set back to a certain distance, an inquiry was directed what damages the plt. had sustained by reason of the obstruction of light to his windows occasioned by the deft.’s house not being so set back.

Although upon a summons under s. 9 of the Vendor and Purchaser Act, 1874, evidence is adduced tending to throw a doubt upon the existence or validity of the contract itself, that does not preclude the Court from deciding on the summons a specific question arising out of or connected with the contract as it stands, such as a question with regard to the vendor's right to limit, in the conveyance, the operation of the general words in s. 6, sub-s. 2, of the Conveyancing Act, 1881. A general declaration as to title ought rarely to be made on a vendor and purchaser summons, that procedure being only intended for the decision of isolated points arising out of or connected with the contract.

Criticism of the existing practice in this respect.

An isolated point on the form of the conveyance may be dealt with on a vendor and purchaser summons, although the respondent may have a right to obtain rescission of the contract on the ground of mistake. Such a right to obtain rescission does not give rise to "a question affecting the existence or validity of the contract" within the meaning of the Vendor and Purchaser Act, 1874, s. 9.

A purchaser is entitled to a conveyance subject only to the restrictive covenants mentioned in the contract, although he has notice of others.

The Court found that if the cheque had been accepted the plt. would have provided funds to meet it.

Held, that a vendor who offered property for sale by auction, on the terms of printed conditions, could be made liable in damages to a person who accepted the offer and complied with the conditions if those conditions were violated by the vendor, and that the Statute of Frauds would be no defence: see *Warlow v. A clause in a contract for the sale of lands provided that, if from any cause whatever other than the "default of the vendor," the purchase should not be completed by the day fixed, the purchaser should pay interest until completion. Upon investigation of the title a defect in it was discovered by the vigilance of the purchaser's advisers, which was not known to or suspected by the vendor when he entered into the contract, and the time occupied in remedying the defect delayed the completion of the purchase for nearly three months after the day fixed. The purchaser did not have, and keep, his money ready at the proper time, making no interest of it:—

Held, affirming the decision of Romer J., [1898] 1 Ch. 433, that, there being no want of reasonable care on the part of the vendor and no abstinence from doing anything that he ought to have done, the delay was not attributable to his "default," and that the purchaser must pay interest until completion.

Where the conditions of sale provided that "if from any cause whatsoever other than the wilful default of the vendor," purchase-money was not paid on a certain date, the purchaser was to pay interest, and stated that the property was purchased under a local Act of 1824, but, as a matter of fact, a material portion of the property was acquired under a later Act, held by Chitty J. that the vendor's omission in not discovering that the whole was included in the 1824 Act was not "wilful default" within the condition:—

Held, by C. A., that the delay was really occasioned by voluntary delay of the purchaser in sending in requisitions and in examining the deposited plan referred to in the Act of 1824, and to his inability to find the purchase-money, and that he was liable to interest from the fixed date:—

An order in Lunacy under s. 116 of the Lunacy Act, 1890, authorizing a person therein specified in the name and on the behalf of the lunatic to receive and give a discharge for all sums of money due to him, does not affect rights enforceable against the lunatic's property at law or in equity (such as a vendor's lien for unpaid

In 1873 the vicar of a parish, with the consent of the patron of the living and the approval of the Eccles. Commrs., contracted, under the powers of the Ecclesiastical Leasing Acts, 1842 and 1858, to sell the glebe land of the vicarage for 24,963*l.* to the trustee of a will by which estates were devised in strict settlement. The then tenant for life and the Commrs. were parties to the contract. Under the will the trustee held the testator's personal estate upon trust for investment in the purchase of land to be settled to the same uses as the settled estates. The title was accepted, and the tenant for life, with the approval of the trustee, entered into possession of the glebe land and paid the vicar interest on the purchase-money, and this payment was continued by successive tenants for life to the vicar and his successor until 1896, the purchase-money not having been paid. At the date of the contract the trustee had no trust funds under his control available for the payment of the purchase-money, the whole or nearly the whole of the testator's personal estate remaining after investments in land having been advanced upon the security of policies of insurance upon the life of the third tenant for life of the estates, who did not die till many years afterwards. In 1896, the purchase-money not having been paid, the Commrs. brought an action, against the then tenant for life, the personal representatives of the trustee who had entered into the contract, and the then trustees of the settled estates, for the specific performance of the contract, or for an account and a declaration that the plts. were entitled to a vendor's lien on the land sold and the enforcement of the lien. The then vicar was made a deft., and the then tenant in tail was afterwards added as a deft. The glebe land had become of much less value than the price agreed to be given for it. The estate of the trustee who had entered into the contract had been distributed after proper statutory advertisements. The estates had been disentailed and resettled, and the money secured by the policies had been also disentailed, and had been distributed by the trustees of the resettlement among the persons entitled thereto:—

Held, that, the contract for the purchase of the glebe land having been made at a time when the trustee had no funds under his control available for the payment of the price, and it being uncertain what the value of the land might be at the time when he would be in a position to pay for it, the contract was a speculative one not authorized by the trust for investment in land; that consequently the trustee had no right to an indemnity out of the settled estates, and that the plts. had therefore no right by subrogation; that the plts. had no remedy against the owners of the settled estates; and that their only remedy was by a lien for the unpaid purchase-money upon the land sold.

In 1873 a vicar, with the approval of the Eccles. Commrs. and with the consent of the patron of his living, agreed to sell the glebe lands of the vicarage under the powers of the Ecclesiastical Leasing Acts, 1842 and 1858, for 24,963*l.* to the trustee of a settled estate who had power to invest trust funds in the purchase of land.

The contract was entered into with the consent of the then tenant for life of the settled estate, and the Eccles. Commrs. were parties to and executed it.

The title was accepted, and the then tenant for life entered into possession, and paid the vicar interest on the purchase-money. The vicar died, the estate devolved, and payment of the interest (which was more than an investment of the purchase-money would have produced) was continued by the tenant for life for the time being to the vicar for the time being until 1896, when, the purchase-money being still unpaid, the Eccles. Commrs. brought an action against the present vicar, the tenant for life, and the legal personal representatives of the trustee, for specific performance of the contract and damages, or an account and a declaration that they were entitled to a lien on the lands and to enforcement thereof:—

Held, that it was the duty of the plts. to see that the powers given by the Ecclesiastical Leasing Acts were properly applied, and that they had good ground of action. Action remitted for trial.

The specified part of the purchase-money having been paid, the purchaser was let into possession, but he failed to pay the cost of the fence and did not pay the rent and taxes, so that the vendor had to pay them in order to prevent the forfeiture of the lease. The vendor commenced an action for rescission of the agreement on the ground that he had been induced to enter into it by misrepresentation, and moved in the action for an order on the deft. to deliver up possession of the land in default of his making the payments due under the agreement :—

The condition was silent as to intermediate litigation. The purchaser insisted on an objection that the particulars misrepresented that the property was freehold, and that the title shewn was only to a term under an underlease; and on this ground he commenced an action on Nov. 30, 1896, for rescission of the contract, return of his deposit, and payment of the expenses of investigating the title.

Before further proceedings were taken the vendor, on Dec. 4, 1896, gave the purchaser notice of the rescission of the contract, and offered to repay the deposit. On the evidence it was held that the misrepresentation was not made out:—

Held, that the notice was in time, and that the purchaser was only entitled to a return of his deposit without interest, and to the costs of the action up to the time of the receipt of the notice to rescind, and that he must pay the deft.'s costs as from that date. ISAACS v. TOWELL

The omission by a vendor, without fraudulent intent, to disclose, before sale, to the purchaser of town leasehold property the fact that he, the vendor, had been served by the local authority with the usual notices under the Public Health Act, 1875, to pave, &c., the street fronting the premises, is not such an "omission in the particulars" tending to depreciate the value of the property as to entitle the purchaser, if he completes his purchase, to compensation under the usual general condition, where the works are not executed by the local authority, and the expenses thereof do not therefore become a charge on the premises, until after the completion of the purchase.

But whether such an omission on the part of the vendor, even though without fraudulent intent, would have afforded the purchaser sufficient

A condition of sale indemnifying the vendor against expenses "in complying with any requirement enforceable against him and made after the sale by the local authority in respect of paving &c., the streets" is not such an implied statement that no requirement has been made by the local authority before the sale as to entitle the purchaser to relief on the ground of deception on discovering that notices under the Public Health Act, 1875, had been served on the vendor before the sale. In re LEYLAND AND TAYLOR'S CONTRACT C. The plt. entered into a contract for the purchase from the deft. of a house on this estate for the purpose of a boys' school, on the representation of the deft.'s agent that there was nothing in this deed which would prevent him from carrying on such a school on this property. On an action for rescission of the contract:—

Held, that the carrying on of the plt.'s school in an ordinary and reasonable way would be within the wording of the restrictive covenant, which could not be limited to trades or businesses ejusdem generis with those specifically mentioned; and that the plt., having been induced by a misrepresentation of fact made by the deft.'s agent to enter into this contract, was entitled in equity to rescission, even though the representation had not been made fraudulently. *WAUTON v. —Memorandum of agreement—“Subject to approval of form of agreement”—Rescission—Statute of Frauds (29 Car. 2, c. 3)—Form of order—Interest—“Wilful default.”

By “heads of agreement” between a vendor and purchaser it was agreed that the purchaser should purchase “36 acres of land,” the boundaries of which were thereby accurately defined on three sides but not on the fourth, for 3600*l.*, “subject to approval of conditions and form of agreement by purchaser’s solicitor.” The vendor afterwards discovered that the land which he supposed formed the subject-matter of the contract measured out at 42 acres, and required the purchaser to take the whole 42 acres at 4200*l.*, being 100*l.* per acre. The purchaser, however, insisted that the contract should stand for the sale of 36 acres only, and brought an action for specific performance on that footing:—

Held, that the purchaser was entitled to specific performance on three grounds: (1.) that the fourth boundary could be readily fixed so as to include 36 acres; (2.) that the “heads of agreement” constituted a complete contract, and that the clause “subject to approval, &c.,” was not a condition precedent to a complete contract; and (3.) that there was no such mistake as entitled the vendor to rescission.

FORM OF ORDER.—The contract contained a stipulation that if the purchase was not completed by the day named, the purchase-money should bear interest at 4 per cent. from that day until actual completion:—

Held, that the vendor’s repudiation of the contract by resisting the purchaser’s claim to specific performance did not constitute such “wilful default” as to disentitle him to interest. NORTH v. PERCIVAL Kekewich J. [1898] 2 Ch. 128

Neither the vendors nor the purchaser knew previously that the house was being improperly used. The agreement of tenancy contained a covenant by the tenant not to use the house as a disorderly house, and a proviso for re-entry in case of breach of covenant:—

Held, (1.) (reversing Cozens-Hardy J., [1899] W. N. 36 (12); [1899] 1 Ch. 879) that specific performance ought not to be granted, inasmuch as the purchaser, unless he took steps to prevent the improper use of the property by the tenant, would become liable as lessor to criminal proceedings under the Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1885, by reason of the state of the property at the time of the sale; (2.) "The usual public-house contract to be entered into within the next four days. The completion to be on or before one month from this date." Before any "usual public-house contract" was entered into, the deft., treating the matter as still in negotiation, withdrew from the proposed purchase, the cheque given for 100*l.* in part payment being stopped.

It appeared from the evidence that the usual public-house contract would contain a covenant by the vendor not to carry on a similar business within a distance varying from one-third of a mile to a mile in different cases, a sum being fixed as liquidated damages for breach of such covenant. Neither the distance nor the amount of liquidated damages had been settled in the present case:—

Held, that the Court would have no difficulty in determining on proper evidence what would be the usual and reasonable protected distance, and liquidated damages in the particular case:—

In 1898 a contract was entered into on behalf of the present trustees of Hollis' Hospital for the sale of certain freehold property belonging to the hospital.

The property contracted to be sold formed part of certain property which had been conveyed by H. to trustees upon trusts for the hospital by deeds of lease and release dated May 17 and 18, 1726. The release contained a proviso that if at any time thereafter the premises thereby conveyed or any part thereof, or the rents, issues, and profits of the same or of any part thereof, should be employed or converted to or for any other uses, intents, or purposes than thereinafore mentioned, then and from thenceforth all and every the premises thereinbefore conveyed should revert to the right heirs of H. party thereto.

The title had been accepted and the draft conveyance approved when a letter was received by the purchaser's solicitors from A., one of the trustees of the hospital, intimating that as the heir-at-law of H. he had not concurred in the sale, and calling their attention to the clause in the release under which if the sale was carried out the property would revert to him.

A summons was thereupon taken out by the purchaser for a declaration that a good title to the hereditaments contracted to be sold had not been made:—

Held, that the condition was in terms and form a true common law condition, and was void as being obnoxious to the rule against perpetuities.

The dictum of Jessel M.R. in In re Macleay, (1875) L. R. 20 Eq. 186, and of North J. in Dunn v. Flood, (1883) 25 Ch. D. 629, affirmed by C. A. (1885) 23 Ch. D. 586, followed.

The remarks in Challis on the Law of Real Property, 2nd ed. pp. 174–177, upon the question whether the rule against perpetuities applies to common law conditions in defeasance of a freehold discussed at length and dissented from.

Held, further, that in view of the notice received from A. claiming as heir-at-law of H., and who declined to be bound by the decision, the title was not one which could be forced upon an unwilling purchaser.

The rule that after twenty years from the death of a testator the purchaser of real estate is put upon his inquiry as to the executor's right to sell, does not apply to the case of a sale of leaseholds. A contract for sale of leaseholds provided that the title should commence with a lease to T. dated 1852, and that the purchasers should not require an abstract of an earlier title. The abstract disclosed that the lease was granted to T. as executor of P. in consideration (inter alia) of a surrendered term. Nothing was shewn as to the date of P.'s death. The next abstracted deed was an assignment in 1878 by T. as beneficial owner to the vendor:—

Held, that in the absence of evidence to the contrary T. must be presumed to have acted in the discharge of his duty as executor, and that neither the lapse of time nor the fact that he did not execute the deed of 1878 as executor were sufficient to raise the presumption that he acted otherwise:—

On a sale of leaseholds the vendor abstracted and produced the deed creating the term, the deed (1844) of assignment to him and subsequent deeds, but not a deed of 1840 assigning the legal estate to trustees, which was recited in the deed of 1844:—

Held, that, as forty years' good title was shewn, the deed of 1840 need not be abstracted in chief. Although it is necessary to abstract and produce the deed creating a term, it is not necessary to abstract or produce deeds dealing with the term prior to the necessary commencement of the title, unless for some good reason arising from the special circumstances of the case. WILLIAMS v. Sect. 70, sub-s. 1 of the Conveyancing Act, 1881, which provides that "an order of the Court under any statutory or other jurisdiction shall not as against a purchaser be invalidated on the ground of (inter alia) want of jurisdiction," does not operate to give a good title to a purchaser at a sale under an order of the Court when the Court in making the order supposed that it was dealing with an interest belonging to a judgment debtor, though it in fact belonged to a person not a party to the proceedings and not bound by them.

Under such circumstances, notwithstanding the order of the Court and the provisions of s. 70, that person has a good title as against the purchaser.

Twelve years after the term had expired, the representative of the leaseholder, there being no other claimant, applied to have the reversion money paid out to him.

The Court refused the application, holding that the leaseholder was not in possession when the term expired and never had any inchoate possession of or title to the reversion. GEDYE v. COMMS. OF WORKS - - - C. A. [1891] 2 Ch. 630

Sub-s. 6, s. 3, of the Conveyancing and Law of Property Act, 1881, does not affect the ordinary right of a purchaser to have the title deeds handed over to him on completion, and the mere fact that obtaining the deeds for this purpose may cause the vendor trouble and expense is no answer to the purchaser's demand.

non-production of lost deeds, and the vendor in verification of the abstract produced, as secondary evidence, copies of the memorials of the several deeds in the Yorkshire Registry, and certain documents which purported to be copies of the completed drafts of the original deeds, but which were not proved to have been compared with them. The vendors also produced statutory declarations verifying a printed abstract of the missing deeds which shewed all the recitals, and contained the words "duly executed and attested" as to the principal deed. And they also offered statutory declarations by some of the parties to the deed that they had respectively executed them; but they were unable to prove the execution by one material party of the conveyance which was the root of title:—

Held, that the evidence adduced by the vendors was not such as a purchaser could be compelled to treat as satisfactory, that they had not shewn a good title within a reasonable time, and that the purchaser was accordingly entitled to be discharged from the contract and to have his deposit returned.

It could not claim exemption under s. 7 (e), which exempts trusts and all associations not carrying on trade for purposes of gain to be divided amongst the members; for besides granting assurances to persons not its members, it trafficked in reversions, while "trusts" on its true construction means associations acting in or for Victoria. ENGLAND v. The plts., a firm of stevedores, contracted to discharge a cargo from the deft.'s ship, the deft. agreeing to supply all necessary cranes, chains, and other gearing reasonably fit for that purpose. The deft. in breach of his agreement supplied a defective chain, which broke while being used, and in consequence one of the plts.' workmen was injured. The plts. might have discovered the defect in the chain by the exercise of reasonable care. The plts. settled an action by the workman by paying the workman 125*l.*, which sum they sought to recover from the deft. as damages for breach of his contract. It was not disputed that the settlement of the action brought by the workman was a proper one:—

Held, that the plts.' liability to pay compensation to their workman was the natural consequence of the deft.'s breach of contract, and such as might reasonably be supposed to have been within the contemplation of the parties when the contract was entered into; and therefore the damages claimed were not too remote.

2. — Landlord and tenant—Sub-demise for purpose of rubbish shoot—Alteration of nature of demised premises—Public Health Acts Amendment Act, 1890 (53 & 54 Vict. c. 59), s. 25.

By a lease dated Sept. 29, 1830, the plts.' predecessors in title granted to the deft. co. twelve acres of meadow land forming part of marshy land at West Ham, for ninety-nine years, at a certain rent, for the purpose of constructing a reservoir. The co. did not construct a reservoir but used the land for grazing purposes down to 1896, when they sub-demised it to B. for the rest of the term less the last three days thereof at an increased rent, for the purpose of its being used by him as a rubbish shoot. B. took possession and shot quantities of hard and soft rubbish of all kinds on the land, thereby raising its surface about ten feet. The plts. brought an action against the co. and B., alleging that the acts of B. constituted waste and had been done with the authority of the co., and claiming an injunction restraining the bringing or permitting to be brought upon the demised land any rubbish, earth, or material, or otherwise committing waste thereon, and damages. The only value of the lands at the end of the term would be for building factories, to obtain a proper foundation for which it would be necessary to dig down to the original level of the land:—

Held, applying the test as to what is waste laid down in Lord Darcy v. Askwith, (1616) Hob. 234, that there had been such an alteration of the thing demised—irrespective of the question whether the added material was offensive or inoffensive—as to constitute waste; that it was no answer that the expense of digging down to obtain a proper foundation would be more than compensated for by the increased rent which the reversioners would be able to obtain for the land in its heightened condition; that both defts. were liable in damages for the past acts of waste; and that they must be restrained from committing waste in the future.

After the passing of the restraining statutes of Elizabeth, the opening of mines in glebe lands, and the letting of the mines by the incumbent, even with the consent of the patron and ordinary, were waste and illegal until the passing of 5 & 6 Vict. c. 108, which enabled the mines to be leased with the consent of the Ecclesiastical Commrs. The Ecclesiastical Commrs. can maintain an action to restrain the working of mines in glebe lands otherwise than under a lease sanctioned by them. An incumbent cannot lawfully continue, or authorize a tenant, to work mines in glebe land which have been unlawfully opened. If he does so, it is waste. ECCELESTIASTICAL COMMRS. v. The local board sued the millowners in a county court, under s. 10 of the Rivers Pollution Prevention Act, 1876, and obtained an order to restrain the millowners from causing sewage to flow into the natural stream:—

2. — Liability — Drain connecting premises with district sewer—Default of local authority—Absence of notice—Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), ss. 15, 17, 21, 257.

Millowners constructed on their premises two water-closets, which they connected in 1883 by a drain with a sewer under the control of a local board, which had originally been an open watercourse, and discharged into a large natural stream. The millowners had not given any notice of intention to drain into the watercourse, nor received any express sanction to do so.

Proceedings were commenced against the millowners and the local board to make them keep the sewage out of the natural stream. The local board gave the millowners notice to disconnect the drain from the watercourse, on the ground that it had been connected without notice:—

Held, (1.) that in the absence of a by-law requiring notice none was necessary; (2.) that the millowners were entitled, under ss. 15, 17, 21 of the Public Health Act, 1875, to drain into the watercourse, and that it was the duty of the local board to see that their sewers did not convey sewage into any river. *AINLEY, SONS & Co. v. Sect. 2 of the Rivers Pollution Prevention Act, 1876, prohibits the putting, or causing or knowingly permitting to be put, or to fall into any stream, so as to pollute its waters, "any putrid solid matter," and by s. 20 of the Act "solid matter" shall not include particles of matter in suspension in water. By s. 17 the Act "shall not apply to or affect the lawful exercise of any rights of impounding or diverting water."

The deft. owned weaving sheds, worked by steam-power, on the bank of a river, and he had, for the purposes of his business, for many years prior to the passing of the Act lawfully exercised the right of diverting water from the river by means of a goit and dealing with the same in the following manner. The water so diverted being full of substances discharged into the stream from paper manufactories, not belonging to the deft., higher up the stream it had, before it could be used by the deft. for the purposes of his business, to be impounded in a reservoir and allowed to settle. Whilst it was so impounded, the substances contained therein sank to the bottom, and, after about three days, became putrescent in the form of sludge. The water at the top when thus cleared was taken from the reservoir and used for condensing and boiler purposes. Once a week the reservoir was cleaned by opening the sluice-gates into the river, and allowing the water to flow through the reservoir and out into the stream, carrying with it the sludge deposited in the reservoir. The effluent water as it went into the stream through the sluice-gates contained 97·6 per cent. of water and 2·4 per cent. of solid matter:—

Held, by A. L. Smith L.J. and Rigby L.J. (affirming the decision of Div. Ct., [1899] 1 Q. B. 27), that the solid matter when it entered the stream from the reservoir was "in suspension in water" within the meaning of s. 20 and therefore not "solid matter" within s. 2 of the Act:

Held, also (by A. L. Smith L.J., Rigby L.J., and V. Williams L.J.), that, assuming that what was put into the stream was "solid matter" within the meaning of s. 2, the deft. was protected by s. 17 and therefore not liable to be proceeded against under the Act. *RIVER RIBBLE JOINT COMMITTEE v. 6. — Old sewers—Liability of local authority—Powers of county council—Rivers Pollution Prevention Act, 1876 (39 & 40 Vict. c. 75), ss. 3, 10.

The H. urban sanitary authority allowed sewage to flow into a stream through sewers constructed and used before the passing of the Rivers Pollution Prevention Act, 1876, and before the constitution of the H. authority. The H. authority had made certain alterations in the sewers, but had done nothing to increase the pollution:—

Held, that the H. authority had "wilfully permitted" sewage to flow into the stream, and that the mere fact that they had not materially altered the sewers, and had done nothing to increase the pollution, was not a sufficient answer to proceedings under the Act. *YORKSHIRE WEST RIDING COUNCIL v. Held, that “price” meant price and not compensation, and that in fixing the price the basis of calculation should be merely the value of the main pipes and fittings regarded as plant in situ capable of earning a profit, but without any compensation for the loss of profit which they had made, or might make, by supplying water within the district.

Hydrants, fire-plugs, and other apparatus, provided by a metropolitan waterworks company, pursuant to the Metropolitan Fire Brigade Act, 1865, s. 32, and the Metropolis Water Act, 1871, s. 34, for supply of water in case of fire, may be used by the waterworks co., for purposes other than the supply of water for extinguishing fires, cleansing sewers and drains, cleansing and watering streets, or supplying public pumps, baths, and washhouses, without the consent of the London County Council, and may, by permission of the co., be used by persons other than the co. LONDON COUNTY COUNCIL v. The Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847, and the Public Health Act, 1875, impose no obligation on an urban local authority to bear the expense of maintaining in repair the fire-plugs in their district, unless such fire-plugs have been fixed by them, or by some water co. or person at their request. The corporation of Liverpool were empowered by Act of Parliament to construct a reservoir and other works in a parish in Wales for the purposes of the supply of water to Liverpool. The construction of the reservoir and works involved the submersion of the sites of the parish church, vicarage, and schools, and likewise the stopping up and diversion of certain roads. The Act required the corporation to provide sites for and erect a new church, vicarage, and schools in substitution for those which would be submerged, and to make certain new roads and bridges which were necessary for the purposes of the before-mentioned diversion. The corporation carried out the works in conformity with the Act, provided the requisite new church, vicarage, and schools, and made the necessary new roads and bridges. The corporation, having been rated to a poor-rate in respect of the reservoir and works, appealed to the quarter sessions against the rate. The sessions decided that, in estimating the capital value of the reservoir and works for the

The lease also contained the usual warrandice clause. The lessor sunk a tank on ground outside but adjoining the demised subjects, and drew off from marshy ground percolating water which would have found its way eventually into one of the ponds:—

Pits were the owners of waterworks which they had purchased from a co. which had constructed them under a special Act which provided that it should not be lawful for any person other than the co. to divert in any other manner than by law they might be legally entitled waters flowing from certain springs, or to sink any well or pit, or do anything whereby such waters might be drawn off or diminished. There was no clause in the Act giving compensation to landowners affected by this provision. The deft. owned land near, and began to sink shafts for the alleged purpose of draining certain beds of stone. The corporation alleged that the deft. was not acting bona fide, but to compel them to purchase his land:—

owner is entitled to intercept water percolating underground through his own land; (3) that as the deft. was legally entitled to sink the shafts, his motive and object in so doing was immaterial.

The plts., under an inclosure award made in 1803, were entitled to a piece of land at Wraybury bounded on one side by the Thames, which is there navigable but not tidal. The land ended in an almost perpendicular bank 5 or 6 ft. high, and the bed of the river reached to its foot, the water often reaching some height above the foot. The deft. was entitled to a several fishery in the river and to the bed of the river. The water of the river, owing to the removal of a weir, sank, and at the foot of the bank a deposit took place forming a strip on which some large trees grew, and which during some part of the year was left dry, but it was overflowed during a considerable part of the year. At the foot of the bank the deft. dug a ditch which he regularly cleaned out for more than twelve years, and afterwards filled it up with concrete so as to make a footpath. The plts. brought an action for an injunction to restrain him from trespassing:—

Held, by Romer J., [1896] 1 Ch. 78, that whether the strip had ceased to be part of the bed of the river was a question to be determined, not by any hard and fast rule, but by regarding all the material circumstances of the case, including the fluctuations of the river, the nature of the land, and its growth and user, and that, in the present case, the strip had ceased to be part of the bed and belonged to the plts. as having been formed by gradual accretion to their land:—

Held, on appeal, that the principle on which

Romer J. had proceeded in determining whether the strip was part of the bed of the river was sound, but that on the facts the strip had not ceased to form part of the bed, and therefore belonged to the deft.; but that when it was dry the rights of the plts. as riparian proprietors were not affected, and they had right of access over it to the water, and could use it to the same extent as they could use the bed of the river in its old state.

Whether the accretions, if they had ceased to form part of the bed of the river, would have been the property of the plts. as owners of the adjoining land, quære.

Whether the doctrine of accretion could apply in a case where the steep 6 ft. bank which formed the original boundary between the lands of the plts. and deft. still remain clearly defined, quære. HINDSON v. ASHBY C. A. [1896] 2 Ch. 1

In an action by a riparian owner and his tenant, the occupier of a mill on the banks of a stream, against a licensee from an urban district council, who were in possession of the land upon which the spring rose, to restrain the deft. from taking water from the spring and from interfering with the accustomed flow of water in the said stream, the deft. contended that he was entitled to abstract the water before it had risen to the surface, or flowed in a defined channel:—

Held, following Dudden v. Clutton Union, (1857) 1 H. & N. 627, that the deft. was not entitled to diminish or interfere with the natural flow of the water at its source, and that the principle of that decision was not affected by the fact that at some remote period the source of the spring had been built round, and formed into a polygonal well in order to improve its mode of issuing from the earth, thus making an artificial channel for a short distance.

A riparian proprietor can acquire an interest in the water-power of a navigable river, as derived from a reservoir artificially formed by a dam across its channel, and sell the same as appurtenant to his land. Even if such sale should not be effectual against the public, the vendor cannot himself impeach it on that ground:—

Held, in this case, that as the vendor of a specified amount of water-power had not reserved to himself a right to a supply either pari passu with or preferably to the purchaser, the latter was entitled to damages in respect of any loss incurred by the vendor's user of the water in diminution of the amount sold. *HAMELIN v. 45. — Waste land—Bed of river—Reservation to lord of manor—Territorial rights—Fishing rights—Inclosure Act, 1796 (36 Geo. 3, c. xxxix.)

By a private Inclosure Act, passed in 1796, an allotment was directed of certain waste lands in a manor, the mines, &c., being reserved to the lord, and the allotments were declared freehold of the allottees to all intents and purposes. There was a saving clause providing that nothing in the Act should affect the title of the lord to the mines or to the seignories and royalties, franchises and liberties incident to the manors, but that the lord, his heirs and assigns, should enjoy (inter alia) all piscaries, fishing, &c., which could or might be claimed by him or them as owner or owners of the soil of the moors, commons, and waste grounds, in as full, ample, and beneficial a manner to all intents and purposes as if the Act had not been passed. The waste lands were bounded on one side by the river E., and the soil of half the bed belonged to the lord. There was no evidence that any of the tenants had ever enjoyed any rights of fishing, or any other commonable rights, over any other part of the bed of the river; but there was evidence that at the time of the passing of the Act the lord exercised and let to tenants the right of fishing over half the bed. The commons allotted to Leach a part of the waste called Edenbanks, described as a bounded on the west by the river, and gave an acreage which was correct for the land if the half bed was not included. In 1890 the successor of the lord granted to the plt. the right of fishing in half the river between two points lying above and below E. The plt. brought his action to establish his right of fishing in front of E., and a right of landing on E. for fishing purposes. The Leach family insisted that the allotment to Leach passed the soil of the bed ad medium flum, and that they had the exclusive right of fishing over so much as adjoined E., and by counter-claim asked an injunction to restrain the plt. from fishing opposite E., and from landing on E. for fishing purposes:—

Held, that as the half bed of the river had been enjoyed and let by the lord as a separate tenement up to the passing of the Act, and the commoners had never exercised any rights of common over it, it did not form part of the waste lands which the commons were authorized to allot, and that even if they had expressly included half the bed in the allotment to Leach, he would have taken no interest in the bed, and that he had no right of fishing.

Held, that, according to Duke of Devonshire v. O'Connor, (1890) 24 Q. B. D. 468, the saving clause in the Act did not reserve to the lord any merely territorial rights; and that as it did not appear that he had any franchise of fishing, his right to land upon E. for fishing purposes was a merely territorial right incident to his ownership of the soil, and was extinguished by the allotment.

The county council made by-laws under s. 39 of the Public Health (London) Act, 1891, with respect to future water-closets, prescribing the mode of their construction, but made none with respect to structural alterations of existing water-closets.

The respondent was the owner of a water-closet which had been constructed before the making of the by-laws. The appellants as the sanitary authority, purporting to act under s. 41, sub-s. 2, served a notice on the respondent requiring him to make certain structural alterations in the water-closet:—

Held, (1.) that upon a summons for non-compliance with the notice the magistrate had jurisdiction to inquire into the validity of the notice notwithstanding the provisions as to an appeal to the county council. (2.) That the notice was void under s. 39, sub-s. 3, there being no by-laws for it to be in accordance with:

Held, also, by Kennedy J., that the “alteration or amendment” which the sanitary authority are empowered to require under s. 41, sub-s. 2, does not comprise structural alteration. FULHAM VESTRY v. SOLOMON Div. Ct. [1896] 1 Q. B. 198

A testator having left his residuary estate, which included two immediately adjoining houses, in thirds to his three children, the plt., the deft. and another, they entered into an agreement for the distribution of the estate, whereby it was agreed (inter alia) that one of the houses, therein described as "a freehold house and premises known as B., let to A. F.," should be forthwith conveyed to the plt., and that the other house, therein described "as a freehold house and premises known as S., let to J. H., should be forthwith conveyed to the deft. The two houses fronted a public road. From this road there started a private road which ran along the side of S. to the back, and then turned at right angles and ran at the back of the two houses, affording a back entrance to each of the houses. This side and back road was a gravelled road between fences, made, when the houses were built, for the use of both houses, and it had been de facto used by the tenants of both houses:—

Held, that under the agreement the plt. was entitled to a conveyance of B. containing the ordinary general words "together with the ways, easements, rights, and advantages to the premises appertaining," and under a conveyance in that form a formed road over a portion of S. to and for the apparent use of B. would pass to the plt. upon the principle stated by Erle C.J. in Polden v. Bastard, (1865) L. R. 1 Q. B. 156; see Pearson v. Spencer, (1863) 3 B. & S. 761; Brown v. Alabaster, (1887) 37 Ch. D. 490; Thomas v. Owen, (1887) 20 Q. B. D. 225. The Court has jurisdiction under Order LIV. a to determine questions of fact, and, being satisfied upon the evidence that this road was made and intended for the use of the two houses:—

Held, that the descriptions of the two houses contained in the agreement included rights for the owners, tenants, and occupiers of the two houses respectively to use the side and back road for all purposes. NICHOLLS v. NICHOLLS

From the fact that a way to a messuage had been enjoyed for more than sixty years, and a small annual payment was made for at least the last forty-four years for it, the judge inferred that the way was enjoyed under a parol licence given more than forty years ago in consideration of an annual payment:—

Held, that the owner of the messuage was for the full period "claiming right" to the way for the forty years, within the meaning of s. 2 of the Prescription Act; and that in the absence of proof of enjoyment by consent or agreement in writing, an absolute right to the use of the way had been acquired. *GARDNER v. A. owned two houses, C and B, which were situated back to back, and from one of which, C, there was a paved and walled passage along the side of and through the other, B, to B street. A. occupied the house C and let B. The passage was not a way of necessity, and was only used occasionally by A. In 1882 A. mortgaged the house B without reserving any right over the passage, and in 1886 she died, having by her will of the same year devised the two houses to different persons, the will containing no words appropriate to any right of way. The ultimate devisee of C. conveyed that house to the plt., purporting to include in such conveyance the right of way. The deft., who was the devisee of B, paid off the mortgage thereon, and that house was reconveyed to him:—

Held, (1) by Div. Ct. and C. A., that as the mortgage deed did not reserve the right of way, and it was not a way of necessity, it was extinguished by the mortgage:

Held, (2) by Div. Ct., that no right of way passed to the plt.'s predecessor in title under the will. The C. A. did not decide whether or not any right of way passed under the will to the plt.'s predecessor. TAWS v. KNOWLES

The deed also referred to another deed as then prepared, which when executed was dated March 13, 1869, whereby B., in pursuance of this agreement and in consideration of the conveyance of Three-acre, covenanted and granted with and to A., his "heirs and assigns," that it should be lawful for them and the tenants and occupiers for the time being of Blackacre to use the footway. A. was then and until 1870, when he purchased the fee simple, only tenant from year to year of Blackacre:—

Held, that, notwithstanding the limited interest of A. when the easement was granted, and the cesser of that interest by merger in 1870, a lessee of Blackacre claiming under the freehold title of A. was entitled to use the footway. RYMER v. McILROY

A local board discharging duties in relation to the protection of public rights of way under s. 26, sub-s. 1, of the Local Government Act, 1894, is in the same position as a private individual protecting his own property, and is not acting judicially. Consequently, where an action was brought against a local board to restrain the removal of posts erected on a public footpath by the owners of the adjoining property for the purpose of preventing the footpath from being used for vehicular traffic, and the statement of claim alleged that a member of the board had used his influence with the board for his own private interest, and that in consequence thereof the plts. had failed to induce the board to take steps to prevent the user of the footpath for vehicular traffic:—

2. — Weighing machine—Weight indicated exceeding weight of article sold—"False or unjust"—Weights and Measures Act, 1878 (41 & 42 Vict. c. 49), s. 25.

The respondent was charged under s. 25 of the Weights and Measures Act, 1878, with having in his possession for use for trade a weighing machine which was false or unjust. The machine, which was used for weighing tea, had on it, under the scoop in which the tea was placed, a piece of paper, the effect of which was to make the machine indicate a weight exceeding, by the weight of the paper, the weight of the tea in the scoop. The paper was placed where it was for the purpose of convenience and expedition in weighing, because it would take longer to weigh the tea if it were placed in the bag in which it was to be sold before being put into the scoop. The paper weighed less than the bag in which the tea was sold.

Held, that, as the machine, when used with the paper, indicated a weight in excess of the true weight of the tea sold, it was "false or unjust," within the meaning of s. 25, and the respondent ought to be convicted. LANE v. RENDALL - Div. Ct. [1899] W. N. 208; [1899] 2 Q. B. 673

4. — Delivery from vehicle—By-law—Validity—Sale of coal—Requisition to weigh—Weights and Measures Act, 1889 (52 & 53 Vict. c. 21), s. 28.

By a by-law made by a local authority under s. 28 of the Weights and Measures Act, 1889, which enables local authorities to make by-laws regulating the sale of coal in small quantities, "Every person in charge of any vehicle carrying coal for sale . . . , in quantities not exceeding two hundredweight . . . shall re-weigh the coal upon being requested to do so by any purchaser, or by any one on behalf of the purchaser, or by any constable"—

Held, by Lord Russell of Killowen C.J. (Wright J. doubting), that the section authorized the making of a by-law requiring the coal to be weighed by the person in charge of the vehicle, but held by the Court that the by-law was unreasonable, and therefore bad. *ALTY v. 5. — Delivery of ticket—Sale of coal—Insertion of seller's name—Name under which seller trades—Weights and Measures Act, 1889 (52 & 53 Vict. c. 21), s. 21, Sched. III.

The appellant was convicted for default in compliance with the provisions of the Weights and Measures Act, 1889, s. 21, with respect to the delivery of a ticket with a ton of coal delivered by him, by means of a vehicle, to a purchaser. He had delivered a ticket in the form in the 3rd sched. to the Act; in the place for the name of the seller were inserted the words, "Sellers the Co-operative Coal Company." This was the name under which the appellant traded, but there was no real company. There was no intent to defraud:—

Held, that the provision in the Act, requiring the insertion in the ticket of the seller's name, was sufficiently complied with by the insertion of the name under which the appellant carried on his business, and the conviction was wrong.

6. — Ticket—"Correct weight"—Weights and Measures Act, 1889 (52 & 53 Vict. c. 21), s. 22.

When coal is conveyed for delivery on sale in bulk, in a vehicle not belonging to the purchaser, the "correct weight," which is required by s. 22 of the Weights and Measures Act, 1889, to be inserted in the ticket which is to be given to the purchaser, is the weight as ascertained at the place from which the coal is brought, and not the weight at the time of delivery. KNOWLES & SONS, LD. v. Explained by Div. Ct. Edwards v. Purnell, [1899] 1 Q. B. 449, 454.

7. — Ticket in form in schedule—Weights and Measures Act, 1889 (52 & 53 Vict. c. 21), s. 21.

By an agreement between a firm of coal merchants and the committee of an asylum all coal supplied to the asylum was to be weighed on the asylum weighbridge, and the weight there ascertained before delivery was accepted by the committee. At the time of weighing a cartload of coal in course of delivery at the asylum, the carter had in his possession a book of forms containing tickets in the form in the sched., but in which the weights which were required to be entered were left in blank; at the conclusion of the weighing, and before any part of the coal was unloaded, the purchasers' storekeeper, in pursuance of the arrangement between the parties, filled in upon the ticket the weight of the coal and vehicle, the tare weight of the vehicle and the net weight of coal delivered; the ticket was then detached from the book, and handed by the carter to the storekeeper, and the coal was unloaded:—

Held, that the provisions of s. 21 had been complied with by the sellers, and that they could not be convicted under that section for not delivering to the purchaser before any part of the coal was unloaded a ticket in the form in the 3rd schedule to the Act. EDWARDS v. PURNELL

Testatrix, who died in 1892, by her will dated in 1891, after making certain bequests of stock, declared as follows: “Any money not mentioned in the aforesaid bequests that may be in my possession at my death after the payment of my debts funeral and testamentary expenses I give absolutely” to P. She then made certain specific gifts of chattels. At her death she was entitled to a reversionary interest in personalty which fell into possession in 1897:—

2. — Codicil—Absolute gift of personalty—Gift of same personalty for life with remainder to children—“Instead of such bequests in the manner expressed in” the will—Absolute gift in the will not revoked by the codicil.

A testator by his will bequeathed his personal estate to his two daughters A. and B. equally.

By a codicil he directed that “instead of such bequests in the manner expressed in my said will to such daughters absolutely” his executors should stand possessed of his personal estate upon trust for sale and conversion, and to pay the income in moieties to his two daughters for life and on the death of either of them to pay the moiety of the trust moneys to their children as they should by deed or will appoint. The codicil contained no gift over in the event of a daughter dying without issue.

B. died without ever having had any issue, having by her will devised and bequeathed all her real and personal estate to her executors, upon the trusts therein mentioned:—

Held, that there was no intestacy as to the moiety of the personal estate given to B., there being no revocation under the codicil of the absolute gift given to her by the will.

Y., entitles A. B. to take if he likes the whole of such furniture other than the excepted articles. The decision of North J. affirmed.

Before the Wills Act, 1837, came into force words of gift of realty without words of limitation only conveyed a life estate. Gift to wife and daughter and the survivor for life, with power of appointment by will; gift over in default to the “heirs, executors, and administrators” of the survivor; “such heirs, executors, and administrators” to be ascertained as if the survivor had died unmarried and intestate:—

Held, that the ascertaining clause shewed that the testator did not use the words “heirs, executors, and administrators” as words of limitation, as they would have been without the clause, whatever might have been the testator’s intention, and that the survivor only took a life estate with a power of appointment by will. *In re HALL. He directed “that the share of each of my said daughters, who at the time of such division shall be a married woman, shall be held by my trustees upon trust to pay the annual income thereof into her hands for her separate use on her sole receipt and so that she may never anticipate the same, and after her decease the said share shall be held in trust for her children as she shall by deed or will appoint, and, in default of appointment, for all her children who shall attain twenty-one years, in equal shares, and if there shall not be any such child, then in trust for such person or persons as she shall by deed or will appoint."

The period of distribution had now arrived. Two of the testator's children were now alive, C. A. Cox, a married woman with children, and E. M. Dyer, a widow who had children; all the other children of the testator mentioned in his will were dead without issue. The question was whether Mrs. Dyer was absolutely entitled to half the fund, or whether she was only entitled to a life interest:—

Held, that Mrs. Dyer took her half of the fund absolutely. RUDALL v. NICHOLS

A. attained twenty-one in 1863, and died in 1893, without ever having had any issue. The testator's widow had died in 1884:—

Held, that A., on his attaining twenty-one, became absolutely entitled to the real and personal estate devised and bequeathed by the will.

The reason of the rule in Howe v. Earl of Dartmouth, (1802) 1 W. & T. 7th ed. p. 68, is not generally applicable to an absolute gift subject to an executory limitation.

By his will a testator gave all his property to his wife, and by a codicil to his will, after reciting that G. M. was the adopted daughter of himself and his wife and that he was desirous of providing for her in the event of his wife dying without issue leaving her surviving, he directed that in such event the gift in his will in favour of his wife should take effect as if the name of G. M. had been substituted therein for that of his wife. Part of the testator's estate consisted of a reversionary interest in a trust fund:—

Held, having regard to the form of the gift in the codicil, that the testator intended that the property should be enjoyed in specie, and that the reversion ought not to be sold. In re Bland. MILLER v. BLAND Stirling J. [1899] 2 Ch. 336

By his will, subject to payment of his debts and funeral and testamentary expenses, a testator gave all his property to his wife "for her absolute use and benefit, so that during her lifetime for the purpose of her maintenance and support she shall have the fullest power to sell and dispose of my said estate absolutely. After her death, as to such parts of my . . . estate as she shall not have sold or disposed of as aforesaid, subject to payment of my wife's funeral expenses, I give . . . the same" in trust for sale for the benefit of other persons. The wife was also appointed sole executrix. On the testator's death his widow took possession of his estate, and his debts and funeral and testamentary expenses were paid during her lifetime. At her death a considerable part of the estate remained unsold and undisposed of:—

to the testatrix's deposit account with V. & Co. This transfer was made by the trustee without instructions from the testatrix; but she continued to draw on the account, statements of which were sent her from time to time, without distinguishing the moiety transferred. Owing, however, to other credit payments, the balance never fell below 4000*l.* The testatrix died on Sept. 27, 1898.

The question was whether the bequest of the above-mentioned moiety was adeemed by the transfer to the testatrix's private account.

Held, that, according to the rule in Stanley v. Potter, (1789) 2 Cox, 180, he had merely to inquire whether the specific legacy remained at the testator's death. Being originally a moiety of a trust fund of 8000*l.* in the name of a trustee, it had become a fund of 4000*l.* in the testatrix's own name. Before the transfer she could only have sued V. & Co. through or in the name of her trustee. After the transfer she could sue in her own name. In either case, however, she would have recovered the same thing, namely, 4000*l.* In substance she had disposed of her 4000*l.* trust fund, and it was no less her trust fund because, having fallen in, it was carried to her separate account. The difference was not substantial, being merely one of language, and there was no total ademption. As to partial ademption, the doctrine of appropriation of payments would have applied if the testatrix had been suing V. & Co., but it could not without inconsistency be applied to the present case, as the decision on the first point turned on the view that the specific fund was still intact. *In re VICKERS. 22. — Hotchpot clause—Construction of will.

A father having one son and one daughter covenanted with the trustees of his son's marriage settlement that his executors would pay them 10,000*l.* to be held on trust for the son for life, with remainder for the son's wife for life, with remainder as to the capital for the issue of the marriage; in the event (which happened) of there being no child the capital to be held in trust for the father absolutely. The father died having by his will given the residue of his estate in trust for his son and daughter in equal shares. The will provided that all sums which the testator had covenanted to give to or with any child on his or her marriage should, in default of any direction to the contrary, be taken in or towards satisfaction of the respective share of such child, and should be brought into hotchpot and accounted for accordingly. After the father's death his executors paid 10,000*l.* out of his estate to the trustees of the son's settlement, appropriated a like sum to the daughter, and divided the residue equally between the son and the daughter. The son having afterwards died leaving a wife and without issue, the daughter claimed a moiety of the 10,000*l.* fund:—

Held, (1.) that the benefits secured for the testator's son, his wife and children, under the testator's covenant in the son's marriage settlement were sums which the testator had covenanted to give to his son on his marriage, within the meaning of that expression in the hotchpot clause; (2.) that the whole beneficial interest in the 10,000*l.* fund must be treated as appropriated to the son's share at the date of the division of the estate, the ultimate interest being appropriated and allotted to the son under the direction for the equal division of the testator's estate between his two children, and the prior interests being brought into account as part of the son's share under the hotchpot clause; and that the son's executors were therefore entitled to the whole of the 10,000*l.* fund, subject to the life interest of the son's widow.

A testatrix gave her property among her four children, and directed that all moneys owing to her at her death by any child for rent or otherwise should be brought into hotchpot in ascertaining the share of such child. One son had, in the lifetime of the testatrix, acquired an absolute title, under s. 1 of the Real Property Limitation Act, 1874, to a freehold farm which had been let to him by her, through non-payment of rent by him to her for more than twelve years. Upon the question whether the unpaid rent for the twelve years prior to the extinguishment of the estate of the testatrix in the farm ought to be deducted from the son's share:—

Held, that, under the Real Property Limitation Acts, 1833 and 1874, all the rights of the reversioner in the farm had become extinguished, and that therefore the unpaid rent was no longer owing to her estate, and should not be deducted from the son's share.

A testator who died in 1878 bequeathed 30,000*l.* with interest at 4 per cent. on trust for his widow for life, and after her death for division into four equal parts and payment of one part to his son, the remaining three-fourths to fall into residue. He declared that any sum which he should advance or covenant to advance to any of his children should be taken in satisfaction pro tanto of the advanced child's provision, and this provision was to apply expressly to a sum of 6000*l.* which he had covenanted to advance to the trustees of one of his daughters' marriage settlements. He gave his real estate and his residuary personal estate to his trustees on trust to sell and convert and out of the proceeds to pay his debts and legacies, and to divide the residue into three equal shares, one of such shares for each of his three daughters for life, and after her death for her issue. His estate consisted chiefly of land, of which the trustees in exercise of their discretion under the will postponed the sale. They raised upon mortgage a sum sufficient to pay the debts, including the 6000*l.* which they paid to the daughter's trustees; but the 30,000*l.* was not so raised. The rents of the real estate after providing for the interest on the 30,000*l.* and on the mortgage produced a surplus income of about 200*l.* a year, which was paid in equal shares to the two unadvanced daughters. The widow died in 1895:—

Held, upon the division of the residue, that the period of distribution was the death of the testator; that the advanced daughter, besides bringing into hotchpot the 6000*l.*, must be charged with interest thereon as from the date of the advance; but that the rate of interest ought to be 3 and not 4 per cent.

A testator by his will gave each of his sons in succession, according to seniority, the option of succeeding to his business, and declared that the son electing to do so should be debited with the value thereof in the division of his residuary estate, and if the value should exceed the amount of such son's expectant share therein at the time the option was declared, he should refund the excess to the testator's residuary estate. Then, after giving certain legacies to his other children, sons at twenty-five, and daughters at twenty-one or marriage, which were to carry interest from his death applicable for maintenance, the testator gave his residuary estate upon trusts for sale, conversion, and investment and payment of certain annuities, and directed the trustees to accumulate the surplus income at compound interest for twenty-one years from his death, if any child of his should so long live and be under twenty-one, and on the attainment of twenty-one by his youngest living child (which was to be the period of distribution) to hold the trust fund in trust for his children then living as tenants in common. The will also empowered the trustees, at any time before the period of distribution, to make advances out of the capital of the trust premises in favour of any of his sons, the sums so advanced to be taken in part satisfaction of the shares in the trust premises to which the sons advanced should become entitled.—The testator died in 1883, leaving three sons and two daughters. The eldest son in 1884 elected to succeed to the business, the value of which (15,000*l.*) did not at the time exceed the amount of his expectant share. The youngest child attained twenty-one in 1894; and meanwhile the second son had, under the powers of advancement, received sums amounting to 8200*l.*:—

Held, by the Court, that in debiting the eldest son with the value of the business taken by him, he ought not to be debited with interest thereon from the time he took it, but only from the period of distribution:—

Held, also, by Lord Herschell and A. L. Smith L.J. (Rigby L.J. dissentiente), that as to the sums advanced to the second son no interest ought to be charged thereon prior to period of distribution.

A testator bequeathed his estate to trustees on trust to pay the income to his children in equal shares, and gave power to the trustees to apply "in or towards the advancement in life of each child a sum not exceeding 500*l.* of his or her presumptive share." The trustees were to be the sole judges of the advisability of such payment and of the signification of the term "advancement in life." After the share of a married daughter had become vested, the trustees at her request advanced 250*l.* to her under this power with knowledge that the sum so advanced would be used to pay a debt due from her husband to one of the trustees:—

Held, that this was not a bona fide exercise of the power, and was therefore a breach of trust.

Seem, that there was no power to make any advance after the share had become vested.

A testator by his will dated in 1868 appointed his wife executrix thereof, and directed payment of his debts without saying by whom, and, after bequeathing certain pecuniary legacies, he gave the residue of his real and personal estate to two other persons upon trust as to his real estate to pay to or permit and suffer his wife to receive the rents and profits for her life, and after her death upon trust to pay to or permit and suffer his niece to receive the rents and profits for her life for her separate use; and after declaring certain trusts with regard to his personal estate, he directed his trustees after the death of the survivor of his wife and niece to pay two pecuniary legacies, and after payment thereof to stand possessed of his real estate and the residue of his personal estate upon certain other trusts:—

Held, (1.) upon the principle of Greville v. Browne, (1859) 7 H. L. C. 689, that there was a charge upon the real estate of the debts and immediate legacies, and also of the two future legacies; (2.) that the charge of the debts and

A testator bequeathed to his three daughters, in equal shares, the life-rent of a sum of 36,000*l.*, to be invested within five years after his decease. Until the investment was made, he bequeathed to each daughter an annuity of 200*l.* In the event of a daughter dying, without leaving issue, her life-rent interest was to accrete to her surviving sister or sisters, whilst the capital of the share life-rented by her lapsed into residue. In the event of her leaving issue, the trustees were directed "to divide equally amongst the issue of each of my said daughters" one-third of the sum directed to be invested. Mrs. M., one of the daughters, died in March, 1895, leaving surviving two daughters. Mrs. M. had had also a son and a daughter, Mrs. H., who predeceased her childless, but died after the testator. The question was whether the representatives of the predeceasing issue were entitled to a share of the capital appointed to be divided amongst Mrs. M.'s issue:—

Held, reversing the decision of the Ct. of Sess., (1896) 23 R. 598 (Lords Watson and Herschell dissenting), that all the children of Mrs. M. were entitled to share equally in the division of the fund in which their mother had a life interest. HICKLING v. FAIR H. L. (Sc.) [1899] A. C. 15

A testator by his will, dated 1896, gave and bequeathed to the "offspring of my late brother Augustus the sum of 1500*l.*"

The brother had two daughters only, A. and B.; A. was married, and had two children who were infants.

The question was whether the legacy was divisible in fourths amongst A. and B. and the children of A., or in moieties between A. and B.

Held, that as the expression "offspring" was used without the addition of other words, it must be taken to mean "children" only. TABULEAU v. NIXON Byrne J. [1899] W. N. 115

45. — Per capita or per stirpes—"Share and share alike."

A testator gave the income of his property to his wife for life, after her death to his brother and sisters, and on the death of any of them the income of his or her share to his or her children. The will contained these words, "and after the decease of all I desire the whole of my property to be sold," &c., and the proceeds to be equally divided between the children of the aforesaid share and share alike:—

Held, that the children of the brother and sisters took per capita and not per stirpes. In re STONE. BAKER v. STONE C. A. [1895] 2 Ch. 196

A testator by his will, made when he was fifty-nine and his wife sixty, gave his property for sale and conversion, and directed the proceeds to be divided equally among his children. He had no children, but his wife had had children by a former husband, who were treated by testator as his children, and had adopted his name:—

Held (1), that the Court could look at circumstances outside the will to determine whom testator meant by "children," and (2) that he intended his step-children to take. In re JEANS. UPTON v. JEANS — North J. [1895] W. N. 98

A testator, who died in 1844, made five specific devises of his copyhold property to his five children, subject to the life interest therein of their mother, and continued: "And if any or either of my said children should happen to die without having lawful issue their share or shares of such property to go and be equally divided among the surviving children share and share alike."

One of the daughters died a spinster in 1895; at her death her brother Joseph was the testator's only surviving child; and the question was whether the daughter's share passed on her death without issue to her brother Joseph, as the surviving child of the testator, or to her customary heir.

Held, following Hearn v. Baker, 2 K. & J. 383, that "surviving children" included a sole surviving child, and consequently that the daughter's share passed to her brother Joseph.

49. — Lapse — Gift to "A. and the children of B."—Death of A. in testator's lifetime — Lapse — Survivorship—Period of distribution.

A testator gave property in trust for his wife (who survived him) for life, and after her death for his niece A. and the children of his sister B. who should attain twenty-one equally. At the date of the will there were living A. and five children of B., but A. died in the testator's lifetime. At the death of the tenant for life B.'s five children were still living and had all attained twenty-one:—

Held (reversing North J.), that the gift was a gift to a class, and that consequently A.'s death in the testator's lifetime had not caused a lapse of her share, but the whole gift passed to the five children as the members of the class surviving at the period of distribution.

Per Romer L.J.: A gift by will to a class, properly so called, and A. equally, so that the testator contemplates A. taking the same share that each member of the class will take, is prima facie a gift to a class. In re MOSS. KINGSBURY v. WALTER C. A. [1899] W. N. 112; [1899] 2 Ch. 314

50. — Mistake as to number—Gift to children —Practice—Costs—Ascertainment of persons entitled to legacy—Costs out of residue—R. S. C., Order LXV., r. 14 B.

A testator bequeathed the residue of his estate to his trustees, and directed that out of the proceeds they should pay his funeral and testamentary expenses, debts, and legacies. By a codicil he bequeathed 4000*l.* to his trustees, on trust to pay the annual income thereof to his son R., who was in his uncontrolled discretion to apply the same for the benefit of the testator's son W. and his two children by his late wife. And, after the death of W., the trustees were to stand possessed of the capital and income of the 4000*l.* in trust for "the said two children of W. in equal

At the date of the codicil there were living four children of W. by his late wife. In an action by the trustees after W.'s death to determine which of his four children were entitled to the 4000*l.*:—

Held, also, that the costs of the action ought to be paid out of the residue of the estate, and not out of the 4000*l.*, and that, if rule 14 B of Order LXV. applied, a direction should be given for the payment of the costs out of the residue. In re GROOM. BOOTY v. GROOM

Gift of residue in trust "for all my nephews and nieces living at my decease who shall live to attain the age of twenty-one years." The testator had given legacies to a number of named persons, including nephews and nieces of his wife:—

Held, that the residue was divisible among all the testator's nephews and nieces, whether they were nephews and nieces of the testator or of the testator's wife, and further, that the wife of a nephew, although not related to either the testator or his wife, was to be treated as a niece.

(B) In construing one will too much attention is not to be paid to decisions on other wills. Rules of law must be attended to; but if in any case the intention of a testator is expressed with sufficient clearness, the Court should give effect to it. The fact that in other wills more or less like that under consideration other judges have not been satisfied as to the intention expressed is not a sufficient ground for defeating the intention appearing on the will under construction. *In re PALMER. The trustees thereupon took the necessary steps for having the distringases orders duly warned.

The only tenant for life now alive was one of the testatrix's sisters, who was ninety years of age.

On April 7 B. obtained an order ex parte restraining the bank until after April 11 from permitting the transfer of the Consols on an undertaking to accept from either the Bank of England or from the trustees three hours' notice to discharge the injunction, and he now moved on notice to the bank and to the trustees for an injunction to restrain the bank from permitting the transfer of the Consols, and the question was whether B., claiming through C. A. W., who would be one of the next of kin of the testatrix if he survived the sole surviving tenant for life, had such an interest in the testatrix's estate as to entitle him to the injunction:—

80. — Postponement clause—Limitations of real estate—Estate “in defeasance of” estate tail—Fines and Recoveries Act, 1833 (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 74), s. 15.

Land was devised in trust for A. for life, remainder to his first and other sons in tail male, similar remainder to B. and C. and their sons successively, with a proviso that upon the happening of a certain event the trusts in favour of B. and his sons “should thereafter be postponed to and take effect in remainder immediately after” the trust in favour of C. and his sons. With the consent of A. (the tenant for life in possession) B. and his eldest son executed a disentailing deed, conveying the lands in fee simple. Subsequently during the life of A., the certain event occurred:—

Held, that the estate limited to C. and his sons on the occurrence of the certain event was an estate “in defeasance of” and not “prior to” that of B. and his sons, and therefore that the estate of C.'s eldest son was barred under the statute by the disentailing deed. MILBANK v. VANE — C. A. [1893] 3 Ch. 79

81. — Shelley's Case, Rule in—Issue—Heirs—Gift, over—Descent—Purchase—Construction of will.

A testator devised lands to trustees in trust to receive the rents and profits for the use and benefit of such of his child or children as should be living at his death, and to apply such rents and profits or so much thereof as the trustees should deem right and proper in the maintenance and education of such child or children until majority or marriage, and from and after majority or marriage in trust to permit and suffer such child or children, as they should severally attain the age of twenty-one or be married, to take the rents and profits, if more than one, in equal shares for her, his, and their own use and benefit for her, his, or their lives; and if he left only one child then to permit and suffer such one child to take the rents and profits for her or his sole use and benefit for her life; and he declared that from and after the death of such child or children, the trustees should stand seised of the lands in trust unto and to the use of the heirs of the body and bodies of such child or children, if more than one to be equally divided between them, such lands to be legally conveyed to such heirs of any child or children in equal shares as they should respectively attain the age of twenty-one or be married, and to their respective heirs and assigns for ever, with power in the meantime to apply the rents and profits in the maintenance and education of such heirs of his child or children. And if he should die leaving no child or children, or issue of any child or children, or if such child or children as he should leave and the issue of such child or children should die before he or they should attain the age of twenty-one or be married—then a gift over.

The testator died leaving only one child surviving him; that child married and left a son who reached twenty-one:—

tees throughout; that the estates both of the child or children and of the heirs of their body were equitable; that the rule in Shelley's Case, (1581) 1 Rep. 93 b, applied, and that the testator's child took an estate tail.

A will devised lands to W. in fee simple. By a codicil the testator devised the lands upon the same trusts as were set forth in the will, but nevertheless upon the special trust, and his will was, that it should not be lawful for W. at any time during his life to suffer any recovery or enter into any deed, matter, or thing whereby to cut off, dock, or destroy the entail of his said freehold lands:—

Held, that the codicil did not cut down the fee simple estate given by the will to an estate tail. VAN GRUTTEN v. FOXWELL. FOXWELL v. VAN GRUTTEN - - H. L. (E.) [1897] A. C. 658

82. — Special tail—“Issue”—Devise to “Charles if he marries a fit and worthy gentlewoman and has issue male to such issue”—Construction of will.

In this case it was held that the estates or their proceeds were to go on the limitations which were expressed with regard to the proceeds; and that the limitations must be read as meaning the same as if the testator had said, “to my son Charles and such issue male as he may have by marriage with a fit and proper gentlewoman and their male descendants, in failure of which” then over. The rule in Shelley's Case, (1581) 1 Co. Rep. 93 B, did not apply, and the codicil created a valid estate in special tail. The word “issue” was a word of limitation equivalent to heirs of the body, and not a word of purchase. The addition of the words “and their male descendants” did not prevent Lord Charles taking an estate tail.

On the other hand, if the rule in Shelley's Case applied, there was no gift in express terms to Lord Charles of a life estate; the first gift without more would give him the fee simple. But the testator intended the estate to travel through the class of issue male, and effect could only be given to that intention by holding that Lord Charles took an estate in tail. If it were held that there was not an estate in special tail male in Charles, but that the first taker in the series of issue took by purchase, it would follow that only the descendants of that particular head of the issue would take, and the words “in failure of which” would not be satisfied. The rule in Shelley's Case ought, therefore, to be applied, so that the whole class of issue male by a fit and worthy gentlewoman should be exhausted before the gift over should take effect. Lord Charles took an estate in special tail male, and the plt.'s case failed. PELHAM CLINTON v. DUKE OF NEWCASTLE - - Buckley J. [1900] W. N. 183

83A. — Ambiguity—Equivocation—Legatee's right of selection—Admissibility of evidence—Direct evidence of intention—Construction of will.

A testatrix by her will gave “my 140 shares in the Crown Brewery Co.” to trustees, upon trust to pay the income thereof to the plt. for her life, with remainder in trust for her children, and, if she should die without leaving issue, in trust to divide the same equally between the six debts, as tenants in common. Two of the debts were residuary legatees under the will. At the date of the will and at the date of the death of the testatrix she had 280 5l. shares in the co., of which 40 were paid up in full, and the other 240 were paid up to the extent of 2*l.* 10*s.* per share. An affidavit by the solicitor who had prepared the will was tendered, to shew that the testatrix intended to bequeath 140 of her partly paid-up shares on the above trusts.

Held, by Kekewich J. and by the C. A., that this evidence was not admissible:

Held, by the C. A., reversing the decision of Kekewich J., that the tenant for life was not entitled to select which of the 280 shares she would take:

But held, on the construction of the will, and having regard to the circumstances, that the bequest must be satisfied out of the 240 partly paid shares.

A testatrix bequeathed to her grandniece “the sum of 300l. in addition to the sums owing to her from my late husband's estate.” The will contained no direction to pay debts. There were no sums legally owing to the grandniece from the husband's estate, but there were two sums of 500l. for which the husband (as the testatrix knew) had given her an I O U and promissory note, which, however, were not enforceable for want of consideration. The testatrix was universal devisee and legatee under her husband's will:—

Held, having regard to the surrounding circumstances, that the intention of the testatrix was to include the two sums in question in the bequest.

Per V. Williams L.J.: An erroneous recital in a will of indebtedness on the part of a testator to a legatee, even though accompanied by a direction to pay, will not amount to a gift of the supposed debt, in the absence of any indication in the will of an intention of bounty in respect thereof; but such intention may be implied from the general scope of the will.

A testator gave leasehold property upon trust to pay the income to his daughter during her life, and after her death to transfer the same to all her children in equal shares, the shares to vest at twenty-one, and in the case of daughters at twenty-one or marriage. The testator gave his residuary estate upon certain trusts. The daughter died leaving several infant children:—

Held, that the effect of the bequest being to separate the leaseholds from the general estate of the testator, the intermediate income until one of the children attained a vested interest was applicable to the maintenance of the infants. In re WOODIN. WOODIN v. GLASS

Testator after bequeathing a legacy gave the residue of his real and personal property to various persons for life, and after the decease of the survivor of them to E., "and to any lawful issue she may have, such issue to take a vested interest in my said property upon attaining the age of twenty-one years." The testator died in 1889, leaving both real and personal estate. E. died in 1893 without having been married:—

Held, that the direction that the issue should take vested interests at twenty-one was inconsistent with the use of the word as a term of limitation; that E.'s issue took as purchasers, and consequently that her heir-at-law was entitled to the real estate:

Held, also, as to the personality, that there was nothing to take the case out of the ordinary rule that under a gift to one and his children the parent and children take concurrently as joint tenants; and, consequently, that E.'s legal personal representative was entitled. *In re WILMOT. Testator gave real estate upon trust for his niece S. for life, and after her death without leaving issue (which event happened) to his "right heirs" for ever. Testator had two sisters M. and A., who predeceased him. M. had two daughters, one of whom was living at testator's death, and the other predeceased him leaving two daughters. A.'s only child was S., the tenant for life. The testator's right heirs, therefore, were his two nieces and his two great-nieces. The question was whether the four ladies took as co-parceners or as joint tenants:—

Held, that by virtue of s. 3 of the Inheritance Act, 1833, they took as devisees, and not by descent; that co-parcenary was an incident of descent at common law, and could not attach to an estate otherwise acquired; that there was nothing in the Act to shew an intention that the incident of co-parcenary should attach to such a devise as was mentioned in s. 3; and consequently that the four took as joint tenants, and not as co-parceners. In re BAKER. *PURSEY v. A testator, after directing payment of his debts and funeral and testamentary expenses, bequeathed a number of pecuniary legacies, and then gave "all the residue and remainder" of two specified mortgage debts then due to him, after payment of his debts and funeral and testamentary expenses (but not adding "and legacies"), to three persons named. At the date of the will the testator's personal estate consisted of the two mortgage debts, which were just sufficient for payment of the legacies (if payable thereout), debts, and funeral and testamentary expenses. Subsequently to the date of his will the testator became possessed of further personal estate, but as the will contained no general residuary gift this remained undisposed of. The total personal estate, exclusive of the two mortgage debts, was not sufficient for payment of the debts, funeral and testamentary expenses, and legacies.

On an originating summons to ascertain in what order the assets should be applied:—

Held, by Stirling J., that "the residue and remainder" of the two mortgage debts meant what was left after payment thereof of the debts, funeral and testamentary expenses only, and that the undisposed of personalty could alone be resorted to for the general pecuniary legacies:

But held, on appeal (Rigby L.J. dissenting), that "the residue and remainder" of the two mortgage debts meant what was left after payment

Ir. 442, that, the will having in one devise to the same person massed together realty and personality, the same rule of law applicable to personality, namely, that the condition was void as being one merely in terrorem, operated as to both realty and personality, and that therefore the condition as to the realty was also void. *In re PETTIFER. 144. — "Married woman"—Construction of will.

Testator by his will directed his trustees to divide trust funds among such of his seven children as should be alive at the period of distribution, and the issue of such of them as should then be dead. He directed "that the share of each of my said daughters, who at the time of such division shall be a married woman, shall be held by my trustees upon trust to pay the annual income thereof into her hands for her separate use on her sole receipt and so that she may never anticipate the same, and after her decease the said share shall be held in trust for her children as she shall by deed or will appoint, and, in default of appointment, for all her children who shall attain twenty-one years, in equal shares, and if there shall not be any such child, then in trust for such person or persons as she shall by deed or will appoint."

The period of distribution had now arrived. Two of the testator's children were now alive, C., a married woman with children, and D., a widow who had children; all the other children of the testator mentioned in his will were dead without issue. The question was whether D. was absolutely entitled to half the fund, or whether she was only entitled to a life interest:—

A testator, who died in 1889, after legacies of 100*l.* to four of his children, made several specific devises, freed and discharged from any mortgages there might be thereon at the time of his death, for the benefit of a son and three daughters, and declared that if he should sell any of the houses thereinbefore given for the benefit of his daughters, his trustees should out of his residuary estate stand possessed of a sum equivalent to the price received for the same upon trusts similar to those declared respecting the house sold: the testator then gave all other his real and personal estate upon trust to pay annuities of 250*l.* to each of his sons, and out of the balance of the income thereof to pay the specific incumbrances upon the said estate, and after payment off of the said incumbrances, upon trust to assign his said residuary estate to his two sons equally. The testator sold one of the specifically devised houses for 9800*l.* The estate proved insufficient for payment in full to all the beneficiaries:—

Held, (1) that the four pecuniary legacies were charged upon the entire residue, and had priority over all other payments directed to be made to beneficiaries; (2) that the annuities were only given to the sons in their capacity of residuary legatees, and were therefore not payable until the sum representing proceeds of sale of realty sold by the testator, and the mortgage debts on the specifically devised realty, had been provided for; (3) that the 9800*l.*, representing proceeds of sale, was to be treated as an ordinary legacy made payable out of residue; and (4) that the rule in Lutkins v. Leigh, (1734) Cas. t. Tal. 53, that the pecuniary legatee has priority over the devisee, although the devisee was under the will entitled as against a residuary legatee to have the mortgage debt paid off out of residue, applied, not having been expressly negatived by the testator, and that the devisees of the mortgaged property were not entitled to compete with the legatees.

M. had one daughter only, the plt., who attained twenty-one, and she was born in the lifetime of the testator:—

Held, that the proviso for re-settlement of the shares must be construed as applicable to each share separately; and that although it would have been void for remoteness in the case of daughters born after the death of the testator, it was valid in the case of the plt., and therefore she was only entitled to a life interest in the fund. In re RUSSELL. DORRELL v. He also directed his trustees to hold the residue of his estate upon trust for sale and investment, and to divide the income equally among his children during their lives, and on the death of any child, whether before or after his own death, to hold the corpus of such child's share in trust for any children of such child:—

Held, that the directions for the sale of the pits, and the division of the proceeds of sale were void for remoteness, and that the proceeds of sale fell into the residue:—

Held, also, that children of a daughter of testator, who died before the date of his will, were not included in the residuary gift.

Held, that notwithstanding the invalidity of the trust for sale, the legatees of the proceeds of sale were entitled to the benefits intended for them by the testator inasmuch as being ascertained within the limits of the rule they had the right in equity to elect to take the property as real estate. *In re DAVERON. A trust for sale cannot in equity convey real into personal estate unless it is valid and effective.

For the purposes of the rule against perpetuities there is no difference between a trust for sale and a power of sale where the sale is intended to be completed by a conveyance to the purchaser of the legal estate vested in the trustees.

A trust for sale contained in a will was void as infringing the rule against perpetuities, but the trusts of the property and the rents and profits until sale were good, and the interests of the beneficiaries did not fail:—

Where in a deed or will real and personal estate is limited to one for life, and upon his death on trust to divide it among certain persons with power or authority to the trustees to sell at such times as they shall think fit all or any of the estate for the purposes of the division:—

Held, that the power of sale was not void as infringing the law against perpetuities, but might be exercised within a reasonable time after the death of the tenant for life, and after the property has absolutely vested in possession, if on the construction of the instrument such appeared to be the settlor's or testator's intention. In re LORD SUDELEY AND BAINES AND CO.

166. — Remoteness—Splitting gift over—Absolute gift—Cutting down—Construction of will.

The question in this case was whether the testator had made alternative gifts over on the happening of two events, or a gift over in one event involving two things:—

Held, as a matter of construction, that the gift over could not be split so as to make it good in the event which had happened, and that it was, therefore, void for remoteness; that the gift was an absolute gift in the first instance, and that, the attempt to cut this gift down being void for remoteness the absolute gift remained.

death to pay 1000*l.* to her husband, if then living, and subject as aforesaid, as to capital and income, on trust for all the children of the daughter when they should attain twenty-five, but not before, and, if more than one, in equal shares, and in case there should not be "any such child" the fund was to form part of his residue. The testator declared that, until the 12,000*l.* should be invested, his trustees should pay to his daughter, or, in the event of her death, to her husband and children, interest on their respective portions. The testator also declared that his trustees might at their discretion raise any part or parts (not exceeding together one moiety) of the expectant share of any grandchild under his will, and apply the same for his or her advancement, &c. And the testator empowered his trustees to apply all or any part of the income arising from the expectant share of any grandchild under his will, after the death of the preceding owner for life thereof, for the maintenance and education of each such grandchild, and he directed his trustees to invest and accumulate the unapplied income in augmentation of the capital of such share.

By a codicil the testator directed his trustees to hold a moiety of the residue of his estate, real and personal, in trust to pay the income thereof to a son during his life; and after his death for his child or children absolutely upon their attaining twenty-five. And in the event of the death of either or all the son's children before attaining twenty-five, then upon trust to pay the share of the child or children so dying to another son absolutely:—

Held, that under the gift of the 12,000*l.*, and also under the gift of a moiety of the residue, the grandchildren took immediate vested interests, subject to their being divested in case they did not attain twenty-five, and that the trusts were not void for remoteness.

In considering whether a precatory trust is attached to any legacy the Court will be guided by the intention of the testator apparent in the will, and not by any particular words in which the wishes of the testator are expressed. A gift purporting to be absolute is not to be reduced to a life interest, and a precatory trust is not to be created merely by an expression of the testator's wish that the legatee shall by will or otherwise make a disposition which the legatee could equally effect through his beneficial ownership.

He devised to his granddaughter C. a like annuity of 300*l.*, to be a charge on the same property, “and to be paid to her and her children in the same manner in all respects as the annuity hereinbefore given to my granddaughter A.” By a codicil reciting that B. had by his will given an annuity of 300*l.* to each of the two granddaughters he revoked the gifts “of the said annuities,” and in lieu thereof gave to each of his said granddaughters A. and B. an annuity of 150*l.*, to be payable and charged in the same manner and on the same land as the annuities of 300*l.* under the will. The children of A. and B. were not referred to in the codicil:—

Held, that the effect of the codicil was to substitute annuities of 150*l.* to A. and B. and their respective children for the annuities of 300*l.* given by the will.

A testatrix in 1889 made a will, and in 1892 instructed her solicitor to prepare a codicil, which she took away with her, but never executed. Later in 1892 she executed a fresh will, prepared by a different solicitor, revoking the former will. In 1893 she executed a codicil, prepared by her original solicitor, who was in ignorance of the existence of the second will, and believed that the codicil to the first will had been duly executed; this codicil purported to be a second codicil to the will of 1889, and to confirm “my said will and the first codicil thereto”:—

After the passing of the National Debt (Conversion) Act, 1888 (51 & 52 Vict. c. 2), H. by a codicil reciting that subsequent to the making of his will the 3 per cent. annuities had been converted into 2½ per cent. Consols, bequeathed 15,000*l.* of such Consols on trust to apply the income in making the payments directed by his will for the benefit of his wife and other annual payments, and in all other respects confirmed his will. H. at his death held 15,000*l.* such Consols:—

Held, that the codicil did not revoke the legacy given to the charities by the will, and that under the first part of s. 25, sub-s. 2, of the Act there was on the death of the widow a good gift of 10,000*l.* 2½ per cent. Held, that, as the second and third wills both professed to deal with all the property of the testatrix, the second will was revoked by the third, that the general words of bequest in the third will did not revoke the execution of the limited power of appointment by the first will, and that probate should, therefore, be granted of the first and third wills.

Held, that, assuming both provisions were portions, the presumption against a father giving a double portion to one of his children was rebutted by the circumstances, the father intending that this son should have a greater share in the business than his brothers, and that he was entitled equally with them to the remaining nineteen shares:

A., who was then and still an infant, became entitled in 1882, and in 1893 he succeeded to the earldom :—

Although it has been held in many cases, of which Carey v. Carey, (1854) 6 Ir. Ch. Rep. 255, is an example, that a gift to A. or B. is substitutional, there is no authority for the broad proposition that such a gift is prima facie to be so construed.

A testator gave to trustees a fund to be called the "D. Charitable Trust," and directed the trustees to pay one-tenth of the income thereof to the P. A. Society, "or some one or more kindred institutions" having certain specified objects, and to divide the remainder of the income between such of the charitable institutions in London or the neighbourhood as they might select, and in such proportions as they might deem fit:—

Held, that the gift of the one-tenth was alternative and not substitutional; that it was a good charitable gift to one or more institutions of which the society named was a type; that the trustees had no discretion as to what institutions were to benefit under the gift of the one-tenth; and a scheme was directed to be settled. In re DELMAR CHARITABLE TRUST

D. 525, 535, where he classified the cases and said: "It seems to me that the decisions establish the following propositions: When the gift is to A., B., and C." [down to "gift over"]. For that there was ample authority, as there was also for the next proposition, beginning, "If to similar words," and ending "after their parent." But for the last proposition, "They also participate," down to "original shares," there seemed to be no authority, and it seemed as if the attention of Kay J. could not have been called to certain authorities inconsistent with that proposition although *Milsum v. The expression "testamentary expenses" includes the estate duty in respect of the personal property of which the testator or other person whose "testamentary expenses" are referred to was competent to dispose at his death.

A direction for the payment of "testamentary expenses" may extend to the expenses of administration under an intestacy.

his wife during her life; and after her decease he directed his trustees, after paying his widow's funeral and "testamentary expenses" and debts, to apply his residuary estate as therein mentioned. The testator's wife survived him, and signed a document which purported to be her will. After her death the plt. and her brother, who were in the same relationship to the widow and were her next of kin, disputed the will, and the brother brought an action in the Probate Division to have a grant of administration to the estate of the widow made to him. The Court pronounced against the alleged will, but made no order as to costs. Letters of administration to the widow's estate were subsequently granted to the plt. with the assent of her brother:—

Held, that the direction for payment of the "testamentary expenses" of the testator's widow extended to (1) the costs and expenses of the plt. in obtaining the letters of administration, and in connection with the administration of the estate of the widow; (2) the costs of the brother of the action in the Probate Division; and (3) the estate duty payable on the death of the widow in respect of her personal property. *In re CLEMON. 211. — Desk “with the contents thereof,” Gift of—Choses in action—Key of strong box—Intention of testator.

Held, that a gift of a desk “with the contents thereof,” included various choses in action, such as cheques, deposit notes, and promissory notes payable to order and on demand (including those which were negotiable only after indorsement by the executors), which were found in the desk, as well as bank notes and coin. In the desk was also the key of a tin box containing securities:—

Per Fry L.J., (1) “effects” per se will not include real estate; (2) the word “devise” is not enough to give to “effects” a more extended meaning; and (3) the words “of what nature, kind or quality whatsoever” are by themselves not enough.

215. — “Legal disability” preventing donee from taking the property for his own benefit.

A testator, subject to a life estate to his wife, gave half his residuary estate to his son; but in case the son should at the death of the wife be “under any legal disability in consequence whereof he would be hindered in or prevented from taking the same for his own personal and exclusive benefit,” the testator gave the same over to the son’s wife and children.

Shortly before the widow’s death the son, who was one of the executors, was found indebted to the estate in 5188*l.*, and an order was made directing him to pay that sum, and declaring his interest under the will liable to make it good. He had also heavily incumbered his interest:—

Held (affirming the decision of Stirling J.), that “legal disability” meant a disability of the person arising from act of law, and that neither the charge by the order nor the mortgages created such a legal disability as would cause the gift over to take effect.

The son on the day of his mother’s death, but before her death, was adjudicated bankrupt on his own application; but in a few days the adjudication was annulled on the ground that it ought never to have been made:—

Held (affirming the decision of Stirling J.,

In April, 1873, A. devised certain lands “now in my own occupation”; in Sept. he purchased certain adjoining lands; in Oct. he, by a codicil, confirmed his will:—

Held, that the lands purchased in Sept., being in the testator's occupation at the date of the codicil, passed under the devise. In re CHAMPION. DUDLEY v. CHAMPION C. A. [1893] 1 Ch. 101

218. — Occupied—“As now occupied by me”—Falsa demonstratio—Limitatio vera.

S. devised to his wife during widowhood “B. house and premises thereto, as now occupied by me.” Before the date of the devise S. had let to two of his sons an office in the yard of B. house and the coach-house and stables except a room over the coach-house, the only access to which was from the house. The sons were in occupation at his death:—

Held, that the devise included the room over the coach-house, but not the office, stables and coach-house, for the property in the testator's occupation answered the whole of the description, and therefore the Court could not enter into the question of inconvenience, and reject as falsa demonstratio the reference to occupation. *In re SEAL. discharged in his lifetime, should be paid out of such arrears and proportions:—

Held, by Kekewich J., that “the outgoings properly chargeable” included only those recoverable by process of law (such as rates, tithes, &c.) in respect of the lands out of which the rent came, and did not include agents' salary, costs of repairs or improvements, or workmen's wages:—

Held, by C. A., that they included all expenses due and unpaid at C.'s death which in his ordinary course of management would have come into charge against the arrears and proportions.

221. — “Representatives” — “Natural” — Children or their natural representatives if dead according to the statute rule of distribution — Widow of child.

A testator bequeathed the residue of his personal estate to trustees upon trust, in the events which happened, for two named unmarried daughters for their respective lives, if they should so long remain unmarried, and after the decease or marriage of either of them upon trust for the survivor for her life if she should so long remain unmarried. And after the decease or marriage of both his said daughters “upon trust to pay and divide the same unto and equally between and among all and every my children whether sons or daughters who shall then be living or their natural representatives if dead according to the statute rule of distribution, but so nevertheless that the representatives of such deceased child or children of mine shall take the share or respective shares only which such deceased child or children would have been entitled to if living.”

The survivor of the two named daughters having died, the fund became divisible. A son having died leaving a widow (his second wife) and children by his first wife, the trustees took out this summons to determine whether the widow was entitled to any share of the fund, which was claimed by the son's children:—

Held, that the primary meaning of “repre-

representatives," namely, "executors or administrators," was excluded by the word "natural," and the contrary had not been suggested. The question, therefore, was whether the expression "their"—i.e., the children's—"natural representatives if dead according to the statute rule of distribution," denoted all persons entitled under the statute, including the widow, or merely the persons called children's "representatives" in the statute, i.e., their lineal descendants. The word "natural" was the key of the problem. The expression "lawful and natural children" was not uncommon, but the expression "lawful and natural wife" was both uncommon and unintelligible. The status of a wife was contractual, that of a child natural and arising from consanguinity. The testator, therefore, clearly intended to use the word "representatives" in the statutory sense, i.e., lineal descendants of children. In this case the idea of consanguinity was predominant, and the widow was excluded. In re BROMBY. WILSON v. BROMBY Farwell J. [1900] W. N. 187
